NEW DEAL ENDS THIRD YEAR; 11 MONTHS TO GO

Path Is Marked by Court Upsets.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—The New Deal, virtually completed but now considerably battered by the Supreme court, will be three years old Wednesday.

On that day President Roosevelt will complete the first three years of his term of office, a period packed with more momentous events than any peace time triennium in our history. He then will have less than eleven months of his term to serve, for by virtue of the Norris amendment to the constitution the next presidential term will begin Jan. 20, 1937. As a red letter day March 4 passes into history.

The New Deal now faces two major hazards—the Supreme court and the presidential election next November. The President, as a candidate for another term, appeals to the people for a vote of confidence in the New Deal and the people will vote the New Deal up or down on Nov. 3.

Four Years to Tinker.

If Mr. Roosevelt shall be reëlected he will have a popular mandate to retain and extend the New Deal and to recover ground cut from under it by the decisions of the Supreme court. He will have four years in which to revise our system of government so as to validate the New Deal by constitutional amendment, by legislation to deprive the courts of the power to interpret the constitution, or by appointing New Dealers to the Supreme court to fill vacancies naturally occurring.

If Mr. Roosevelt shall be defeated the Republican President will consider himself commissioned to reduce expenditures radically, to balance the budget, to stabilize the currency, to withdraw the government from competition with private enterprise, and to scrap the collectivist undertakings of the New Deal.

For three years the President has been building the New Deal and during the last year endeavoring to rebuild to some extent the parts demolished by the Supreme court.

New Deal Pillars Razed.

Finding the two institutions unconstitutional the court razed the NRA and the AAA, twin pillars of the New Deal. The President after calling for remedial action finally abandoned the NRA. The AAA he is endeavoring to revive under the guise of federal subsidies to the farmers for soil conservation.

Out of nine cases in the Supreme court involving acts he had approved the President has won two and lost seven. He won the gold clause suits last spring and the TVA case within the last fortnight. In addition to the NRA and the AAA he has lost the suit involving the refund of AAA processing taxes, the "hot oil" case, the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium, railroad pension suits, and the cause involving his removal of William Humphrey from the trade commission.

In general the New Deal has sought to arrest the natural forces of liquidating of the depression by vast government loans to carry mortgaged farms and homes and to assist financially embarrassed railroads and other business enterprise, by goverment purchase of stock in banks and insurance companies, and by other employment of the financial resources of the government to cushion the impact of inflation.

Dollar Devalued.

It has taken the country off the gold standard, devalued the dollar, established an irredeemable paper monetary system, and undertaken to buy sufficient silver to constitute 25 per cent of the nation's monetary stock.

It has undertaken to redistribute wealth by private debts readjustment, by increased taxes on the rich, and by regulation of industry intended to increase the returns of wage earners and decrease the profits of employers. It has sought to readjust purchasing power by increasing the returns to farmers through subsidies, curtailment of production, and devaluation of the dollar. It has sought to prime the business pump by vast expenditures on public works.

It is endeavoring to force reduction

LANDON ASSAILS SPOILS POLITICS IN RELIEF WORK

Demands Waste of Funds Be Ended.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GOV. ALF M. LANDON. [Acme Photo.]

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas tonight assailed relief under the New Deal's alphabetical agencies as born in idealism but raised in the iniquity of spoils politics of a "shocking" type.

As the headliner of Nebraska Republicans in their celebration of Founders' day, the Kansan addressed an audience of 7,000 in the University of Nebraska coliseum. He declared that representative government under the New Deal has reached a most critical stage and that the American people will welcome a leadership that can save the nation from the "breakdown of popular government.

On the great problem of relief, he spoke of three years of experimentation with chaos the result. He said that the idealism on which the program started has been wrecked by "contradiction, confusion, and miserable party politics."

"An Indefensible Thing."

"When a national administration takes millions and millions paid in taxes by the American people to build a partisan political machine out of want and misery," said Gov. Landon, "that administration does an indefensible thing."

Shouts from the audience punctuated the governor's address as he swung into the topic of the monumental debt being piled up by the New Deal. The governor who balanced the Kansas state budget spoke of a balanced federal budget as the prime necessity of the times.

"A leaky engine cannot pick up speed," he said. "If we are overburdened by debt, we cannot go forward."

Referring to inflation he compared it to the drug habit.

"The first whiff of inflation is pleasant," he remarked, "but inflation grips nations as insidiously as drugs do individuals. The consequences are the same."

States "Short Circuited."

As to the manner in which New Deal centralization in Washington has worked havoc with constitutional principles of home rule, states' rights, and responsibilities, with a slice of easy money as the bait, the Kansan tersely remarked:

"State governments have been deliberately short circuited."

Original idealism and social justice at Washington have been knocked off their feet by political spoilsmen and "manhandling" of relief projects, the governor held, pointing his argument with the remark:

"Idealists may have been at the SOUP TO NUTS? HUH! WHY NOT HONEY ANTS TO MINCED CROW PIE?

Columbus, O., Feb. 29.—(AP)—A crow meat diet was pronounced fit for crow hunters today by Dr. Raymond C. Osburn, head of Ohio State university's department of zoölogy, but to satisfy truly exotic tastes in food, he submitted this menu:

Entree: Snails or honey ants.

Soup: Bird's nest or terrapin.

Dessert: Minced crow pie.

ALASKAN 'MERCY AVIATOR' SIGHTS MISSING BEAUTY

Miss Joyce, Juneau's entry in a "Miss Alaska" beauty contest here next month, had been unreported for many days on her 1,000 mile dog sled trip from Taku to Fairbanks.

Crosson's message said all apparently was well with Miss Joyce and that she had mushed out of Tetling and headed for Tanana Crossing, expecting to arrive their tomorrow. Crosson is flying a ski equipped plane from Loon Lake, Wash., to Fairbanks.

Nazis Send Jewish Doctor and Five Aids to Prison

BERLIN, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Dr. Max Kleinmann, a Jewish physician, was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary today after he was convicted of performing 59 illegal operations. Two male assistants received shorter sentences. One woman assistant, 70 years old, was sentenced to two years in prison and two other elderly women to one and two years respectively.

Mother of Nine Finds Baby Abandoned in Hall of Home

A boy baby about a month old was found abandoned last evening in the hallway of her home by Mrs. Theresa Nasi, 915 South Western avenue. The child was apparently healthy and dressed warmly. Mrs. Nasi, who has nine children of her own, including an infant two weeks' old, called the police and the foundling was taken to St. Vincent's orphanage.

Four Doctors Fight for Life of Babs Hutton

BULLETIN.

LONDON, March 1 (Sunday).—(AP)—Lord Horder reported today the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow had "a good night—gained a little strength." The physician emerged from the residence after a visit of nearly an hour and left for his country home in Hampshire, indicating the crisis in the Woolworth heiress' illness had passed.

LONDON, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Four physicians labored tonight to save the life of Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow, Woolworth heiress and one of the wealthiest women in the world.

She was reported to have survived two operations—a Cæsarian delivery of a son last Monday and another for the relief of an abdominal obstruction Thursday. It is known that previous to her confinement the countess suffered from anemia and was under treatment for this condition.

Tonight the physicians issued the following bulletin:

Four Doctors Present.

The doctors in attendance on the countess at her home were Lord Horder, physician-in-ordinary to King Edward of England; Dr. Cedric Sydney Lane-Roberts, noted gynecologist; Dr. James Slesinger, her personal physician, and an unidentified colleague of the latter.

Despite tonight's reassuring bulletin, physicians continued to come and go from the house up to 11 p. m. Lord Horder left, returned, and then went away again.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Hutton, the countess' father and stepmother, remained close by in case of need.

House Like Hospital.

The great house, which overlooks Hyde Park, resembled a hospital in some respects. Lights shone brightly through some of the upper windows, although most of them were dark. Cars were constantly arriving and departing, with callers and messengers going both to the front and tradesmen's doors.

While his mother went through her ordeal the baby was reported thriving in his germproof nursery on the top floor of the house. His guard against possible kidnapers is a stalwart "special agent."

SWISS CITIZEN BUYS SUIT IN GERMANY AND RETURNS MINUS PANTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LINDAU, Germany, Feb. 29.—Many citizens of Switzerland nowadays cross Lake Constance to buy clothing in German towns with cheap registered marks. On the return journey they dump their old clothes into the water and so lull the suspicions of Swiss customs officials.

One Swiss citizen suffered a misfortune today. In a dark corner of a lake steamer he discarded his old Swiss suit and flung two garments overboard. When he came to don his new German suit he discovered he had accidentally thrown both old and new pairs of trousers into the water and had kept two coats instead.

JOKER WHO POSED AS A SULTAN IS REPORTED DEAD

LONDON, Feb. 29.—(AP)—William Horace Devere Cole, 53, who boasted he had perpetrated ninety-five practical jokes throughout Europe without detection, is dead, dispatches from France stated today.

Posing as "the sultan of Zanzibar," Cole once deluded the authorities of Cambridge university into according him the official welcome due a visiting potentate.

Once, disguised as a road laborer, he roped off a large section of Piccadilly Circus, interfering with the heavy trafic of the section, and once as "the prince of Abyssinia" he inspected a British battleship.

Boy's Bullet Strikes Nail, Glances, Wounds Woman

Eugene Nielsen, 16 years old, hung a target on a nail yesterday in his father's bakery in the town of McHenry, McHenry county, and started practicing with his .22 caliber rifle. One bullet struck the nail, glanced through a window of the bakery and into an adjoining dress shop, where it struck Mrs. Kathryn Barbian, 63 years old, owner of the shop. She was taken to St. Therese's hospital in Waukegan, seriously wounded in the abdomen. Nielsen was arrested.

China Orders Suspension of 23 Anti-Jap Magazines

SHANGHAI, March 1—[Sunday.]—Reliable sources reported today the Chinese government has ordered suspension of 24 Chinese magazines which advocated a vigorous government policy toward Japan. Most of the publications, it was understood, were published in Shanghai.

60 Minutes of Sun Gained by Chicagoans

BY LLOYD WENDT.

Chicago is on permanent eastern standard time today for the first time in 53 years. The new time, one hour earlier than central time, which was imposed on Chicago by the railroads in 1883, is designed to give Chicago and its suburbs 365 more daylight hours a year. Prior to 1883 the city had a local time system similar to eastern time.

The change was made technically at 2 a. m. this morning, when the clock hands were pushed one hour ahead. Most persons, however, did this last night, arising to eastern standard time this morning.

Sunlight Saving Year Around.

The change is the same as that which has been made every year under the annual adoption of daylight saving time in the spring. Now, however, under the eastern time law passed by the city council on last Nov. 4 no further changes are to be made. The clocks will not be turned back in the fall.

Although the city ordinance simply prescribes eastern time for the city government, the entire population of the metropolitan area excepting Hammond has concurred in the change so far as can be discovered. The Chicago stockyards and radio station WLS, the latter one of the chief foes of the time change, have announced that they will remain on a central time basis.

New Suburban Train Runs.

The railroads, with the exception of the North Western line, are operating suburban trains on the new time, but they cannot make the change effective for through trains until permission is granted by the interstate commerce commission. The North Western's suburban trains will operate on central time, but their schedules, with which the public is concerned, are on an eastern time basis.

If you rose at 7:25 a. m. [E.S.T.] this morning you were just in time to see the sunrise. For 45 minutes prior to this, however, there was a period of twilight. The sun will not set tonight until 6:41 p. m. [E.S.T.], and there will be about 45 minutes of twilight after that.

The Benefits Are Many.

Today that extra hour of daylight in the afternoon will mean chiefly that you and your family will have that much more time to be out-of-doors. Tomorrow it will mean, in addition to the extra hour outside, if you so desire, that you will leave work while there is plenty of light and fewer hazards in the evening trafic rush. Your children will have an extra hour for play when they have left their school classrooms. You will use less light during the evening hours, turning the lights on an hour later.

Accumulative Benefits.

The obvious advantages of additional sunlight will continue to increase during the summer months. In the shorter days of December, January, and February there will be an extra hour of light in the afternoon—but you will compensate for this by

TOKIO REVOLT ENDS; LEADERS TAKE OWN LIVES

Peace Restored by Edict of Mikado.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, March 1.—[Sunday.]—With the surrender of all the mutineers and the suicide of some of their leaders, the most serious rebellion in Japanese history has come to an abrupt end as dramatically as it began at dawn last Wednesday.

Several of the young officers who headed the uprising, in which three high officials of the government were assassinated and which for nearly four days kept Tokio in a state of siege, chose an "honorable" way out of their difficulties. One unconfirmed report said 18 of the officers had ended their lives. Some of them were said to have shot themselves in the modern way instead of the traditional ceremonial fashion of hara-kiri—falling upon their swords. Among the suicides was Capt. Teruzo Ando, who shot himself at the Sanno hotel.

Premier "Returns from Grave."

The end of the revolt brought with it a fantastic story of escape from death, self-sacrifice, and heroism which rivals the most imaginative fiction. The story is that of the "return from the grave" of Premier Keisuke Okada, who was officially announced by the government to have been assassinated last Wednesday, and the death of his brother-in-law, Col. Denzo Matsuo, who fearlessly sacrificed his life by walking into the fire of the killers' guns.

Japanese newspapers have been forbidden to publish anything about this tragedy, and the full story is still an official secret. This much, however, has become known:

When the assassins rushed into the official residence of the prime minister Wednesday morning, Okada was hurried into hiding in an obscure portion of the house, believed to have been in the servants' quarters. Col. Matsuo, who bore a remarkable facial resemblance to his brother-in-law and was of about the same age and stature, walked out of the house to meet the revolting officers in the garden.

Shot Down in Snow.

In the dim morning light, he was mistaken for the premier and shot down in cold blood. The body was left lying in the snow all Wednesday and Wednesday night with a guard of rebel soldiers with fixed bayonets standing over it. No one was permitted to approach. The announcement that Okada had been killed was then officially announced.

On Thursday the body of Matsuo was removed to the private residence of Okada, where funeral services were held and floral wreaths and condolences for the premier's death accepted.

Where Okada was during all this time had not been revealed. Some reports say he was in hiding on the premises of the prime minister's residence. Other reports say he was spirited to the home of Takesuke Shirane, secretary of the cabinet. The secret of his escape, however, was well kept. Only Emperor Hirohito, surviving members of the cabinet, and immediate members of his family knew of his escape.

Apologizes to Mikado.

On Friday afternoon, the story goes, Okada appeared at the imperial palace, where he apologized with true Japanese courtesy to the mikado for the trouble he had caused and then offered his resignation. The emperor accepted the apology, but declined the resignation. Pending the restoration of order, however, he commanded former Home Minister Fumio Goto to act as temporary premier.

With the collapse of the uprising yesterday, Goto was relieved of his duties and Okada restored to his position at the helm of state. How long he will remain premier, however, seems problematical.

The end of the revolt was also dramatic. The mutineers, who numbered between 900 and 1,000, surrendered not as a result of the threat of force, but upon the command of the emperor, who is looked upon as a divine figure by all Japanese.

Early in the morning Lieut. Gen. Kohei Kashii, who had been commissioned by the emperor to suppress the revolt with the aid of martial law, made this announcement:

"Everything possible has been done to persuade the rebels to surrender. These measures having failed, the martial law headquarters is forced to adopt forcible measures against them. Consequently there may be fighting. All people are warned to stay within their own homes today."

The attack was not launched, however. Instead a plea was addressed to the rebels over the radio and in handbills dropped from airplanes and thrown from tanks which went into the danger zone. The name of Emperor Hirohito was invoked, warning the mutineers that it would be treason to disregard his orders.

"The emperor has issued a message to you. You believe the orders of your superiors are just and probably you are acting sincerely, according to the principle of absolute obedience," the appeal said.

Appeal 'Works Like Magic.'

"But his majesty now orders you to return to your division. If you resist, you disobey the imperial command and become rebels. You will become enemies of the nation and forever be punished. If you realize now that you are wrong, you should not continue to resist and leave names tainted forever. It is not too late for you to return to the flag of the loyal army. If you do this, your crimes will be forgiven. Your brothers and fathers, as well as the people of the entire nation, pray you will return to the army."

This worked like magic and a steady stream of troops filed out from the strongholds. Throughout the surrender there was no rioting or other untoward incidents. Today the city appeared to have returned to normal. It is expected that the financial situation will return to normal tomorrow, when all banks will open.

One aftermath of the uprising occurred today when many minor officials resigned. This is in accordance with the Japanese custom of officials accepting responsibility for untoward incidents. Among those who resigned were Kazou Oguri, chief of the metropolitan police board, whose force was expelled from its headquarters by the rebels, and parliamentary vice ministers of all ministries.

Nothing is heard of plans to punish the mutineers for the slaying of Korekiyo Takahashi, minister of finance, Viscount Makoto Saito, former premier and lord keeper of the privy seal, and Gen. Jotaro Watanabe, inspector general of the army.

Surrender of Rebels Described.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, Feb. 29.—When the Japanese army insurgents surrendered today they were disarmed and taken to their barracks as prisoners in army trucks guarded by armed soldiers wearing steel helmets.

The surrender of the rebels was accepted in stern silence. Each batch of insurgents marched to the government barricades and said: "We surrender." The officer in charge received their rifles and motioned them through a gap in the barricade. Disarmed, they walked single file through government troops standing rigidly, elbow to elbow, with bayonets fixed and magazines loaded.

They were assembled in groups of about a dozen each, packed in trucks, and taken to their barracks through heavily guarded streets. All the mutineers were inscrutable, evincing no emotion. If the prisoners felt humiliated, it did not appear in their stolid, unshaven faces. Their guards did not show any sign of triumph. The public feeling, which the army cannot help sharing, is deep humiliation.

U. S. TO HEAR BRITISH KING'S RADIO SPEECH TO HIS EMPIRE TODAY

LONDON, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Informed quarters said tonight King Edward VIII. of Great Britain would be primarily concerned tomorrow in his first broadcast since his accession to the throne, with the welfare and solidarity of the British empire.

This source, said the king, speaking on the eve of Great Britain's embarking on a gigantic defense program, was not expected to deal with international politics or armaments, although his speech might contain a reference to peace.

The broadcast will be at 4 p. m. [11 a. m. Chicago time], and will be carried to eleven nations—the United States, France, Poland, Austria, Hungary, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Denmark, Argentina, and Brazil.

King Edward's speech will be broadcast in the United States by two chains, National Broadcasting and Columbia Broadcasting, over a nationwide hookup. National Broadcasting will carry the speech from 11 to 11:30 a. m., Chicago time, and Columbia Broadcasting from 11 to 11:14 a. m. The local outlet for National Broadcasting is WMAQ and for Columbia, WBBM.

FARMERS REPORT CHINCH BUGS IN ILLINOIS FIELDS

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Chinch bugs have withstood the recent period of severe cold and ice. The bugs will constitute a crop menace this spring, farmers in this vicinity reported today. They said that an inspection of places where bugs hibernate has revealed a considerable number of the old insects have been revived by the mild weather of the last few days.

However, the bugs are not so noticeable numerically as they were in November. Many of the farmers burned hedge rows and other places of hibernation.

In conjunction with the presence of chinch bugs may be noted the activity of the few English starlings that escaped the winter starvation. Those birds are active in devouring chinch bugs as part of their winter diet when ground conditions permit.

Starlings in this section of Illinois suffered a high death rate, hundreds being found dead under trees. Other flocks roosted in barns and survived, getting sufficient bits of grain about feed lots to keep them alive.

ARCTIC HAS SO MUCH MAIL THEY CAN'T GET IT OUT

BARROW, Alaska, Feb. 29.—(AP)—There are only eight adult whites and 100 Eskimos here, but they have accumulated so much mail the dog team mail man cannot carry all of it when he leaves tomorrow for Kotzebue, 350 miles away.

It will be the first outgoing mail trip of 1936 and the contract driver is limited to 325 pounds—all his team can haul—of the 400 pounds awaiting delivery.

Barrow is the postoffice for the entire arctic slope, and fur traders from far to the eastward, across the Barren Lands, have dispatched their "catches" here to catch the dog team mail. What the dog sled leaves behind must wait until mid-July or August, when the arctic ice goes out and the first ship arrives.

From Kotzebue the dog mail will be sent on south via airplane or the first ship of the season.

BESIEGED AREA IN TOKIO DESCRIBED BY EYEWITNESS

Troops and Barbed Wire Hold Back Crowds.

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 29.—I have just come out from the barricaded zone around the Japanese diet building, which for nearly four days was held in a state of seige by army rebels. I was the only foreign correspondent permitted within this area after 8 o'clock this morning. Traveling in an automobile, I was permitted to travel from Shinagawa, at the southern end of the city, where all other cars were stopped.

At 9 o'clock pedestrians were still allowed to walk in the streets around Shinagawa, but no vehicles were permitted. At the Shiba bridge, half way between Shinagawa and Ginza, even pedestrians were stopped by policemen, gendarmes and reservists. From Shiba bridge northward the street was clear, with soldiers carrying bayonets at frequent intervals. At Shimbashi station large crowds coming from the east were stopped by barricades and soldiers.

Soldier Guards Hotel.

The area of about two square miles centering around the new diet was almost deserted. One or two policemen and reservists were stationed at the street corners, which, however, were barricaded except for a small section, barely enabling an automobile to pass. At Uchisaiwaicho, a block south of the Imperial hotel, the automobile was stopped, and I had to walk.

I passed in front of the hotel, which was guarded by a soldier carrying a bayonet. The guests within were not permitted to leave except on the most urgent business.

The Japan Times was not publishing. All buildings in this neighborhood were vacated last night. In front of the old diet building, which is about three blocks from the new diet, I was stopped and told I could not proceed farther. Overhead a plane was flying high, encircling the diet, and then it swooped down as if to drop a bomb.

Drop Leaflets to Soldiers.

I knew they were dropping leaflets to the rebels urging them to surrender, but I could not see anything.

Except for the droning of planes everything was silent. The troops outside, however, were tense and expecting orders to advance upon the mutineers momentarily.

As 11 o'clock approached I was ordered out of the area, passing in front of the Imperial hotel, all doors and windows of which were closed. Passing along the edge of the barricaded barb wired area I could see police and reservists pushing back the crowds, evidently to extend the area of no man's land. Shortly afterward the rebels began to surrender.

OUTER MONGOLIANS REJECT MANCHUKUO CHARGE OF INVASION

MOSCOW, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Dispatches from Ulan Bator, Outer Mongolia, reported today that that soviet-advised state had expressed its readiness to appoint delegates to a mixed commission which would investigate frontier incidents between Outer Mongolia and Manchukuo, sponsored by Japan. The Mongolian note was in reply to what was represented in Moscow as a virtual ultimatum from Manchukuo threatening resort to "freedom of action" in the border situation.

Outer Monoglic denied Manchukuo's charges that Mongolian troops had occupied a portion of Manchukuan territory on Feb. 12, when Mongolian and Manchukuan troops clashed with fatalities on both sides, the Ulan Bator dispatch said. Manchukuo had alleged that Mongolian troops occupied the Ulan Huduk region on the Manchukuan side of the frontier and had demanded their immediate retirement.

The Manchukuan note also reiterated a demand for diplomatic recognition of Manchukuo, which soviet sources said, the Mongolians had previously rejected.

CRACK RUSSIAN WORKMEN FALL VICTIMS TO FAME

MOSCOW, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Russia's Stakhanovites—the crack workmen who set the pace for the increased productivity of soviet labor—have fallen victims to the same difficulties which beset the newly-famous in capitalistic countries. The official press admitted this fact today with generous descriptions of the tribulations which have been added to the fame of the Stakhanovites.

A 17 year old Stakhanovite worker in a carburetor plant, Nikholai Kulyanoff, publicly complained that the requirements for his presence at balls and conferences keep him from his studies.

BULGARIAN ARMY COURT CONDEMNS 2 PLOTTERS TO DIE

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Feb. 29.—(AP)—A military court pronounced formal death sentences today on Col. Damyan Velcheff and Maj. Cyril Stantseff, revolutionists convicted of plotting the assassination of King Boris and fomenting a rebellion.

The Court of Appeals must act within seven days if it is to save the lives of the conspirators.

Velcheff and Stantseff were convicted Feb. 27 of participating in the unsuccessful plot to slay King Boris Oct. 3, 1935.

STUDENTS FIGHT PEIPING POLICE IN UNIVERSITY RIOT

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 29.—[Midnight.]—Tsinghua university at Peiping, which was established by Theodore Roosevelt for the purpose of training students for entrance into American universities and financed since 1908 by the Boxer indemnity remitted to China by the American treasury, today was the scene of a bloody fight between students and police.

There were many casualties. Three students were gravely injured. The students are still holding two policemen as hostages.

1,200 Students Fight Police.

The fight started when 400 police and gendarmes surrounded the dormitories and conducted a search for radicals, whereupon 1,200 students, including girls, attacked the police in a free for all fight. The battle lasted several hours. Ten police patrol wagons were overturned and damaged.

The police were guarding the campus gates at a late hour while students had cut all telephone wires leading into Peiping. The Tsinghau campus is 12 miles from the city.

Peiping police, reported to be acting on orders of the Japanese military authorities, also searched dormitories of the National university and arrested three persons. One of the arrested students was accused of having a picture of Karl Marx in his possession.

Members of Faculty Quit.

A week ago sixty-eight of the seventy-four members of the Tsinghua faculty resigned due to the refusal of students to comply with the orders of the Nanking government to discontinue their so-called patriotic anti-Japanese activities, resume their studies, and dissolve the student union. The student union is alleged to be dominated by communists.

The students charged that more than a thousand persons have been imprisoned for political crimes since the Japanese dominated autonomous government was formed, more than half of them being boy and girl students. They charged that civil and military jails are overflowing with prisoners.

HOLD DEATH UNEXPLAINED.

A verdict of undetermined death was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury in the case of Edwin J. Cady, 54 years old, 654 North Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, who swallowed poison in his home on Feb. 20.

JAPAN PLEDGES PACIFIC PEACE AS REVOLT DIES

Killers Called Misguided Patriots.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Imperial Japan's ambassador to the United States, Hirosi Saito, pledged tonight that "the peace of the Pacific would not be disturbed by the recent military uprising in Tokio."

Assailing militarists as "menaces to their country," the ambassador declared that should they gain control of his country's government, it would be a disaster for Japan. Optimistically, he added:

"That will never occur in Japan where happily there is enough common sense and true patriotism to cope with any difficult situation. It was on that score that she has succeeded in attaining her present state of progress as a nation.

Policies Unaltered.

"I can therefore definitly say that the recent event will not alter Japan's policies either internal or external, except that the statesmen responsible for government will have their sense of patriotic devotion quickened and will endeavor to exercise even more care in purifying politics.

"The peace of the Pacific will not only remain undisturbed but will become more securely established."

Recounting details of the uprising led by a group of young army officers who assassinated several of Japan's elder statesmen, Saito termed it a "terrible occurrence."

Finds Redeeming Factor.

"But there is a redeeming factor," he added. "The insurgent subalterns were all patriots, sincere in their motives and genuine in their loyalty; only they were misguided.

"In their youthful enthusiasm they believed that only by wiping out those 'evil elements surrounding the throne'—to use their own words—and by occasioning the establishment of a powerful cabinet could the difficulties ahead of the nation be successfully overcome.

"Rash and faulty reasoning, no doubt, but there were no selfish intentions. We feel thankful that among Japanese there are very few indeed, if at all, who are disloyal to the emperor and unpatriotic to the nation."

Argentina Pensions Two Daughters of Yrigoyen

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 29.—The government granted a monthly pension equivalent to $250 each to former President Hipolito Yrigoyen's two spinster daughters, Sara and Elena. Yrigoyen turned over his entire salary and expense allowances to charity during his two terms in the presidency. He died in poverty in a tiny flat July 4, 1933, after being ousted by a revolution.

30,000 LEFTISTS HAIL POLITICAL AMNESTY IN MADRID'S BULL RING

MADRID, Feb. 29.—(AP)—A crowd of 30,000 communists, Socialists and republicans attended a mass meeting in the Madrid bull ring today in celebration of the amnesty which freed 30,000 political prisoners after the left coalition parliamentary victory last week. With fists raised high in the air in the Socialist and communist salute, the throng sang both the communist internationale and the republican national anthem accompanied by the municipal band.

Two Fascists and one communist were seriously wounded in Seville where Fascists and communists clashed as political passions flared anew. Four Fascists were arrested. The governor of the province issued a warning that the government would not tolerate such clashes.

STEINWAY GRAND
$885
SEVERAL years ago Steinway & Sons recognized the need for a small grand piano of Steinway musical standard. Immediately Steinway laboratories went to work at this new problem thoroughly, scientifically, unhurriedly. . . . The result—the recently introduced model "S" Steinway—far exceeds anything Steinway & Sons, the music profession or the music-loving public had hoped for. . . .
After trying this new Piano, the celebrated pianist-composer Rudolph Ganz remarked, "It is astonishing to find that this smallest of Steinway Grands maintains Steinway quality throughout. It has an unusually lovely singing quality, while the benefit of Accelerated Action makes the entire keyboard a delightful playground for any ten fingers."
Trade in your present piano towards the New Steinway. Easy Payment Plan. New low prices on Steinway home and studio grands — model "M," $1045, and model "L," $1320.

CONGRESS FEARS TAX BOOST IN ELECTION YEAR

Look to Roosevelt for Solution of Plight.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Amid a welter of proposals for new taxes, none of which found general favor in a congress confronted by a general election, Democratic leaders today expressed doubt that anything like the 1 billion 137 million dollar revenue program suggested by President Roosevelt could be put through at this session.

For publication the senate and house leaders announced ruefully that they would do everything possible to carry out the President's program, but privately they were terror-stricken by the thought of a billion dollar tax.

The reason for this was advice from Lovell H. Parker, tax expert of the joint committee on internal revenue, that there were only two ways of raising anything like a billion dollars: broadening the income tax base or a general sales tax. The methods are equally unpopular.

Look for Suggestion.

The congressional leaders were hoping that the President's special tax message, expected Monday or Tuesday, would contain specified proposals as to the form of taxes he desires, but the White House still insisted that the method would be up to congress.

Lacking further information, the only proposal favored by the leaders was a tax on the undistributed profits of corporations. This scheme, first proposed at Thursday night's White House tax conference by Senator Alben W. Barkley [Dem., Ky.] was indorsed today by Speaker of the House Joseph W. Byrns, who estimated 3 billion dollars of such profits could be taxed.

But the President's suggestion of a billion dollar tax bill delighted Republicans and conservative Democrats as much as it terrified the Democratic leaders.

Eye Middle Class Incomes.

Senator Robert La Follette [Radical, Wis.] let it be known that he would renew his fight for a broader income tax base, tapping the little man and soaking the great middle class. In this fight he will be supported by conservative Democrats, notably Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, who said it was wholesome thing to let the people know that "they must pay for all this extravagance at Washington."

Senator Byrd, a member of the finance committee, also said he would press his bill to tax all new or refinancing federal bond issues and recalled Secretary Henry Morgenthau's statement that the treasury faces 11 billion dollars of such financing and refinancing in the next fiscal year.

"We are spending $13,000 a minute, day and night and including Sunday, and $7,000 a minute is being added to public debt," Senator Byrd declared. "All of that public debt provides a refuge for those who are most able to pay to escape taxation."

"Something Must be Done."

When asked whether the administration could afford to risk taxation of its securities, in view of the effect it might have upon the government's credit, Senator Byrd said he did not know, but that something must be done.

Parker, who was consulted yesterday and again today by the Democratic leaders, told them that they could not hope to raise a billion dollars a year or even the minimum of $786,000,000 demanded by the President by increasing the surtax rates on high incomes. Such taxes, he explained, already had reached the point of diminishing returns. A man with a million dollar income pays $740,000 to the government.

The La Follette amendment would lower exemptions to $800 for a single man and $2,000 for a married person, increase the normal tax from 4 to 6 per cent, and start the graduated surtax on net income of $4,000 instead of $6,000.

Senate Reverses Self.

The senate finance committee recommended this amendment last year, but later reversed itself and the amendment was overwhelmingly rejected by the senate. Proponents of the plan admit that it would be even more unpopular this year with an election in the offing.

The other revenue getting proposal, a general manufacturers' sales tax, would be just as unpopular, senators declare. Even this plan would fall far short of producing a billion dollars in revenue. Parker estimates that a sales tax of 2.25 per cent, with food, clothing, fuel, and medicine exempted, would produce only 400 million dollars.

The only specific form of taxation proposed by the President—processing taxes to finance the $500,000,000 "soil conservation" farm bounty program—is in reality a sales tax in disguise and members of congress are loath to go too far with it.

All these considerations led congressional leaders to admit, privately, that the chances of putting over a billion dollar tax bill are slim indeed and that a prolonged and tumultuous session is in the offing.

JAIL TERM BEHIND HER

Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue, left the county jail at midnight on completion of six months term resulting from malice count in suit over alienation of affections of Policeman Norman E. Nottingham. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

MRS. BLACKLIDGE ENDS SIX MONTH LOVE SUIT TERM

"Model Prisoner" Hunts Job to Pay $7,500.

The outer doors of the county jail swung open at 12:05 a. m. today and Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue in Chicago, walked out. She had finished a six months' term to which she was sentenced on a malice count after she had failed to pay Mrs. Suzanne Nottingham a $7,500 judgment based on the alienation of the affections of Policeman Norman E. Nottingham.

Mrs. Blacklidge was met outside the prison by her attorney, Eugene Meegan, and a man and a woman who did not disclose their identities. She announced that she would go to Indianapolis to reside temporarily with her niece, Miss Mary Jane Campbell. She added that she did not expect to see Nottingham, who was referred to during the trial of the alienation suit as "Dear Denny."

Now to Pay That $7,500.

"I do not want to cause unhappiness to any one," said the former collector. "All I want to do now is to get a job and try to pay off that judgment. I have had several offers of work, but haven't accepted one yet."

Mrs. Blacklidge appeared to have thrived on the jail fare and was neatly, even stylishly garbed. She wore a brown fur coat, a brown dress, and a brown hat. Warden Frank Sain and a number of guards wished her luck as she left. She had been known during her stay in the jail as a model prisoner.

Mrs. Nottingham, in her south side home, said she didn't think it wise to make public her plans for pressing collection of the judgment.

"I want to get something for losing my husband, if I have lost him—that is something nobody can tell," said the wife, who is receiving $70 from Nottingham's police pay as separate maintenance each month. She said she had seen Nottingham frequently, "but so has Mrs. Blacklidge."

Few Words of Praise.

"She knitted him a blue sweater in jail and I give her credit, it was a nice one," conceded Mrs. Nottingham. "I never did care about the money or what happened to her. All I cared about was not losing my husband or else showing her she couldn't get away with him."

Nottingham was silent. He lives at 8125 Cottage Grove avenue in what was Mrs. Blacklidge's apartment before she went to jail.

Mrs. Blacklidge was convicted of the alienation charge in January, 1934. She served a week of the term shortly afterward and then was released while her attorneys appealed her case in state and federal courts. In April, 1935, she went back to jail and served three more weeks. Her attorneys succeeded in freeing her on bond, but she was remanded to jail on Oct. 3 to finish her term.

Winter Sets One New Record and Barely Misses Several

In the wake of three record shattering winter months, Forecaster C. A. Donnel predicted March would emerge on the weather scene today with the frisky characteristics of a lamb rather than the roar of a lion. The temperature today, said Mr. Donnel, will be a bit nippy, but by tomorrow the mercury should rise substantially.

The winter of 1935-'36 goes on the books as the fourth coldest in Chicago weather bureau history. It missed breaking the all-time cold record by having abnormally warm weather from Feb. 23 to 27.

During the three winter months—December, January and February—the mean temperature was 19.8 degrees. This was far below normal, but Chicago has experienced three colder winters: 1903-'04, with a mean temperature of 18.8 degrees; 1892-'93, mean of 19.4, and 1917-'18, mean of 19.6.

"If normally cool temperatures had prevailed this week," said Mr. Donnel, "this winter would have been at least the second coldest on record, and this month would have been the coldest February on record instead of the second coldest. As it is, the mean temperature of 15.2 degrees for this month's 29 days was higher than the record of 14.7 degrees in February, 1875."

The outstanding feature of this winter, Mr. Donnel pointed out, was the phenomenal 35 day cold spell from Jan. 19 to Feb. 22, inclusive, which was easily the most severe in history. In that period the mean temperature averaged 6.7 degrees. The thirty days from Jan. 22 to Feb. 20, when the mercury averaged 5.1 degrees, were colder by 5.4 degrees than the precious coldest calendar month on record, January of 1913.

Another record was equaled in the number of days—25—on which the temperature was zero or lower during the three months. This total tied the mark set in 1874-'75 and reached again in 1884-'85. The lowest readings of the winter, 17 below on Jan. 22 and 23, "fell high" of the all-time mark, 23 below, on Dec. 24, 1872.

WOMAN CHANGES MIND IN FLOOD RESCUE SEQUEL

Rescued Friday from a garage where he took refuge when flood waters of the Kankakee river marooned him for three days in a summer colony ten miles southwest of Joliet, Otto Studer, 55 years old, a caretaker, was recovering from exposure.

A searching party reached Studer after he started for shore over frozen ice hummocks. His rescuers took him first to the nearby home of Mrs. George Nail, 65 years old.

Because of the rising water, Mrs. Nail was warned to leave her home, but refused. Last night she took refuge in a barn on her property, and today another rescue party will attempt to reach her by rowboat.

AUTO THIEF GIVES POLICE A CHASE AND BULLETS FLY

Sergts. Joseph Ponicki and Edward Kennedy of the Racine avenue police station had a difficult time last night arresting Robert Schultz, 42 years old, of Milwaukee, after they saw him riding in a stolen automobile at Noble and Division streets. They first forced the fugitive to the curb at Ashland avenue and Division street, but when Ponicki stepped out of the police car to question him Schultz started his engine, knocked the policeman down with the car, and drove away.

The chase was taken up again and a number of shots were fired before he surrendered at Lincoln avenue and Division street. At the police station Schultz admitted that he once served a term in Waupun, Wis., prison and that he had taken the car at Ohio and Dearborn streets.

PRESIDENT PUTS O. K. ON REVISED NEUTRALITY LAW

Italo-Ethiopian Embargo Order Renewed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—With a few strokes of his pen, President Roosevelt this afternoon gave a new lease of life to the law designed to keep the United States out of war. He signed the revised neutrality bill extending the present act, which was to have lapsed at midnight, until May 1, 1937.

Renews Embargo Order.

At the same time the President issued a new embargo proclamation against Italy and Ethiopia. That order embraces the changes due to the new act. He expressed regret that the new act does not restrict exports of essential war material and renewed his appeal that trade with belligerents be so conducted that Americans cannot be said to be aiding continuation of the East African war.

In a formal statement on the signing Mr. Roosevelt said the old act was a definite step toward enabling this country "to maintain its neutrality and avoid being drawn into wars involving other nations." The new act, he said, strengthens as well as renews the old act.

Fixes Foreign Policy.

"The policies announced by the secretary of state and myself at the time of and subsequent to the issuance of the original proclamation will be maintained in effect," he added. "It is true that the high moral duty I have urged on our people of restricting their exports of essential war material to either belligerent to approximately the normal peace time basis has not been the subject of legislation.

"Nevertheless, it is clear to me that greatly to exceed that basis, with the result of earning profits not possible during peace, and especially with the result of giving actual assistance to the carrying on of war, would serve to magnify the very evil of war we seek to prevent.

Renews Former Appeal.

"This being my view, I renew the appeal made last October to the American people that they so conduct their trade with belligerent nations that it cannot be said that they are seizing new opportunities for profit or that by changing their peace time trade they give aid to the continuation of war."

The new act differs from the one it replaces in two respects because of house amendments adopted by the senate. The senate sped the bill to the White House on Feb. 18 without adopting a single one of the amendments proposed by munitions investigation committee.

The most important amendment made unlawful the selling of bonds or securities of any nation considered as a belligerent under the act in this country. Under the Johnson act, passed two years ago, it already is unlawful to sell the securities of any nation in default on its indebtedness to the United States.

The President is given discretion under the new neutrality law, however, to exempt from the operations of the law ordinary commercial credits and short time obligations "of a character customarily used in normal peace time commercial transactions."

Another addition to the expiring act is the provision that the act shall not apply to an American republic [in North or South America] engaged in war against a non-American state or states. This provision applies only if the American republic is not coöperating with non-American states in such a war.

Provisions continued from the expiring act are:

An absolute mandatory embargo on arms, ammunition, and implements of war must be proclaimed by the President upon the outbreak of a war abroad.

American vessels are forbidden to transport arms, ammunition, or implements of war to belligerents.

The President may remove protection of this government from American citizens traveling on belligerent vessels, thus imposing a "travel at your own risk" policy.

Mussolini on Skids, Faces Ouster, Fascist Leader Says

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 29.—Premier Mussolini is regarded today as a "giant with feet of clay" by his own Fascist party, which is openly discussing the question of his successor, according to statements made to THE TRIBUNE correspondent today by a prominent Fascist veteran of the famous march on Rome.

The informant denounced Il Duce's contention that Italy will go communist if he falls as a "bluff to frighten foreign powers." He affirmed that Fascism itself will eliminate Mussolini and the Fascist régime will survive under a new leader. The question of who this new leader will be has thrown Fascist circles into feverish agitation and loosed a flood of intrigues and rumors.

Position Undermined at Base.

"Il Duce's position is undermined at the base," the informant said. "He is now making desperate efforts to save himself by an outstanding military or political success—a smashing victory in Ethiopia or a sensational alliance with Germany. But Fascists generally realize that even with the conquest of Ethiopia Italy will be left exhausted and isolated.

"Following Mussolini's fatal speech at Pontinia, in which he attacked Great Britain and wrecked the Hoare-Laval peace plan, I have heard noted Fascists call him a madman.

"This god has been found to be a man like other men, a man who can be replaced. Italy has plenty of leaders capable of replacing Mussolini. Judged on personal merits alone Luigi Federzoni, president of the senate, and Dino Grandi, ambassador to London, seem the most qualified. But Federzoni's strong monarchist leanings tend to alarm the left wing of the Fascist party, which still clings to revolutionary traditions.

Other Candidates Mentioned.

"Grandi enjoys great prestige at present because of his foresight in warning Mussolini of Britain's hostile reactions to the Ethiopian venture. The fact that Mussolini ignored the warning harmed him more in his own party than any other mistakes, for all Italians feel they cannot in the long run afford to antagonize England.

"Another possible successor is Giuseppe Bottai, governor of Rome. Bottai owes entirely to Fascism his position, which formerly was given only to princes and nobles. He is the son of a small innkeeper, but has acquired a great deal of culture and is very popular."

However, Mussolini's most serious rival, according to THE TRIBUNE'S informant, is still Marshal Italo Balbo, leader of the famous trans-Atlantic flight to Chicago, who Il Duce practically exiled to Libya, in Africa, in order to prevent him from acquiring fresh laurels on the Ethiopian front.

Calls Balbo Real Leader.

"Balbo is a real leader of men, courageous and ambitious," the informant said. "Although he obeyed the order to go to Libya as governor, he is taking good care to let everybody know he is still in the running.

"Punctually once a week Balbo arrives by plane from Africa and alights at the Centocell flying field, just to show he can be in Rome whenever he pleases. About four months ago his flight to Paris aroused much comment. It was said Mussolini had entrusted him with a special mission. As a matter of fact, the trip was undertaken entirely on his own initiative. It was simply notice to all whom it might concern that Balbo goes wherever he likes.

"The only serious objection to Balbo in Fascist circles is that he was a republican and friend of Freemasons. Otherwise his record is unrivalled, for he is one of four Fascist chiefs—Mussolini not among them—who decided upon the march on Rome."

Ciano's Chances Called Nil.

Reports that Il Duce's successor would be his son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, aviation officer and propaganda chief, were qualified by the informer as follows:

"It is true that il duce's personal henchmen, if forced to get rid of him, would like to install Ciano, but the plan has no chance for success. Ciano is heartily disliked by a majority of Fascists, who are bitterly jealous of the sudden elevation of the cub reporter, who was made an embassy secretary, undersecretary of state, and flight commander merely because he married il duce's daughter.

"The publicity attending Ciano's alleged military exploits in Ethiopia has aroused much criticism. The count is openly accused of cowardice by many Fascists, who charge he is leading an easy life hundreds of miles behind the front."

ITALIANS SMASH AT ETHIOPIANS IN NORTHERN HILLS

Fierce Battle Raging in Tembien Sector.

ROME, Feb. 29.—(AP)—While Fascist troops occupied Amba Alaji, erasing the sting of a bitter defeat of 40 years ago, Italian soldiers and Ethiopian warriors of Ras Kassa clashed today in the mountainous Tembien section of the northern front.

Reports of the battle came to Rome from Marshal Pietro Badoglio, head of Benito Mussolini's Ethiopian army. His communique read:

"While troops of the first army corps reached Amba Alaji, troops of the third army corps and those of the Eritrean army corps attacked from the north and south the forces of Ras Kassa.

Ethiopians Taken by Surprise.

Amba Alaji fell before the invading forces with virtually no defense, according to Italian reports. The retreating Ethiopian soldiers were taken by surprise in a stronghold they had considered invincible.

[Ethiopian officials said they knew nothing of the fall of Amba Alaji, as reported by the Italians. An official communique in Addis Ababa was confined to announcement that a revolt in northwestern Gojjam province had been suppressed.]

Occupation of Amba Alaji was regarded by Italy as a double triumph. It marked completion of a "deadline" against the enemy and the elements. The Black Shirt army is striving to accelerate its advance before the rainy season.

Italy Celebrates Victory.

Too, the victory closed a long-open wound, avenging a disastrous defeat inflicted by the Ethiopians during the Italian punitive expedition of 1895. Amba Alaji marked the southernmost point reached by the invaders then, and there the Ethiopians overwhelmed them with the loss of 2,000 Italian soldiers.

In celebration of the taking of Amba Alaji, Premier Mussolini extended the Fascist salute to students concentrated in the Piazza Venezia here. Italy enthusiastically greeted the reports of a sad chapter in its history being rewritten and reversed.

RECALL MASSACRE.

In contrast to the present position of the Italian soldiers, forty years ago they met their most crushing defeat of the first attempt to conquer Ethiopia.

Against orders of his superiors, Gen. Baratieri moved into Adowa with 14,000 men. Ethiopian hordes of King Menelik swarmed upon them.

The Italians, outnumbered seven to one, were shot down from above. The Ethiopians closed in on them from higher positions. The Italians held their ground and were annihilated.

Italy never forgot Adowa. The tragedy found its way into the songs of children on the streets of Rome. And last October the songs changed to pæans of triumph when Gen. Emilio de Bono marched into the city and took possession of it.

1 SLAIN, 5 WOUNDED AS DAMASCUS POLICE FIGHT NATIONALISTS

DAMASCUS, Syria, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Nationalist proponents and police clashed today in a street fight in which one person was killed and five wounded.

The clash occurred after 10,000 Damascans voted to continue a forty day strike, initiated in an effort to force France, which holds a mandate over Syria, to make definite promises of independence.

The fighting broke out when the strikers, leaving Omayad mosque, where their meeting was held, refused to march in double file as the police ordered. Many refused to join the column and others remained inside the mosque, which was surrounded by soldiers.

HOFFMAN PLANS STATE INQUIRY ON HAUPTMANN

May Ask Legislature to Quiz Wilentz.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Gov. Hoffman, it is said, plans to ask the New Jersey legislature to make a detailed investigation of the handling of the Lindbergh kidnaping case by both the state police and the state's attorney's office.

Attorney General Wilentz' aids are understood to be preparing a defense against such a move. Such an inquiry would be the governor's last resort in an effort to avoid responsibility for the furor raised over his attempts to discredit the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted of kidnaping and killing Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

The governor is known to oppose the reappointment of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf as superintendent of the state police.

Feud Becomes Clearer.

This feud became more open today with an interchange of letters that was made public. Col. Schwarzkopf, reporting, as ordered to do by the governor when the case was reopened Jan. 26, said some of his men had been approached with "threats and promises" by a man claiming to be an agent of the governor's. The state police chief added daily conferences of police and prosecutors did not produce new evidence.

To that the governor replied, saying he had no further interest in Schwarzkopf's conferences. Hoffman described the case, under Schwarzkopf's direction, "the most bungled case in police history."

The Schwarzkopf letter, dated Feb. 28, after mentioning the conferences, said:

"It has come to our attention that persons representing themselves as your agents or representatives are approaching members of the state police with promises and threats. I feel it is my duty to bring this to your attention."

Cast Light on Quiz.

Today it was found the governor's agents approached Capt. Henry Wogge, formerly head of the state police detective bureau; Sergt. John Wallace, Corporal William F. Horn, Troopers Frank Kelly, and Lewis J. Bornmann.

The rôles of those men in the original investigation were:

Capt. Wogge received reports of all detectives.

Sergt. Wallace and Corporal Horn both were present when samples of Hauptmann's handwriting were taken by the police.

Trooper Kelly at the time of the crime made all the photographs and processed objects for finger prints on the night of the kidnaping.

Puts Chief on Grill.

Governor Hoffman's letter to Schwarzkopf dated today, after mentioning the conferences, said:

"Had sound and ordinary police methods been used following the commission of the crime many doubts entertained today might have been eliminated. . . . The Lindbergh matter quite generally is referred to as 'the most bungled case in police history.' . . .

"The third paragraph of your letter reveals that you have learned of an incident that occurred a month ago when your 'finger print expert,' Frank Kelly, was contacted by a representative of mine. This was done at my direction—although I have no knowledge of 'threats or promises'—for the purpose of securing certain information that I believed to be important and involving an activity of which I am quite sure Kelly has not advised you."

CHANGES DRAWN TO PLUG TRAFIC LAW LOOPHOLES

Two proposed ordinances designed to bolster Chicago's trafic safety campaign have been drafted by the city council's trafic committee and are to be introduced at the council meeting tomorrow, Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th], vice chairman of the committee, said yesterday.

The first proposal, which would amend the city uniform trafic code, would provide that "Trafic Violator" stickers be pasted on windshields of automobiles whose drivers were convicted of minor violations. The second would compel the city controler to keep a record of the issuance of trafic tickets and collection of fines.

To provide the controler with a copy of each ticket issued, four copies would be made out instead of three, as at present, Lindell explained. The controler then could demand from the police department an accounting of each ticket, treating the fines much as in the same manner as other funds due the city.

Ald. Lindell stated that he will also ask the council to order the committee on judiciary to prepare an ordinance requiring all persons convicted of felonies in the last ten years to register with the police department, providing a penalty of $500 or six months' imprisonment, or both.

A three months' safety contest for Chicago park district policemen, starting today, was announced yesterday by Otto K. Jelinek, park trafic engineer. The contest, conducted in cooperation with Mayor Kelly's "Keep Chicago Safe" movement, is designed to reduce accidents and create a better understanding between the public and park policemen, Mr. Jelinek said.

LAUNCH INQUIRY INTO BEATING OF SUBURBAN EDITOR

County Officials Act in Chicago Heights Case.

Vigorous prosecution was promised yesterday against Bud Nardi, Chicago Heights saloonkeeper, who on Friday showed his resentment over an article in the South Suburban News by slugging the editor, Kevin McCann of Midlothian. First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley assigned Assistant State's Attorney Henry Zadic to appear against Nardi when the case is called on Wednesday before Justice of the Peace Conrad Linder in Chicago Heights.

Mr. Crowley said his office would also investigate the gambling charge against Nardi which was the subject of the news item that provoked the assault on the editor. Nardi was arrested Feb. 12 on a charge of conducting gambling in the rear of his saloon, but the case was dropped.

Charges Three Way Split.

Editor McCann, who has been opposing the city administration of Chicago Heights, asserted that gambling revenue was split three ways in the suburb. His paper, a weekly, was started a few weeks ago and has been circulated without charge.

Prosecutor Crowley said his office would pay particular attention to Nardi in the future. After the saloonkeeper's arrest on Feb. 13 Chief Lester Laird of the county highway police ordered Lieut. Henry Andel, head of the county police station at Homewood, to prevent gambling at Nardi's saloon.

Eyes on Chicago Heights.

One result of Nardi's attack on the editor was to focus the attention of the county authorities of the City of Chicago Heights. Both Crowley and Laird said they would order strict supervision of all suspected places in that locality.

McCann said he would continue his exposure of conditions in the suburb. He was given the protection of the county highway police.

Repeating Trafic Offender Sent to Jail for 10 Days

Walter Kowalski, 50 years old, 1200 Wesley avenue, Evanston, was sentenced yesterday to 10 days in the county jail for driving while intoxicated, by Municipal Judge Eugene L. McGarry who rejected a plea for probation after learning that Kowalski had a record for reckless driving. Last Oct. 12 Kowalski was arrested in Western avenue near Belmont while careening down the street striking parked cars. Kowalski gained numerous continuances before pleading guilty and asking for probation.

OPEN FOUR FIRST AID STATIONS ON COOK HIGHWAYS

Four highway emergency first aid stations were opened in Cook county yesterday as the first of fifty to be established in Cook, DuPage, and Lake counties under the "safety on the highways" program of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross.

Three of the stations, in all of which first aid treatment will be administered by volunteer workers trained and equipped by the Red Cross, are in highway police stations.

These are at district No. 1 headquarters in Morton Grove at Milwaukee avenue and Ballard road; at district No. 2 in Willow Springs at Archer avenue and Kean road, and in district No. 3 at Homewood at 177th street and Dixie highway. The fourth is in a service station at the junction of the Governor and Lincoln highways four miles west of Chicago Heights.

The four stations are manned by an emergency force of 60 deputies, all trained in Red Cross first aid.

BOY, 8, RUN DOWN BY AUTO ON WAY TO CHURCH, DIES

Carl Kramer, 8 years old, 2419 West 63d street, died last night in Holy Cross hospital from injuries incurred Friday night when he and a playmate were run over by an automobile while on their way to attend lenten services.

The accident happened while the boys were crossing 63d street near Washtenaw avenue. Francis O'Toole, 8 years old, 6326 South Artesian avenue, Carl's companion, was less seriously injured. The automobile was driven by Adolph Thomman, 21 years old, 2400 West 81st place, who told police the boys apparently did not see his car coming.

Samuel Wingardt, 24 years old, 1245 South Miller avenue, died yesterday at Lafayette, Ind., of injuries he received Friday night when a truck and trailer of the Interstate Metal Products company was wrecked at Fowler, Ind.

A slight decrease in the number of auto deaths in Cook county during February as compared to the previous month was noted yesterday by Coroner Frank Walsh, whose records showed 70 deaths in February and 88 in January, a total of 158.

There were 142 deaths during the first two months of last year. In the first two months of this year 135 have been killed and 2,292 injured in trafic accidents within the Chicago city limits.

Three policemen of the Albany Park station were injured last night when the squad car in which they were hurrying to answer a burglar alarm at 3247 Lawrence avenue collided with a truck at Addison street and Pulaski road. They are Sidney Karofsky, 30 years old, 1356 South Avers avenue; John Braton, 36 years old, 3625 North Menard avenue, and Walter Anderson, 40 years old, 3717 Elston avenue. The driver of the truck, Carl Urbach, 3604 North Crawford avenue, was arrested.

NEW DEAL ENDS THIRD YEAR; HAS 11 MONTHS LEFT

Path Marked by Upsets in High Court.

of electric power rates by the competition of government financed utilities. It has put the government into numerous other enterprises of "production for use, not for profit," a prime tenet of socialism. It is engaged in redistributing population by government resettlement ventures in the name of relief and the achievement of the "more abundant life."

In Name of Security.

In the name of "social security" it has established an ambitious system of old age pensions and unemployment insurance financed by new taxes on industry. It has brought stock trading and the issuance of securities and also the telegraph, telephones, and all other means of communication under strict government supervision. It has established rigorous regulation of public utilities and proscribed holding companies to a certain extent. It has revised the banking laws and reorganized the federal reserve system under government domination.

It has created a court to promote and enforce collective labor bargaining in industry and regimented coal mining in such manner as to increase wages and prices. In general the Supreme court has invalidated New Deal legislation because it exceeded the delegated powers of the federal government and invaded the jurisdiction of the states, because it conferred legislative or other extra-constitutional power upon the executive, because it tended to set up a federal dictatorship over the occupational and other activities of the citizen.

The autocratic tendencies of Mr. Roosevelt incurred a rebuke from the court in the case of the late Trade Commissioner Humphrey whom the President had summarily removed in order to replace him with an appointee sharing the Roosevelt view of public questions.

Status After Three Years.

As Mr. Roosevelt reaches the third milestone of his course he sees the country recovering from the depression, although whether it be due to the measures of the New Deal or to the operation of national forces despite the New Deal is a question of controversy.

If the progress of recovery be measured by the reduction of unemployment it appears that about three million persons have been reabsorbed into private industry in the three years. The most conservative estimate is that there are now nine millions unemployed, compared with twelve millions in 1933. It is estimated that only about two millions more can be absorbed by industry by the time the 1929 volume of production is restored.

During the greater part of the triennium there were approximately twenty million persons on the federal relief rolls. Since the national government returned unemployables to state support the number on federal relief has declined to about sixteen millions.

When Mr. Roosevelt took office there were four and a half million families on relief. The number declined to two and a half millions by January, 1934, and then started climbing again until it reached the peak of four million 600 thousand families in January, 1935. From that time to date the number has declined until it stood at two million 800 thousand families last November.

Cost Over Eight Billions.

The aggregate cost of relief under the Roosevelt administration exceeds eight billion dollars. According to the official figures the cost of ordinary relief and CWA combined was four and a half billions from March, 1933, to Dec. 1, 1935, by which time the administration was beginning to expend the four billion 800 million dollar work relief fund. With allowance made for duplications of items in the transfer from the old to the new relief program the cost is well over eight billions.

The President has allotted four billion 480 millions of the work relief fund on public works and other projects and reports two million 484 thousand persons employed thereon. With half a million in the CCC and a quarter million in other agencies the work relief program accounts for three million 284 thousand persons. For the next fiscal year not less than two billion dollars more will be required for relief. According to the New Dealers, it is going to be necessary to care for about five million persons permanently on relief even after the recovery of prosperity.

Purpose to Prime Pump.

A major purpose of the vast work relief program was to prime the business pump through the requirement of manufactured materials. But when the President got the fund and got to figuring he realized that the proportion of the fund allotted to purchase of materials must be held to a minimum in order to furnish wages for three and a half million persons. As a result highway construction became the chief undertaking and numerous projects of the boondoggling sort requiring little or no material were embarked upon.

Another experiment in pump priming is the PWA on which three and a half billions are being expended. The peak of employment on PWA projects was 675,000 persons in July, 1934. Last month the number was 281,000.

Since March 4, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt actually has expended more than nineteen billion dollars. Exclusive of ordinary expenditures of the government the cost of the New Deal is well over ten billions up to date, with a further expenditure of more than five billions provided for.

Expenditures Compared.

In three years Mr. Roosevelt has expended three billions more than did Mr. Hoover in four years. The comparative figures [in millions of dollars] follow:

HOOVER PERIOD.

	Receipts.	Exp'ditures.
March 4, 1929, to June 30, 1929	$ 1,828.2	$ 1,151.3
Fiscal year 1930	4,177.9	3,440.3
Fiscal year 1931	3,189.6	3,651.5
Fiscal year 1932	2,005.7	4,741.0
July 1, 1932, to March 3, 1933	1,272.1	2,981.2
Total	$12,473.5	$15,965.3

ROOSEVELT PERIOD.

	Receipts.	Exp'ditures.
Fiscal year 1934	3,115.6	6,745.2
Fiscal year 1935	3,800.5	6,802.2
July 1, 1935, to Jan. 31, 1936	2,130.0	3,902.5
Total	$ 9,853.7	$19,150.1

To finance the vast expenditures of the New Deal the Roosevelt administration has increased taxes more than 1 billion dollars a year and borrowed more than 9½ billions on the credit of the government.

The gross public debt on March 4, 1933, was $20,938,088,781. On Feb. 21, last, it was $30,504,997,091. The aggregate deficit of the Roosevelt administration to date is $9,568,038,306.

The new taxes imposed under the Roosevelt regime will yield nearly 2 billion dollars annually beginning July 1, next, but of this amount 500 millions are accounted for by the excise on liquor following repeal of prohibition and 120 millions by financing the bonus passed over the President's veto. The tax bill for the New Deal, therefore, may be roughly stated as more than 1 billion a year.

The tax boost has been held down because neither the President nor the Democratic congress considers it safe to impose before the approaching presidential election even a fraction of the taxes that will be required eventually to foot the bill for the New Deal. After the election will come the reckoning.

New Deal Taxation.

The new taxes voted and projected since Mr. Roosevelt took office together with the yield of each by fiscal years follow:

1935.
Processing taxes	$ 526,222,000
Liquor	411,021,000
Capital stock	91,508,000
Excess profits	6,650,000
Total	$1,035,311,000

Farm subsidy	524,000,000
Liquor	554,800,000
Total	$1,967,900,000

Mr. Roosevelt's deficit financing and the inflow of gold from abroad have resulted in increasing the excess reserves of the federal reserve system to more than 3 billion dollars, affording the basis for a credit expansion of 30 billion dollars.

Credit Is Inflated.

Because of the Roosevelt fiscal policies the country already is experiencing a credit inflation which, according to the orthodox economists, constitutes a serious menace to the maintenance of the credit of the government.

To administer the New Deal more than 50 new agencies have been created to exercise the vast powers delegated to the executive. The orders, regulations, and rulings having the force of law that have emanated from these agencies are numbered by the hundreds of thousands, in the mazes of which even the New Dealers become hopelessly entangled. In one case an oil operator was imprisoned and his case carried to the Supreme court before it was discovered that the law authorizing the prosecution had been repealed.

To man these alphabetical agencies of the New Deal more than 243,698 employés have been added to the federal burocracy which now numbers 815,789 civil employés, only 101,971 short of the peak during the world war.

Evade Civil Service.

Nearly all the new positions are exempt from the civil service law and have been filled with Democratic appointees endorsed by Democratic state organizations. Altogether the period has recorded a serious setback for the merit rule. There are fewer positions in the classified service today than when Mr. Roosevelt took office.

Mr. Roosevelt was inaugurated in the midst of the bank panic of 1933. According to the Democrats, this panic registered the nadir of popular despair engendered by the failure of the Hoover administration to check the depression. According to the Republicans, it was a manifestation of popular apprehensions of the Roosevelt fiscal program due to the refusal of the President elect to pledge himself to a conservative monetary course.

With a vigor, however, that inspired confidence Mr. Roosevelt attacked the crisis, closed all the banks and allowed them to reopen as they established their soundness under the emergency banking legislation he pushed through congress. Eventually complete confidence was restored, with small deposits insured under the amendment originating with Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.].

Gives Europeans Jolt.

Next the President threw himself ardently into the project of an international economic conference that was to put the world depression to flight. He called the chief statesmen of Europe to Washington and canvassed the plans with them, although he gave them a jolt by taking the country off the gold standard in the midst of negotiations.

The conference, held in London, gave the country the first object lesson in the tendency of the President to plunge into undertakings without mature consideration. He sent a delegation to London to negotiate among other things an international agreement on monetary stabilization. Then he suddenly changed his mind, kicked over the stabilization project, came out for the commodity dollar, and killed the conference.

Within a few months thereafter he adopted a policy of dollar depreciation, began bidding up the price of gold in accord with Prof. Warren's theory of increasing commodity prices and ended up in January, 1934, by devaluing the dollar 40 per cent.

Living Costs Boosted.

A few months later he was expressing his disappointment with dollar devaluation as a price raiser. As a result of New Deal policies altogether, however, prices have gone up. The cost of living has risen 18.6 per cent since Mr. Roosevtlt took office.

Having won popular approval by his handling of the bank panic the President went on to gather fresh laurels by driving through congress his economy program in fulfillment of the Democratic platform pledge to reduce the cost of the federal government not less than 25 per cent. The measure radically cut veterans' allowances and effected other economies aggregating more than 700 millions a year. The legislation was scarcely on the books, however, before the government by presidential order and by act of congress began to whittle down the savings until they were completely destroyed, eventually.

In the spring of 1933 the President launched the most important of his recovery and reform projects. The AAA had been in course of formulation by the brain trust in collaboration with farm organization leaders since the election. The NRA was a more casual development.

Labor Hours Cut.

The senate had passed the Black bill to limit hours of labor to 30 a week and it began to look as if it would be passed by the house. The leaders of industry became greatly alarmed and set out to beat the measure. They found, however, that the most they could do was to effect a compromise with labor. The compromise became the NRA.

The NRA started off with a rush, with Gen. Hugh Johnson regimenting industry and cracking down on chiselers. Within a year he had industry operating under codes of fair competition, but by that time the fallacy of the NRA theory had become apparent.

The increased wages and decreased hours of labor increased the cost of production. The resultant higher prices caused decreased consumption, which in turn curtailed production and increased unemployment. In addition the enforcement of the codes was as futile as was prohibition.

By the spring of 1935 the NRA was moribund. The Supreme court gave it final quietus in a unanimous decision pronouncing the act unconstitutional as a federal invasion of state jurisdiction and a delegation of lawmaking power to the executive. A marked improvement in business immediately set in.

The AAA flourished about eight months longer. Altogether about 11-3 billion dollars was collected in processing taxes on farm products and paid to the farmers for curtailment of production. Farm product prices rose, partly due to curtailment, partly to the great drouth, and partly to devaluation of the dollar.

By 1935 the administration conceded the AAA to be unconstitutional and put through congress amendatory legislation to cure the defects. But the move was of no avail. The Supreme court by a 6 to 3 division pronounced the whole act as amended repugnant to the constitution as an invasion of state rights to control agriculture.

Roosevelt's Scare Fails.

The President had predicted that invalidation of the AAA would bring back 36 cent wheat and 5 cent cotton. In the two months since the decision farm product prices have not declined materially and in some instances have risen. Political expediency, however, on the eve of the presidential election dictated the continuation of the subsidy to agriculture, particularly in the corn and wheat states upon which Mr. Roosevelt is relying for reëlection. As a result congress just has passed the new farm relief act under which more than 500 millions a year will be distributed to the farmers.

In his inauguration address Mr. Roosevelt promised to drive the money changers out of the temple. The immediate result was legislation restrictive of banking and placing security issues and stock exchanges under government regulation. The security issue law, written by young members of the brain trust, was so drastic as to discourage business expansion and menace recovery. Finally admitting error the President consented to a modification of the act and placed its administration in conservative hands.

Own Party Revolts.

Part and parcel of the President's warfare on big business was the legislation aimed at the public utilities and the creation of the Tennessee Valley authority to produce and sell electric power in competition with private enterprise. The public utility legislation, particularly the "death sentence" on holding companies, resulted in a Democratic party revolt against the President and he was compelled to compromise in order to attain a fraction of his objective.

This revolt signalized the end of the Roosevelt honeymoon. For two years the President had had everything his way. Congress had been a rubber stamp on the New Deal legislation sought by the President, little of which had so much as been mentioned in the platform on which he was elected. With the greater part of the New Deal program enacted into law the President went to the country in the congressional elections of 1934 and received an overwhelming vindication.

But in the third year of his incumbency came the storms. The Supreme court began knocking out New Deal institutions, revolt showed its head in his party, the Literary Digest poll indicated that the New Deal had lost the confidence of a majority of the people.

The President's hold on his party was severely strained in the summer of 1935 by his sudden demand for higher taxes on the rich and on big corporations as a measure for the redistribution of wealth. The move had been precipitated by the late Huey Long's announcement of plans to stump the country in behalf of his "share the wealth" scheme.

Senator Long loomed as the prospective leader of a third party which would seriously threaten the reëlection of Mr. Roosevelt. The President sought to take the wind out of Long's sails with his tax-the-rich program, the radical and impractical features of which cost him the support of a majority of the Democratic leaders in congress. To get the bill through at all he was compelled to compromise. Then Huey Long, the cause of his political adventure, was assassinated, and the radical third party threat was dissipated.

Delays Tarif Change.

In the 1932 election the Democrats laid down a barrage on the Smoot-Hawley high tarif act, despite the fact it was passed only by virtue of Democratic votes. They pronounced it a major cause of the depression. But when they achieved power the Democrats had no stomach for revising the tarif downward. A year passed before Mr. Roosevelt tackled the tarif problem at all.

Then he got the legislation under which Mr. Hull is negotiating reciprocal tarif concessions. Of the dozen agreements reached that with Canada is the most important and the cause of much dissatisfaction on the part of the American farmers, chiefly hit by the concessions.

In foreign affairs the President started out with a plan for gradual reduction of armaments, which he urged upon the disarmament conference at Geneva to no avail.

Repudiates Monroe Doctrin.

With the Latin-American countries the President has cultivated close and friendly relations. He repudiated the Theodore Roosevelt corollary to the Monroe doctrin, caused the repeal of the Platt amendment providing suzerainty over Cuba, and only recently initiated a Pan-American conference at which it is intended to transform the Monroe doctrin from a unilateral to a multilateral declaration.

The imminence of the war between Italy and Ethiopia last year produced the new neutrality law placing an embargo on export of implements of war to the belligerents. Mr. Roosevelt sought powers under which he would be able to coöperate with the league of nations in coercing Italy to abandon the war.

Here again his party failed to support him from fear that such entanglement in European broils would tend not to keep us out of war but to get us in. In the recent extension of the act he was refused the discretionary authority he sought.

While the New Deal has been identified by its authors as the planned economy, its three year history to date is studded with the retreats of the administration in the face of the demonstration of the impracticability of the visionary planners.

Thus the subsistence homesteads, the housing ventures, the original work relief scheme, the salary limitation move, the replacement of big business by little business through discriminatory taxation, the shelter belt to stop dust storms, the eradication of the profit motive, the gold manipulations, the silver experiment, and many other innovations of the theorists have proved unworkable.

Schemes Are Spectacular.

The impulsiveness, love of the spectacular, and weakness for making political capital which Mr. Roosevelt has so frequently displayed were illustrated with tragic consequences in his abrupt cancelation of all air mail contracts on the ground they were corruptly negotiated by the Hoover administration and in his transfer of air mail carriage to the army air corps.

This experiment was attended by the death of so many pilots of the ill equipped army planes that the administration was compelled by public indignation to retreat and restore air mail transportation to private enterprise. In the light of this disastrous experience the intention to cancel the ocean air mail contracts was abandoned.

LAW BARRING SUITS FOR ALIENATION IN N. Y. IS RULED VOID

New York, Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Justice Leander Faber ruled in Queens Supreme court today that the McNaboe act, making it a felony for an attorney to file a breach of promise or alienation suit, is unconstitutional in so far as it applies to a specific action at hand.

"Such rights of action, like the rights of action for libel, assault and battery, or for recovery of debt, are beyond the power of the legislature to abolish utterly without supplying some substitute," he said.

The action on which he rendered his decision was brought by Lawrence Hanfgarn of Floral Park, N. Y., against George Mark of Elmont.

Hanfgarn, alleging that Mark stole the affections of Mrs. Hanfgarn, started a $30,000 suit against Mark last May, two months after the McNaboe act became effective. Hanfgarn's attorney argued that if the McNaboe act were upheld, "the only recourse for a husband whose home has been violated will be the killing of the violator."

RAISE NEAT POINT ON HOW A JUDGE MAY HELP PRESS

Savage Hits Issuance of "Text" to Reporter.

The limitations [if there be any] on the assistance which a judge may grant to newspaper reporters in their work of disseminating legal opinions that he pronounces on the bench were argued yesterday before Judge Donald S. McKinley of the Superior court.

The question came up in connection with an affidavis filed by Judge Stanley Klarkowski, who is the defendant in a $100,000 slander suit filed by Attorney Joseph P. Savage. The suit is based on certain phrases concerning Savage which, uttered on the bench by Judge Klarkowski, have been held privileged. In the affidavit discussed yesterday, however, Judge Klarkowski admitted that he handed the original manuscript of these remarks to a reporter in order that they might be "accurately copied."

Remarks Over Change of Venue.

These remarks, which included references to Savage as a "perjurer" and a person "absolutely lacking in character, decency and conscience," were made when Judge Klarkowski transferred two accounting suits to asother court at the request of Savage. In these cases Savage and former State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe are the litigants.

Savage, in seeking the change of venue, had asserted Judge Klarkowski was paid $12,500 for political campaign expenditures by Crowe, Gorman & Savage, law firm which has now been dissolved.

In the argument yesterday Attorney Floyd E. Thompson, representing Judge Klarkowski, declared that even if malice were shown, the act of the judge in assisting the newspaper reporter was privileged and the judge was exempt from the charge of slander.

"In Interest of Accuracy."

"You wouldn't hold," he said, "that a judge cannot help reporters get a story accurately, would you? Doesn't your honor remember that you handed out press copies of your ruling in a demurrer in this case?"

"The only reason I had copies of my opinion made was that I thought a new legal point was involved," retorted Judge McKinlay. "If I had a malicious intent to injure some one's character by handing them out I would not think they were privileged.

"Offhand—I am not ruling on this point now—I would say that if a judge hands a reporter something or tells him something, and it is done maliciously, then there is a basis for action."

Judge McKinlay instructed W. F. McLaughlin, attorney for Savage, to file an affidavit denying Judge Klarkowski's contention that in assisting the reporter he did not go out of his judicial path.

It already has been ruled that Savage cannot recover for anything the judge might have said about him while on the bench hearing a case in which Savage was a party.

STERN AND PARTNERS SENTENCED TO PRISON FOR STOCK FRAUDS

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Louis Stern, president of Louis Stern & Co., Chicago real estate brokers, today was sentenced to serve five years in prison and ordered to pay a fine of $5,000 for mail fraud.

"I should have known better," the 72 year old man sobbed as he was sentenced by Judge Robert C. Baltzell in federal court.

Sam Schweitzer of Chicago, former dog track operator and "financial expert" of the Stern office here, was sentenced to 8 years and fined $7,500. A third defendant, Harry Collins, president of H. N. Collins & Co., received a two year sentence and a fine of $1,000.

The three were convicted of a "sell and switch" stock scheme which resulted in $60,000 of losses to investors who patronized the Indianapolis joint offices of the Stern and Collins companies.

WIFE, 19, NAMED LEGAL GUARDIAN FOR HUSBAND, 20

Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to the probate judge, yesterday appointed Mrs. Margaret Linfoot, 19 years old, 8509 South Morgan street, as guardian for her husband, Arthur R. Linfoot, 20 years old, a machinist for the Crane company. The guardianship is for the purpose of giving the wife custody of a $1,000 bequest. The bequest was one of the many left by the late Richard T. Crane Jr. to his employés at the time of his death in 1931. Appointment of the wife was necessary, Caplan explained, as the husband lacks a year of being the legal age of 21, while the wife reached legal age at 18.

BOULDER DAM IS TURNED OVER TO FEDERAL SERVICE

Job Completed 2½ Years Ahead of Schedule.

Boulder City, Nev., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Two big hard rock men shook hands tonight and with no more ceremony one of the world's greatest engineering jobs changed hands.

"Take it; it's yours now," said Frank Crowe to Ralph Lowry.

The Six Companies, Inc., represented by its construction superintendent, Crowe, thus handed over to the reclamation service engineer, Lowry, the Boulder dam and its power houses—completing the biggest single contract ever executed for the government.

Highest Dam in World.

The dam is the highest in the world. It backs up water in a natural reservoir forming the greatest lake man ever made.

The Six Companies on March 11, 1931, bid $48,890,995.50 for the job, and collected $54,500,000. The difference was due to many changes made during the construction period.

The job was done about two and a half years ahead of time. But the project — a $165,000,000 one — has plenty of work left for government engineers.

Boulder dam, 727 feet high, eventually will generate about 2,000,000 horse power of electrical energy. It will supply domestic water for future millions in southern California.

Aqueduct Under Way.

In addition to the $165,000,000 federal project, which includes an all-American canal in Imperial valley, Cal., there is under way a $220,000,000 aqueduct to southern California.

For a quarter of a century this taming of the Colorado river was discussed. Action really started in 1921, when Herbert Hoover, as secretary of commerce, called the Colorado river commission into existence. Work was started March 11, 1931.

Hoover Name Removed.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Formally accepting the Boulder dam, Secretary Ickes today hailed its completion more than two years ahead of schedule as "another milestone" in the history of the west.

The dam was completed with a $40,000,000 allotment from the PWA. About the same time as it was granted, Ickes restored the original name of Boulder dam which had been changed to Hoover dam during the preceding administration. Ickes contended it was against government policy to name any federal structure for a living man.

Bureau of reclamation officials said generation of power—which is expected to pay for the project with interest in 50 years — would begin probably in June.

DROPS INDECENCY CHARGE AGAINST EXHIBIT OF ART

Richmond, Va., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Modern art and the fundamentalist conception of morality clashed in police court here today and art won—by default.

E. M. Terrell, who headed a committee to purge the Richmond Academy of Art of the Mordi Gassner murals which he thought "indecent," withdrew his charges against John Stewart Bryan Jr., wealthy publisher's son and vice president of the academy.

The case was immediately dismissed by Police Justice E. C. Folkes. Terrell had charged Bryan with exhibiting indecent pictures. Terrell, Sunday school superintendent and former college instructor, said the nude figure of a pregnant woman was what most aroused his ire.

Originally scheduled to end today, the exhibition has been extended. Attendance has gained five-fold since the charges were made.

CHICAGOLAND OFFICIALLY ON EASTERN TIME

Permanent Change Brings Shower of Benefits.

The sponsors of the eastern time ordinance, introduced in the council by Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th], feel certain that the many benefits that extra daylight hours will bring to the individual citizen far outweigh the few factors which have been presented as reasons for opposing the change. These proponents of more daylight hours for Chicagoland have stressed the factors of improvement in health, enhanced opportunity for outdoor recreation, reduction of light and fuel costs, and lessening of trafic hazards.

Boon to General Public.

They anticipate numerous advantages which will accrue to business and are assured that the general welfare of the public will be improved.

Whether these results can be obtained, the individual citizen can now learn for himself from his own experience, by checking his light bills, by comparing accident totals, and by observing the results in his own business. If he votes in a referendum on the time change, as the Chicago Federation of Labor proposes, he will cast his ballot in the light of actual experience.

Children's schedules, more important to many folk than business and railroad schedules, are subject to revision today. But, pediatricians point out, no further revision will be necessary since the time will now remain constant.

Two of the largest Chicago packers, Armour & Co. and Swift & Co., and two smaller firms, Reliable, and Dependable, announced yesterday that they would operate on eastern time, beginning tomorrow, despite the fact that the stockyards will continue on central time. Other packers are expected to follow suit this week.

Board of Trade Changes Hours.

The Chicago Board of Trade will begin its trading operations at 10.30 a. m. [E. S. T.] tomorrow. This does not really change its 9:30 a. m. central time opening, with relation to the central time area. Many traders were reported yesterday to prefer a 9:30 a. m. [E. S. T.] opening, and further consideration of the issue is expected this week.

Today church services and theater programs, concerts and lectures are on the eastern time basis. Rabbi Louis L. Mann of Chicago Sinai temple announced the change by sending out special cards. Other churches have made similar announcements from the pulpit and bulletin boards, and in the press. In all denominations ministers have supported the change to eastern time, and are cooperating to effect the change with a minimum of inconvenience.

Schools on New Time.

Both city and parochial schools, city offices, police and fire departments, federal courts and offices, and all similar activities are on eastern time. The change will not be formally made in the county offices, however, until later in the week. The judges of the Superior court, meeting yesterday with Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley, voted to hold court an hour later, eastern time, which leaves them legally on central time. The Circuit, Probate, and County courts are expected to take similar action.

The Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies began operating on the new time schedule in the metropolitan area at 2:01 a. m. At that time, C. E. Bowers, plant superintendent for Western Union, set the master clock at 427 South La Salle street an hour ahead. This mechanism controls the 4,500 Western Union clocks in Chicago. Individual users must set their own clocks, since the master clock merely synchronizes them.

The Field Museum of Natural History will conform with the time change, Stephen C. Simms, director, announced yesterday. Visiting hours will continue to be from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., but under the eastern time standard time will mean that the museum will be open during an added hour of daylight, a change especially

In the suburban area, 26 suburbs passed ordinances officially putting them on eastern time, and many others took informal action to achieve the same end. Waukegan will change time on March 22, and Aurora, Joliet, and Elgin will follow on April 26.

Three Children Perish in Fire at Settlers' Home

KAPUSKASING, Ont., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Belanger were burned to death today in a fire at their settlers' home at Kitigan, six miles west of this town, in northern Ontario. The mother, father, and an 8 months' old infant were burned and taken to a hospital at Hearst. It was believed overheated stovepipes caused the fire.

SENATOR STIRS WEST VIRGINIA WPA JOB QUIZ

"Deserving" Democrats Reap Benefits.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—With most of the $16,000,000 allocated to this state for WPA expenditures already spent, the national administration has started an investigation into the charges by Rush D. Holt, outspoken 32 year old junior senator from West Virginia, that nearly all the jobs created with this money went to persons recommended by the town and county bosses of the Democratic political organization in this state.

Frank W. McCullough, state head of the WPA returned here today from Washington, where he had been called upon the carpet by Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. When he opened the door of his office he found a half dozen investigators sent by Hopkins, during his absence, to look into the situation.

They had arrived yesterday and promptly put their inquisitive noses inside WPA headquarters. At the head of the investigators is Allen Johnson, who began his career in semi-public life as director of community chest in Baltimore.

Senator Holt, who thrice has assailed the job scandals on the senate floor in the last ten days, told a friend here tonight that he would leave Washington tomorrow morning, gather more ammunition in a two day visit to his home state, and let off another blast in the senate Wednesday.

FIVE GERMAN REDS TO DIE FOR KILLING BEER HALL OWNER IN RAID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 29.—Five communists must die for the murder of a beer hall owner more than four years ago, a Berlin court decided today. Heinrich Boewe was shot to death Oct. 15, 1931, in his beer hall in Neukoelln, a Berlin suburb. The slaying occurred during a Red raid on the resort, which was a Nazi rallying center. Three Storm Troopers were wounded by the Reds.

Twenty-five communists, including one woman, were charged with participating in the raid. The trial lasted six months. More than 200 witnesses were heard. Paul Zimmermann, Bruno Schroeter, Helmut Schwers, Bruno Blank, and Walter Schulz received the death sentences.

Anna Rathmann was acquitted. Twelve others received prison sentences ranging up to fourteen years. The charges against seven were dropped.

11,000 Candidates Apply for Police Examination

James S. Osborne, secretary of the city civil service commission, announced yesterday that 11,000 candidates have applied for the police examination to be given March 16. With March 14 set as the deadline for such applications, he said he expects to receive approximately 20,000 applications before the examination.

Famous Engineers say: "Hats off to that HUDSON Eight Motor"

Again and again, Sir Malcolm Campbell has given high praise to the smooth performance of the Hudson Super Straight Eight. Reid Railton, noted British engineer and designer of the famous "Blue Bird", calls Hudson motors "the best automobile motors built today."

Anyone who drives a Hudson for the first time marvels first at its smoothness. Then at the ease with which it performs where the going is toughest. Finally, at the fact that an Eight so big uses so little gasoline and oil.

Smoothest Eight of Them All

The question they ask most often is this: "Why can a Hudson do so many things that other Eights can't do?"

Why, for example, is Hudson the smoothest Eight? Because no other Eight has Hudson's perfect balance. A motor with crankshaft inherently compensated to eliminate vibration at all speeds ... by a method originated, perfected and patented by Hudson.

Why is Hudson the most powerful Eight anywhere in its class ... developing 113 or 124 horsepower, while all others within $200 above its price have a range of 87 to 105 horsepower?

More Power and Longer Life

There is more than one answer to that question. Balance is part of the story. Finer materials, more high-grade alloys, than are used in any other Eight ... cutting useless weight in reciprocating parts, and at the same time increasing strength.

From a combination of these and many other features, comes economy equal to that of most small Sixes ... and, by actual test, unsurpassed by any other Eight. Proved again and again ... as in the recent Los Angeles-Yosemite Economy Run, in which a big Hudson Eight sedan with three passengers and baggage averaged 22.86 miles per gallon over 352 miles of mountain roads. With no "coasting" allowed.

Engine life determines car life. That is why so many Hudsons are still going strong after 150,000 and 200,000 miles ... and some with more than half a million miles.

Again ... a story of better materials, better balance, no dead weight to pull. Hudson's cylinder block of chrome alloy steel, for example ... double-hard, double-tough. Pinned piston rings. Both of them features that greatly reduce engine wear ... neither of them found in any other Eight.

Biggest Cars Ever Priced So Low

Remember, this motor ... this performance ... this endurance and economy ... come to you in a car that has more of everything else that counts in enjoyment and satisfaction. Most advanced styling. More size and room than any Eight within hundreds of dollars of Hudson's price. Exclusive Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes (patent applied for). Body all of steel with seamless solid steel roof. Many other safe riding and driving features that are Hudson's alone.

And here is the big news ... the fact that makes this Hudson the greatest value of all the Eights ... prices begin at only $760. Drive a Hudson Eight today. And see just how much more you get for your money.

$760 and up for Hudson Eight; $710 and up for Hudson Six. Prices f. o. b. Detroit, standard group of accessories extra. 113 or 124 H. P. in Eights ... 93 or 100 H. P. in Sixes. Longer wheelbases ... up to 127 inches.

SAVE ... with the new HUDSON-C. I. T. 6% Time Payment Plan ... low monthly payments

TEXT OF GOV. LANDON'S NEBRASKA FOUNDERS' DAY ADDRESS

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The full text of the address of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas before the Founders' day Republican rally here tonight follows:

"As a Kansan, it is a real pleasure to be here tonight among you Nebraska neighbors. Your state and mine were carved from the same territory. Our activities and our interests have always been the same. We have a common point of view on the grave problems that today confront our states and the nation.

"It is a special satisfaction to me to be able to take part in this celebration honoring the men and women who sixty-nine years ago brought Nebraska to statehood. The name you have given it—'Founders' day'—seems to me to be singularly appropriate.

"When we remember the founders it is not for the purpose of worshiping the forms of our institutions. It is for the purpose of keeping before us the lessons of experience, and of gaining new inspiration from the sacrifices of those who pioneered in our behalf. We seek, also, to quicken our youth with a stronger resolve to make American institutions always serve the just interests of a mighty nation.

All Seek Sound Solution.

"Every thoughtful citizen is concerned today with the problems that face our country. We all wish to be helpful in finding sound solutions for these problems. Our next Republican national convention, made up of delegates from every congressional district in this great country, will adopt a platform redefining our fundamental principles in the light of present needs. If we as Republicans would keep faith with the people our platform must say exactly what we mean—and we must mean exactly what our platform says.

"The basic issues of the approaching national referendum hold a deeper interest for our country than any that have arisen for a generation past. The crucial period in which we now find ourselves is testing representative government at many points.

"The American people are profoundly impressed by this fact. They are looking for true leadership in the nation and in the states—leadership that will reinforce their faith in the American system of representative government.

Welcome Chance to Change.

"They will welcome a chance to support a leadership capable of saving them from the breakdown of popular government — a breakdown which has already engulfed so large a part of the old world. The road our people wish to travel avoids the bondage of burocracy on the one hand, and on the other it avoids the tyranny of monopoly and economic dictatorship.

"In the field of government today the word 'equality' best describes our main objective. We must strive for equality of justice under law; equality for the wage earner and the wage payer in their negotiations; equality in the market place for agriculture. We must insist upon equality of opportunity in every walk of life. This means that government must use all the forces at its command to protect this equality of opportunity from the insidious evils of monopoly.

"In this way we can best meet the challenge to the democratic principles underlying our system of government. In this way we can best foster our common interests without forfeiting that fair freedom of individual opportunity which is one of the ideals of American liberty. Neither under the pretense of promoting efficiency nor to establish class rule are the American people willing to abandon democratic institutions in favor of arbitrary government in any form.

Task of Party Heavier.

"The task of the Republican party has been multiplied and our path to orderly economic progress unnecessarily barricaded by social and economic experiments introduced in the last three years by the national administration. It may be assumed that many of these objectives were laudable but the methods taken to reach those objectives have tended to discredit their high intentions. We must begin all over.

MUST KNOW PROBLEMS

"First, to solve our problems we must understand them. We must realize that they emerge in part from the confused world beyond our borders. But we must also face the fact that in a large measure these problems arose from our own internal complexities. Some of them come from the developments of the last three years. Many of them were created by our swift entry into an industrial age.

"We, of all the world, have traveled farther forward in that age because we are machine-minded, but by our very genius we have made our own troubles more perplexing. A simple order has been changed into a complex one. Nevertheless here again we must face realities.

"We Americans who live in the Mississippi valley states owe it not only to ourselves but to the farmers of every state to bring home again to the whole country the enduring importance of agriculture. Now, as always, the basis of our national life is in the soil. Unless those who till the soil prosper prosperity for their fellow Americans in other walks of life will be short lived.

Ask No Special Favors.

"A mistaken notion seems all too prevalent that American farmers are seeking special privilege. Some people talk as if the welfare of agriculture were separate and independent from that of the nation. Developments of the last decade clearly demonstrate the fallacy of that belief. The farm is woven into our economic fabric. It must be treated fairly if our cloth is to remain whole.

"Among all the problems that are pressing for consideration today, if there is one that is truly national it is the distress of agriculture. It has suffered all too much from partisan politics. It is not only a national problem but a many sided one. It concerns the family dining table, the factory employment gate, the corner grocery, and the savings window in your own bank. When we more clearly realize how directly it enters the daily life of every family agriculture again will come into its own.

"Over and above the remedial legislation still required, there is much that can be done by an informed and sympathetic administration. The discrimination in national policies, against which our farmers so justly complain, must end!

Will End Much Unemployment.

"Once we have restored the purchasing power of the American farmer we shall have gone a long way toward providing work for the unemployed. New jobs would be made available in factories, railroads, and merchandising establishments. On most of the nation's 6 million farms there is need at this very moment for additional labor. There are farm buildings to be painted and repaired. There is farm machinery to be overhauled. There are fences to be built. There are terraces and dams to be constructed.

"The farmer has lacked money to do these jobs. He couldn't afford to hire the additional hands. There are many chores that would be shifted from the farmer and his wife to other shoulders, if the family income would permit. Given the buying power he fairly earns, it is not too much to say that the farmer could provide jobs for many of the millions still unemployed and eager to work.

Keep Farmers on Farm.

"By restoring agriculture to its rightful place in our national life we shall also keep open the door of opportunity on the farm. Thousands of our boys and girls who prefer the farm to the city would make the farm their home and farming their life work. There they should be able to find the financial independence and the security to which their labor entitles them. The whole country would benefit by restoring this freedom of choice to youth. All would gain by opening this way to a better distribution of population.

RELIEF "MANHANDLED"

"Then there is the all important task of relief. After three years of experimentation, relief still remains in chaos. The intentions of the federal relief administration, under the various initials by which it has been identified, may have been high and noble. The political manhandling of the projects, however, has been nothing short of shocking. Idealists may have been at the front door preaching social justice, but party henchmen have been at the back door handing out the jobs.

"The centralization of control in Washington has brought about a lamentable and costly breakdown of local responsibility. State governments have been deliberately short circuited. Local governments have been tempted to sacrifice their rights and their responsibilities in order to get any share in the distribution of federal funds.

"Federal financial aid was obviously necessary in our recent emergency, but every community knows best how to care for its own. The federal relief program has lacked the flexibility to meet local conditions. In many cases the way it has been carried out has denied aid to the truly deserving. In other instances it has encouraged too many to become chronic indigents.

WPA Makes Relief Permanent.

"The WPA program has slammed the door to employment on public works to every one except permanent relief clients. As a result those who might otherwise have become self-sustaining have been forced back on relief in order to obtain temporary employment.

"There are cruel implications in the present program. Two changes are imperative. One is the decentralization of relief. The other calls for encouragement to the person who is trying again to become self-supporting. Such efforts must not be penalized as they have been in the past. In many communities practical ways of meeting this need have been found. The federal relief administration has ignored these successful local efforts which restored self-support without injury to the American standard of living. A short sighted federal relief administration continues to exhibit utter unfamiliarity with what has been achieved in these directions.

"The original idealism of the relief program has been wrecked by confusion, contradiction, delay, and miserable party politics. The obligation to deal fairly with every person in want seems to have been forgotten. Waste and diversion have melted away the funds intended for those in need—and in need, many times, through no fault of their own. Any government eventually fails unless it deals justly with its most humble citizen.

Hits Millions for Politics.

"When a national administration takes millions and millions paid in taxes by the American people to build a partisan political machine out of want and misery that administration does an indefensible thing.

"And a congress that failed to protect its own witnesses when summoned to testify in regard to the waste of this tax money would be guilty of deserting one of its gravest responsibilities under the constitution.

"Recently the impression has been spread that a change in administration would jeopardize the relief intended for the deserving. The time has come to call a halt on such politically inspired fear. Let us, as Republicans, make it clear to the needy everywhere that the changes we pledge will bring order out of chaos by purging the federal relief administration of partisanship, of waste, and of incompetence. In short, what we propose is to make relief both honest and effective!.

CIVIL SERVICE UPSET

"We face a problem in regular government employment as well as in relief work. Thousands of workers are necessary to administer the affairs of a nation of 130 million persons. Grover Cleveland, and every other President since the civil service law was enacted, extended its scope by executive order. So, too, each congress has opened up new avenues for the activities of the civil service commission. This steady advance of the merit system for half a century was halted and turned back three years ago by the political spoilsmen now in power.

"These spoilsmen have seen to it that not one in a hundred out of the 235,000 new jobholders added by this administration has been bothered by merit requirements. But worse than that, the morale of the whole federal service has suffered as the result of ousting thousands of trained employes from their hard won civil service status. Their faith in the protection of the merit system has been ruthlessly betrayed. The time has come to end this political debauch. The merit system must be restored, expanded and improved, and the extension of the system must include the opening up of higher positions in the federal service to advancement through merit.

Will Raise Standards.

"Building a better and broader civil service will raise the standards of both the administrative and legislative branches of the federal government. It will not only give us better administration but it will give us better legislation. It will enable our legislators to concentrate on legislation and not be compelled to waste so much time on the distribution of patronage.

"Millions of honest citizens will support a party that is not trying to perpetuate itself in power at the expense of the taxpayers.

"Then, too, we must have a sound and stable monetary system. We must not spend more than we can afford. We must cut down our debts, and stop making new ones. A leaky engine cannot pick up speed. If we are overburdened by debt we cannot go forward; in a word, we must persevere until we have balanced our budget.

"After all, however liberal we are, whatever progressive instinct tempts us and inspires us, common sense and sound policy tell us that we can only be as liberal as we can afford to be and pay our debts and live in decent self-respect.

"All this is true in our personal and private affairs. It is no less true in governmental business. Unpleasant though it may be, we must heed the warning from year after year of federal deficits. Waste, extravagance, and indecision will not remedy slipshod national housekeeping. If persisted in these recurring deficits inevitably will lead to one of two courses.

INFLATION ONE WAY

"One way is inflation. That is a primrose path at the beginning, but there is an inescapable pitfall at the end. Inflation can only culminate in wiping out the savings of the American people.

"The first whiff of inflation is pleasant. But inflation grips nations as insidiously as drugs do individuals. The consequences are the same. Most nations that have exposed themselves to the inflation habit have been unable to stop short of utter breakdown. The real victims have been the very ones the inflationary program pretended to help.

"The other wasteful way out of this financial mess is the imposition of federal taxes more severe than any before known. Even the imposition of these severe levies if coupled with continued reckless spending would give only temporary relief. Overtaxation would take its toll in the lowering of our standards of living and the ultimate exhaustion of our resources.

Third Path Outlined.

"But courageous leadership can blaze a third path. This road leads to economy and sound administration. It leads to the reëmployment of millions of men and women now out of work. If we have the courage to take this road we must make a far more intelligent use of the federal budgetary system than now is being done.

"There must be more effective budget making by the executive. Congress must find a way to consider federal expenditures as a whole rather than as isolated and apparently unrelated departmental expenditures. Finally, we must consider not only 'Where is the money going?' but 'Where is it coming from?'

"If the money is spent we must get it somehow, some way. If we spend what we do not have today, we must pay the bill tomorrow. Every time we put off present obligations we mortgage future rewards and future opportunities.

"We cannot go back to the days before this depression. We must go forward facing the new problems, solving them under the old eternal verities, cherishing the American tradition of free men, surrendering the unessential for new and necessary benefits.

Recovery in Character.

"But just as the basis of our national life is in the soil, so is the main source of our recovery in the character of our people.

"The founders of Nebraska, like those of Kansas, came to the plains seeking new homes. They were a rugged, hard working, thrifty, courageous people. They were willing to make sacrifices to hand down to their children America's heritage of freedom and opportunity.

"The heroic example of those brave pioneer men and women is full of inspiration for all of us.

"As we bring this annual observance of Founders' day to a close let us remember the words of Theodore Roosevelt when he said:

"'The old pioneer days are gone. But the need for the pioneer virtues remains.'"

LANDON ASSAILS SPOILS POLITICS IN RELIEF WORK

Dwelling on the theme of bureocracy and its great growth, the governor deplored the spectacle of "spoilsmen" at Washington turning back the clock on civil service until "not one in a hundred out of 235,000 new job holders" has come from the merit lists, while thousands of civil service employes have been thrown out.

"The time has come," said the governor, "to end this political debauch."

Landon Movement Grows.

Politically the day's events at Lincoln were interpreted as an indication of rapid crystalization of sentiment in a string of pivotal states looking to the Kansas budget balancer as the G. O. P. presidential nominee at Cleveland in June. These pivotal states lie in the heart of the corn, wheat, and hog belt, where the gentle rain of New Deal corn-hog checks has fallen the heaviest.

For the occasion groups came from Kansas, Iowa, Colorado, and Missouri, and the day took on the form of a demonstration for the Kansas governor.

Republicans swarming into the hotels brought a chorus of reports that in the corn-hog states the New Deal shows signs of disruption. According to the scouts the disbursement of corn-hog subsidies under the AAA, which have been counted upon to hold the vote in line for the New Deal, is being offset by increasing agrarian fear of the mountainous debt and the tax load being piled up.

Landon Guest of Governor.

Gov. Landon, who drove up from Topeka, was a guest at the executive mansion on his arrival, an official courtesy of Gov. Roy L. Cochran, a Democrat, New Dealer, and himself a state budget balancer.

In the eyes of the politicians, significance was given to the increasing strength of Landon in farm regions where the winning party must get the votes next fall. They pointed to Iowa, where the Republican state convention at Des Moines yesterday picked an unpledged, uninstructed delegation to Cleveland in June. The name of Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, a presidential possibility, was not once mentioned, though Hoover's name as that of an "Iowa boy" brought cheers.

With no "favorite son" commitments for Dickinson, the Iowa delegation is held more friendly to Landon than any one else, with Senator William E. Borah of Idaho running next in favor.

Delegations for Landon.

Republicans here hold that what occurred in Iowa was more of a surprise to outsiders than to Iowans.

Kansas, represented here by a strong delegation headed by Will T. Beck, Republican state chairman, already has picked its district delegates, instructed for Landon. In Nebraska, a delegate slate friendly to Landon is to be entered in the April 14 primaries.

The implications which politicians draw from all this is that Kansas, Iowa, and Nebraska, a string of states in the debatable corn-hog battleground, are headed for Landon as the 48 states begin picking delegates. In Colorado, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Missouri, sentiment is said by observers to be crystalizing for Landon. And so far Landon is not an avowed candidate.

In Nebraska, like in Iowa, the two Republican candidates most frequently mentioned are Landon and Borah. Some groups are asking Landon to enter the preferential primary here on April 14. The Borah managers have suggested that such be done on an understanding the candidates should abide by the preferential vote.

Gov. Landon has taken a position against entering any preferential primaries, not being an avowed candidate. In his press conference today he said:

"I have not planned to enter any presidential primaries—up to this time."

The day was taken up with meetings of young Republicans and of the state organization. At an afternoon meeting, Mrs. George Simmons of Marshall, Mo., who hit the bell with her speech at the Springfield Grass Roots conclave in June, made an address.

HIGHLIGHTS OF LANDON SPEECH

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Salient sentences from the address of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas here tonight:

"The political man-handling of the [relief] projects . . . has been nothing short of shocking. Idealists may have been at the front door preaching social justice, but party henchmen have been at the back door handing out the jobs."

"The centralization of [relief] control in Washington has brought about a lamentable and costly breakdown of local responsibility."

"When a national administration takes millions and millions paid out in taxes by the American people to build a partisan political machine out of want and misery, that administration does an indefensible thing."

He added:

"And a congress that failed to protect its own witnesses when summoned to testify in regard to the waste of this tax money would be guilty of deserting one of its gravest responsibilities under the constitution."

"The steady advance of the merit system for half a century was halted and turned back three years ago by the political spoilsmen now in power."

"Among all the problems that are pressing for consideration today, if there is one that is truly national, it is the distress of agriculture. It has suffered all too much from partisan politics."

"We must cut down our debts and stop making new ones. . . . If we are over-burdened by debt, we can not go forward. . . . We must persevere until we have balanced our budget."

"We must consider, not only 'where is the money going?' but 'where is it coming from?'"

'Through with Barrymore,' Dolores Costello Declares

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Dolores Costello, en route to Hollywood to see a pre-view of her first picture in six years, declared today "there will never be a reconciliation" between John Barrymore and myself. Hollywood is the only place worrying about those rumors," Miss Costello declared.

MRS. SIMMONS, 'GRASS ROOTER,' COMPARES NEW DEAL TO A MULE

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Mrs. George B. Simmons of Marshall, Mo., in a Founders' day address to Republican women of Nebraska this afternoon, likened the Roosevelt administration to a Missouri mule and attacked New Deal farm measures.

"The mule wears wings on his head; he has two feet in front for walking, and two feet behind for kicking, and he is very backward about going forward," Mrs. Simmons said. "With apologies to our Missouri mules . . . I want to say the description might even more pertinently have been written of this administration.

"For with its wings on its head, what flights of fancy it has shown, telling us of that utopia with the 'abundant life,' where nobody but the rich would have bills to pay; trying to walk on its two front feet while kicking everybody who dared to criticise, and if there be any who doubt how backward it has been about going forward, let them look at the debts piled up, at the waste of public money, at the increase in the numbers of federal job holders."

CALLS LANDON SCHOOL FRIEND, CITING RECORDS

F. L. Pinet Answers Query of Outside Teachers.

Topeka, Kas., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Frank L. Pinet, secretary of the Kansas Teachers' association, wrote today to George A. Davis, secretary of the American Federation of Teachers, regarding a telegram sent by Davis to Gov. Alf M. Landon, to give Davis "the facts" of the Kansas school situation.

The Davis telegram asked whether Landon, if President, "would reduce funds for education and human relief, to balance the federal budget.

Refers to Tax Programs.

Pinet's reply said in part:

"In 1932, the Kansas Democratic platform proposed a constitutional amendment to write definite and specific tax limits into the state constitution. . . . Gov. Landon . . . opposed this amendment. . . . Kansas people defeated the constitutional amendment and the Democratic candidate for governor.

"During 1935 the Kansas legislature adopted a tax limitation statute and pay as you go legislation upon Gov. Landon's recommendation.

"The governor was a friend of the schools in insisting that a reasonable tax limit be passed. He has shown an interest in the welfare of Kansas teachers. . . . It is true that teachers' salaries have been reduced both in the state educational institutions of higher learning and in the public schools, but such reductions cannot rightfully be placed at Gov. Landon's door."

The Pinet letter cited the drop in tax revenues and consequent cuts in officials' "salaries in like proportion," starting before Landon's election.

"It is worth noting also," the letter resumed, "that during the present school year Kansas has 40 schools in operation with one pupil in attendance, 105 with two pupils, and 500 with three to four pupils. I am informed that 444 rural schools in Kansas have found it more practical temporarily to close and send children to nearby or adjoining districts."

Tells State School Policy.

At the same time, without referring directly to Davis' telegram, W. T. Markham, state superintendent of public instruction, Kansas' only Democratic state official, issued a statement saying in part:

"There are 8,687 organized school districts in Kansas employing 19,396 teachers. . . . So far as this department has been informed no child is being denied educational facilities in this state at the present time.

"We have a record of approximately 2 per cent of the total districts in the state being in financial difficulties at this time."

THREE SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Maynardville, Tenn., Feb. 29.—[U.P.]—A jury pronounced a death sentence for three young men here today for the first time in 40 years. Gus McCoig, 24; Frank Hopson, 22, and Pete Dean, 18, were found guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of Sherif L. B. Hutchison of Union county, and sentenced to the electric chair.

Primary Situation Little Changed by Withdrawals

BY PARKE BROWN.

Last night's withdrawals of state candidacies before the deadline yesterday were so few that they left the Republican primary situation in almost its original confusion.

When Secretary of State Hughes closed his Springfield office at 5 o'clock there were still eight candidates for the party nomination for governor, two from Cook county and six from downstate. Only one downstater, Walter M. Provine of Taylorville, withdrew from the contest.

The biggest change in any of the state-wide fights was caused by the withdrawal of Oscar Nelson of Geneva as a candidate for United States senator. That left this race to Otis F. Glenn, former senator, and William E. Hull, former congressman from Peoria as the chief participants with Attorney Orville J. Taylor and two unknowns as added starters.

F. A. McCarthy Withdraws.

State Representative Frank A. McCarthy of Elgin quit as an aspirant to the attorney general's office, but that left three still in that race—Charles W. Hadley of Wheaton, Ald. B. A. Cronson of Chicago, and Thomas V. Sullivan, the personal candidate of a former Republican mayor.

One other change that attracted wide interest was the announcement of Chauncey McCormick of Chicago that he had determined not to run for congressman at large. His statement said that his decision was the result of the request of Harrison E. Spangler, western director for the Republican national committee, that he hold himself free to speak in the national campaign.

Arnold L. Lund of Berwyn retired as a candidate for state treasurer, reducing the field to six. There were still six candidates for lieutenant governor, and seven for state auditor.

The Democratic Changes.

The changes in the Democratic lineup, in which there were a smaller number of original entries, were considered even less significant than the Republican shifts. The most interesting was the withdrawal of Francis J. Callahan, Chicago, as a candidate for attorney general, which left the incumbent, Otto Kerner, without opposition for renomination.

One other Democratic change was the withdrawal of Dr. John A. Moore of Bloomington as a candidate for state auditor. The Horner forces encouraged both Moore and Homer Mat Adams Jr. of Urbana to file for this office. Now Adams is the Horner slate candidate. He is a 26 year old employé of the state highway division.

The only other Horner state candidates are John E. Cassidy of Peoria, former state director for the National Emergency council, for lieutenant governor, and Joseph T. Spiker, a Chicago druggist, for state treasurer. The regular organization candidates against these three are John Stelle, McLeansboro, for lieutenant governor; State Auditor Edward J. Barrett of Chicago and John C. Martin, Salem banker and former state treasurer, who is a candidate for his old office.

HAWAIIAN PLEA FOR STATEHOOD IS TURNED DOWN

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Hawaii's plea for statehood was rejected today by a three to two vote of a house territories sub-committee which visited the islands last year.

The majority, while praising Hawaii, held "there should be considerably more study of the statehood proposal before giving a favorable report to the King bill." [Delegate Sam King sponsored the bill.]

Representative Eugene B. Crowe [Dem., Ind.], chairman of the subcommittee, said its findings unquestionably would be accepted by the full territories committee.

Representatives Crowe, John J. Dempsey [Dem., N. M.] and Jack Nichols [Dem., Okla.] comprised the majority. Representatives Ernest Lundeen [F.-L., Minn.] and Raymond J. Cannon [Dem., Wis.] voted to report the King bill favorably.

King said he felt "real progress" had been made in the statehood campaign. He said he would ask the next session of congress for an appropriation to send the full territories committee of 23 to the islands.

Los Angeles, 80 Degrees, Has One Heat Prostration

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—One heat prostration was recorded as the temperature leaped to an official 80 degree reading in Los Angeles today, and 83 in Long Beach. The heat victim was George Kraemer, 60 year old WPA worker, on an outdoor project.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands, Feb. 29.—Advices from Batavia today indicated that application of Dr. Otten's anti-plague serum resulted in a decrease of 41 per cent in plague cases in Java in 1935. In 1934, a total of 23,267 patients in Java died of plague. About 2,500,000 Java inhabitants were inoculated last year. Medical circles here expect that the extraordinary success of the Otten serum will lead to a general use of it in all the world's plague areas.

BROOKS TO OPEN CAMPAIGN IN HIS OLD HOME TOWN

Friends Organize Auto Caravans to Attend.

Ottawa, Ill., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Opening of the Wayland Brooks campaign for governor of Illinois here on Thursday, March 5, at the state armory is expected to bring one of the largest gatherings of Republicans ever held in this section of the state.

Several nearby counties already have notified James E. Hill, Republican chairman of La Salle county and chairman of the mass meeting, that automobile caravans are being organized to attend the Ottawa meeting.

Professional men and bankers of Ottawa, Streator, Mendota, Marseilles, La Salle and Peru, all in La Salle county, have declared a half holiday for Thursday afternoon. The Ottawa Chamber of Commerce has undertaken to decorate the town and fireworks and aerial bombs have been provided for the occasion.

Reared in Community.

La Salle county claims Brooks as its own. He was born in adjoining Bureau county and most of his early life and school days were spent in the community. Brooks now owns and operates a farm in La Salle county and his friends and neighbors were instrumental in arranging that the opening meeting of his campaign be held here.

Leslie Morgan, county supervisor from Belvidere, on whose farm in Bureau county Brooks worked as a boy, has notified Chairman Hill that he will attend the meeting and be on the platform to greet his former employé.

A former country school teacher of Brooks, Mrs. S. L. Dickens of Plainfield, has notified Hill that she will bring a delegation of teachers from schools that Brooks attended as a youngster.

Veterans Taking Part.

Service men also will take a leading part in the celebration. Cyrus Bradish of Deer Park, Ill., who was wounded in the same engagement at Soissons that put Brooks in the hospital, is assembling a delegation of marines, who were part of Brooks' army outfit. Robert L. Notman of Streator, who served with Brooks, is assisting in making the arrangements.

Among those who have notified Chairman Hill that they will head automobile caravans to the meeting, and the number of cars in the caravans, are the following:

Judge Ben Farrar, Rock Island, 20 cars; Ben H. Kipling, Macomb, 12; Sherif Oscar Larson, De Kalb county, 22; Elmer Haynes, Bement, 5; H. A. Lux, Rochelle, 11; Frank Moran, Belvidere, 8; Noill Saunders, Sterling, 14; Paul Grieves, Lacon, 6; Mark Ethell, Bloomington, 20; E. Hoobler, Pontiac, 23; Clyde E. Baker, Weldon, 5; Judge Frank B. Leonard, Champaign, 5; Judge George W. Bristow, Paris, 4; Walter Dysart, Danville, 6; Milton E. Jones, Springfield, 19; Dan McGlynn, East St. Louis, 9; George Faxon, Plano, 5; Hal Roberts, Dixon, 12; James White, Murphysboro.

'SONG OF LARK' BACK ON DISPLAY; DRAWS ADMIRING THRONGS

Since "The Song of the Lark," the famous oil painting by Jules Breton, was taken out of storage at the Art institute and again placed on display last Thursday, its popularity with visitors has increased daily, according to Walter J. Sherwood, director of publications at the institute.

Protests were made recently when it was learned that Robert B. Harshe, director of the institute, had relegated the painting to a dim storage room as being unworthy of a place in the sun. When it was placed on exhibition at A Century of Progress in 1934, it was voted the most popular number in the Art institute display. Since then it has been the center of controversy and criticism. Art critics are about evenly divided as to its worth, according to Mr. Sherwood.

SHOP ROBBED OF 5 DRESSES.

ARGENTINA VOTES ON DEPUTIES IN ELECTION TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 29.—Elections will be held in Argentina tomorrow for half of the chamber of deputies. A stiff fight is expected in the federal capital between the Socialists and Radicals—the Conservatives abstaining. General opinion favors the Radicals to win.

The province of Cordoba is looked upon as easy for the Radicals, who declare they will also carry the province of Buenos Aires.

President Augustin P. Justo has sent a letter to Gov. Manuel Fresco of the province of Buenos Aires, pointing out the necessity of insuring a clean election. Gov. Fresco replied expressing a similar hope, but stressed the difficulty of the task intrusted to him. It is generally believed that the Conservative majority in the chamber will be severely shaken.

CALIFORNIA WILL SEND UNPLEDGED G.O.P. DELEGATES

Visalia, Cal., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The California Republican assembly overwhelmingly approved a plan tonight to send an uninstructed delegation to the Republican national convention at Cleveland next June.

The action was considered an indorsement of the "harmony" move of Earl Warren, chairman of the Republican state central committee of 21, which recommended the state's delegation be uninstructed.

Work of naming an uninstructed delegation will be undertaken in San Francisco tomorrow by Warren's statewide committee. Whether Herbert Hoover will participate in the meeting has not been indicated.

The assembly approved the tentative and general character of a proposed slate of uninstructed delegates, whose names they did not disclose.

BRECKINRIDGE TO FIGHT ROOSEVELT IN OHIO PRIMARY

Lindbergh's Attorney Is New Deal Enemy.

Columbus, O., Feb. 29.—Col. Henry Breckinridge of New York prepared today to challenge the Democratic New Deal to a popularity contest in the Buckeye state.

C. A. Weinman of Columbus announced that he had received petitions signed by Col. Breckinridge, attorney for Charles A. Lindbergh to enter his name in the Ohio Democratic presidential preference primary, May 12.

He said he would put the petitions in circulation immediately to obtain the required 1,000 signatures from 30 counties before March 13 to qualify the candidacy.

No Bid for Delegates.

Col. Breckinridge maintained silence in New York, however, concerning his plans. His entrance into the state presidential preference primary does not carry with it a bid for convention delegates. Weinman indicated that no attempt would be made to obtain delegates pledged to the New Deal critic.

In Ohio, delegates to the national party conventions are elected in the primary, there being a separate presidential preference ballot on which voters may express their approval of presidential candidates.

Convention delegates are not bound to follow the results of the preferential balloting as they cast their votes in the convention.

Repudiation Is Charged.

Breckinridge, a member of the Liberty league, issued a statement last Sept. 2 in which he charged the Roosevelt administration with repudiating Democratic party traditions and principles. He proposed a coalition of "all elements" of voters to oust the New Deal "alien-minded adventurers."

In the meantime, Under Secretary of the Interior Charles West continued selecting a Roosevelt slate of delegates. This list will contain none but simon pure New Deal advocates.

TWO RIVERS HIT WHEAT FARMS; MENACE TOWNS

Beardstown, Ill., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Flood waters of the Sangamon river flowed over hundreds of acres of wheat fields today, threatening to wash out the entire winter crop between here and Taylorville. A stage of 16.9 feet in the Illinois river prevented the Sangamon from emptying into the larger river several miles to the north.

In 24 hours the Illinois river rose more than a foot and a half, with no sign of stopping. Should it reach 18 feet thousands of acres of farm lands in the valley will be inundated and many homes will be isolated. North and south of Peoria thousands of acres of lowlands along the river are reported under water.

Safe in Maumee Basin.

Toledo, O., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Residents of the Maumee river valley where relieved today when it became apparent the flood menace has been removed. Although a gorge formed in Maumee bay near several small islands, swirling river water this afternoon steadily was cutting a channel through the ice.

5 Deaths by Meningitis Close Tennessee Schools

Kingston, Tenn., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Four deaths in 16 days today caused an order of the Roane county board of health closing all churches and grammar schools here because of a meningitis epidemic.

At Smithville two weeks' quarantine on public gatherings was ordered in that town of 1,000 today after one death by spinal meningitis. The order affects churches, schools, and a movie house.

NEW YORK HITS ALL TIME HIGH AT $882,949,808

New York, Feb. 29.—[Special.]—New York City's cash receipts, exclusive of borrowings, reached an all time high of $882,949,808 last year, Controller Frank J. Taylor reported today, as against $761,454,395 in 1934 and a mere $627,397,283 in 1932.

However, the controler pointed out, this increase is due almost entirely to money raised in various ways for carrying on the city's relief program. For example, he explained, the state contributed $147,907,147 last year, whereas it gave only $10,000,000 in 1932. Most of the balance of the increase was obtained through the various city relief levies, notably the sales and utility taxes.

In all, the controler states, the city received $200,305,753 for relief last year, of which the city through its emergency taxes raised $52,398,606. It was pointed out that total did not include the final 1935 payments of the sales and utility taxes, which were not received until a month ago.

3 CONVICTED OF MURDER.

NOTED GERMAN OPERA MAESTRO WINS OLD POST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 29—Dr. Wilhelm Furtwaengler has agreed to conduct a number of guest performances at the State Opera house in Berlin during the coming season, it was announced today. This will not interfere with his appearance with the New York Philharmonic orchestra, which only covers half the season.

Musical circles predict that Dr. Furtwaengler's return to the Berlin State Opera house in August will be followed by his resumption of direction of the Prussian state opera. Furtwaengler resigned the directorship after his dispute with Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, over the production of operas of the composer Paul Hindesmith. The composer incurred displeasure of Nazi officials because of his marriage to a Jewess. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, in his capacity as Prussian premier, brought Clemens Krauss from the Vienna Opera house to Berlin to succeed Furtwaengler.

It is expected Krauss will go to Munich to take over control of the Bavarian State Opera in succession to Hans Knappertsbusch, who recently was compelled to retire because of his lack of Nazi enthusiasm.

VOTE ON HONEST BALLOT WILL BE SENATORS' TEST

Pass Bills, L. V. L. Urges as Demand Grows.

L. V. L. Report

The portion of the annual report of the Legislative Voters' league, which apply to Cook county districts are published in today's Metropolitan section of The Tribune. The report reviews the records of representatives and of senators whose terms expire this year.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.

Each of the 51 members of the Illinois senate was notified yesterday that his vote on the pending Schnackenberg-Hubbard-Brands permanent registration bills would be used by the Legislative Voters league as a test in judging his record.

As the league took this additional stand on the bills other civic, business and political organizations added their indorsements to the measures. The Citizens' association of Chicago and the State Republican Women's club of Illinois urged enactment of the bills. The Illinois League of Women Voters asked each senator to be in his seat when the bills are called.

The bills are pending on second reading, the amendment stage. The sponsors hope to advance the bills unamended to third reading on Tuesday and have the roll called on final passage the following day.

An Open Scandal, Says Message.

"It is notorious that the will of the voters is now nullified at every election in a number of wards of this city by false registration and illegal voting on a large scale," said the letter written to the senators by Paul Steinbrecher, president of the L. V. L.

"These bills, if enacted into law, will furnish the means of cleaning the registry lists of a vast number of illegal names and of preventing fraudulent voting."

Francis E. Broomwell, president of the Citizens' association, requested each senator to vote for the bills.

"This association, which has been active for many years in vote fraud prosecutions and in other efforts to make elections honest in Chicago, regards the success of these bills as vitally important to the public welfare," wrote Mr. Broomell.

G. O. P. Women Ask Enactment.

The Republican Women's club sent telegrams to Gov. Horner, Lieut. Gov. Donovan, and to Earl B. Searcy of Springfield, Republican minority leader in the senate, over the signatures of Mrs. David H. Jackson, president, and Mrs. Etta Cousin, secretary. The telegrams read, in part, as follows:

"If voters are to take an interest in government and support it, they must be given reasonable assurance that their efforts are not useless. We believe these bills will be a step in that direction."

A list of some organizations backing the bills was tabulated by the Illinois League of Women Voters.

Included in the list are the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, the Illinois Bar association, the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Peoria Association of Commerce, the Chicago Bar association, the Catholic Women's league, Chicago Women's Aid, the Chicago and Cook county Federation of Women's organizations, Advertising Post of the American Legion, the Chicago Recovery administration, the City club of Chicago, Junior Association of Commerce, Men's club of Sinai Temple, St. Philip Neri Women's club, West Central association, and the Women's City club.

TAXPAYERS JAM COUNTY BUILDING

Throngs of taxpayers jammed the county treasurer's office yesterday as the announcement was made that no extension of the penalty deadline for payment of 1934 real estate taxes will be made. The deadline falls at 3:30 p. m. today. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Last Chance Today

County Treasurer Joseph L. Gill announced yesterday that his office staf will be on duty from 9 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. today to receive payments without penalties on the second installment of 1934 real estate taxes. There will be no extension of time past the afternoon deadline, he warned.

"Under the law I have no choice in the matter," Mr. Gill declared. "Even if there is as large a crowd in line as thronged the office today, we will have to close up shop at 3:30 sharply, so if you haven't paid your taxes, get to the treasurer's office in the morning."

Mr. Gill announced distribution of $2,753,000 in 1934 tax collections to the larger governing bodies of the county. Chicago received the largest share, $1,300,000.

Yesterday 14,966 real estate tax bills were paid, a total of $1,396,420.21, of which $1,295,849.24 was for 1934 taxes and $100,570.97 for earlier years. During the week $8,160,522.06 in 1934 taxes was received.

PARIS, Feb. 29.—[U. P.]—The censors today banned showing of the motion picture, "Mutiny on the Nore," based on the Jack London book and produced by a French company. The censors explained that the picture was barred because there was no punishment for the mutineers.

AUSTRALIA LABOR PARTY FACTIONS END 5 YEAR SPLIT

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

CANBERRA, Australia, Feb. 29.—Australian laborites, desperately eager to win the federal elections in 1937, have buried their differences and become a united party for the first time since 1931, when the J. T. Lang and Scullin factions parted.

When the federal parliament reassembles next month the two sections will act together with a strength of 27, leaving the Joseph A. Lyons government a majority of 20. The conditions of unity are that the federal party's policy is to be observed, but some of the original federal labor party members fear the New South Wales member, who constituted a rival faction, will attempt to take control, aided by five members on the extreme left of their own party.

The cabinet of Prime Minister Lyons believes its election chances have been improved by the readmittance to the labor party of the radical members of the New South Wales faction.

LAXITY CHARGED IN MINNEAPOLIS LIQUOR LICENSING

Jury Criticizes Council; No Action on Vice.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—The Minneapolis city council has been lax in investigating eligibility of liquor license applicants, it was reported today by the Hennepin county grand jury. The jury made a final report ending a two month investigation into liquor license abuses. A new grand jury will be sworn in Monday.

"A substantial majority of the applications for licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors contained false and incorrect statements," said the report, handed to Judge Arthur W. Selover.

Strike Out Criticism of Police.

It contained no mention of a broadside which the jurors had been scheduled to direct at the police department. At the last minute a section criticizing the department for lax law enforcement was stricken. Two of the 23 grand jurors turned in a minority report recommending a program for future juries, but Judge Selover ruled he could not accept it.

The jurors made no reference to vice or other illicit activities which engaged the last days of its term. Its accomplishments include the indictment of nineteen liquor dealers on perjury charges, two police captains for willful neglect of duty, and five persons as a result of vice raids in Minneapolis' "Harlem."

Change in System Proposed.

The jury which retired today took up its work after a previous grand jury closed its term Dec. 31 with a report that this community "is in danger of being dominated by a lawless group." The earlier jury indicted Isadore [Kid Cann] Blumenfeld for the murder of Walter W. Liggett, weekly newspaper publisher. Cann later was acquitted.

Today's jury report recommended creation of an "investigation department" to verify all pertinent statements in liquor license applications.

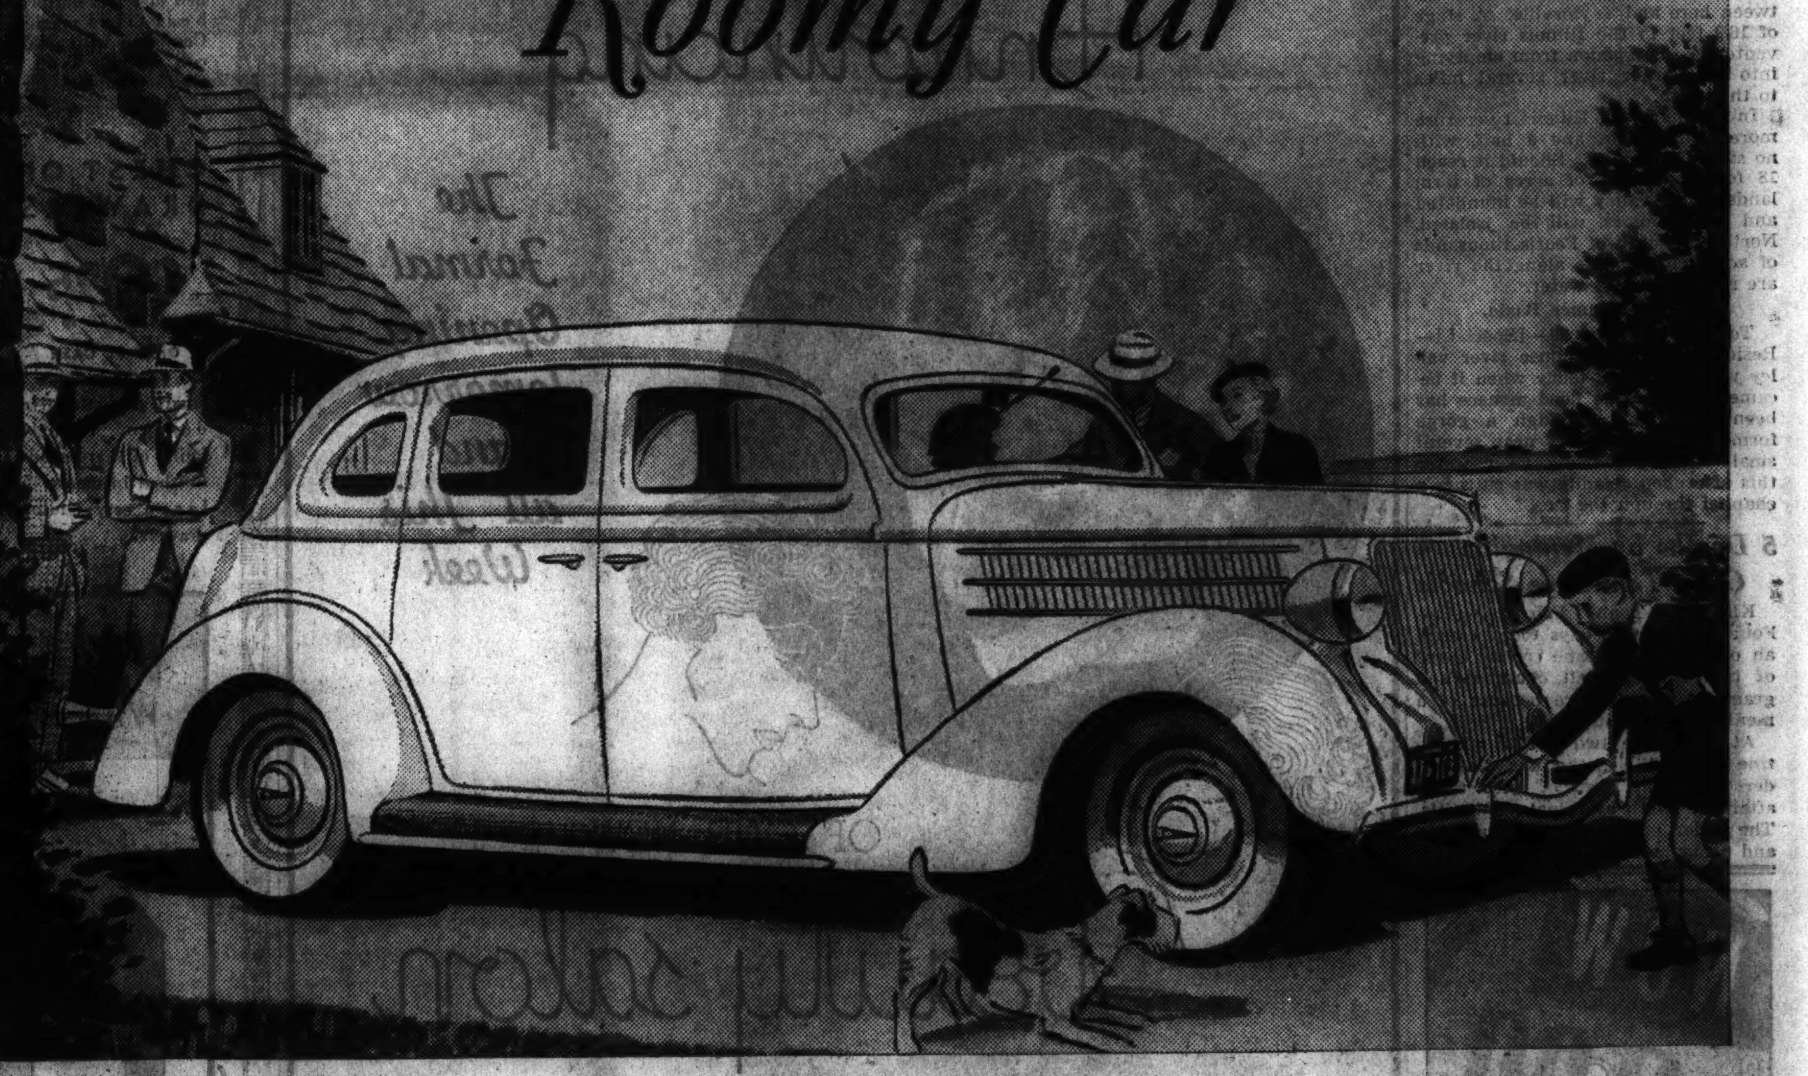
Today's Ford is an exceptionally Roomy Car


THERE'S a double advantage in having a V-8 engine in your car. It helps to give you fine-car roominess, as well as fine-car performance.
The Ford V-8 engine takes up less space under the hood because of its compact design. And it is positioned forward in the chassis, in accordance with the latest, most modern construction.
More of the car's length can thus be used for passengers—extra inches of leg room are provided in both the front and rear compartments.
Wide seats are another reason for the big-car roominess of the Ford. All seats in all body types (except the individual bucket-type front seats of the Tudor Sedans) hold three persons in comfort. The 1936 Fordor Sedans have 3½ inches more elbow room in the rear seat because the rear-quarter trim is recessed above the arm rests.
We'd like to have you ride in the Ford V-8 and see for yourself. Actual measurements will confirm your own impression of big-car roominess and comfort.

SEEK TO SETTLE SUITS CAUSED BY AIR MAIL FIASCO

U. S. Offers About Tenth on $20,000,000 Claims.

New York, Feb. 29.—[Special.]—That the postoffice department has been endeavoring for the last few weeks to settle suits aggregating about $20,000,000 brought by the air mail contractors as a result of the cancellation of their contracts early in 1934 was revealed here today.

This new angle of a controversy which has confused the air mail situation ever since Postmaster General Farley, with presidential approval, ordered the cancellation in February, 1934, came to light on the heels of the news from Washington that the investigation of the matter, conducted on behalf of the department of justice by Col. Carl L. Ristine, would exonerate the carriers for the "collusion and fraud" charges which were the basis of the cancellation.

Sudden Interest Is Shown.

Efforts at settlement, on the scale of a small percentage of the amounts asked, have been made, it was revealed, with Transcontinental and Western Air and with Eastern Air Lines, the only two major lines which have principal offices in New York.

The postoffice, it was explained, had evinced a sudden interest about six weeks ago, after a sustained attitude of indifference, in settling these suits for about the amount due the lines for their services in carrying the mail for the period after the announcement of cancellation until the order went into effect.

In the case of Eastern Air, this amount was said to be about $180,000, as compared with some $2,000,000 which the line seeks to recover because of cancellation of its contracts.

May Not Sustain Charges.

Air line operators, who refused to be quoted in the matter, put forth the suggestion that the efforts at settlement for about 10 cents on the dollar may have been prompted by the fact that postoffice officials had ascertained that the department of justice report resulting from Col. Ristine's long and exhaustive investigation would not sustain the charges of fraud or collusion, or indicate either civil or criminal wrong doing. The charges led first to contract cancellation, and later to new air mail legislation setting up rates of compensation which have since forced some contractors to operate at a loss.

The annual report of TWA, made last week, showed that while the company had made a profit equal to 3 cents a share on its capital in 1935, its air mail revenues had been cut by about $1,250,000 since cancellation of the contracts.

ROOSEVELT AVERTS RETIREMENT FOR THE SECRET SERVICE CHIEF

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—(AP)—William H. Moran, chief of the secret service today was exempted by President Roosevelt from compulsory retirement from the government service until Jan. 1, 1937.

Moran passed the civil service retirement age of 70 on March 17, 1934. President Roosevelt at that time extended his service. The executive order today said "the public interest requires" that Moran be further exempted from retirement.

Moran has been in the secret service, which is charged with the protection of presidents and supression of counterfeiting for 53 years.

PARIS POLICE ON GUARD AT BURIAL OF A RED RIOTER

PARIS, Feb. 29.—(AP)—As a precaution against possible clashes between communists and nationalists, several hundred police were on duty today at the funeral of a communist who died last Sunday of wounds received in the riots of February, 1934. The communist's death brought the toll of the "bloody Tuesday" riots to 32.

Police also lined the bridges and the river bank in the center of the city to guard against an outbreak of students.

The students have been demonstrating against police since they broke up demonstrations in the class room of Prof. Gaston Jeze, professor of law at Paris university, against his activities as legal adviser to the Ethiopian delegation to the league of nations.

U.S. WOULD RENEW BLACK TOM CASE AGAINST GERMANS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—(AP)—On the basis of new evidence—involving a mysterious affidavit—the United States will launch before the German-American mixed claims commission on May 12 an attempt to reopen the famous Black Tom and Kingsland world war "sabotage" cases.

The commission was revealed tonight to have set the mid-May date for hearing arguments on the American petition to lift the lid once more on those two explosion cases involving claims totaling $40,000,000.

At that time, representatives of this government will seek to put forward what was authoritatively described as based largely on an affidavit made by James Larkin, Irish labor leader.

If the commission—consisting of Chandler P. Anderson, American agent; L. F. H. Huecking, German agent, and Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme court, umpire—rules favorably to the United States, the "sabotage" cases will be reopened for submission of the new evidence.

WEDDING PAPER, WOMAN'S DIARY FOUND IN RIVER

A water soaked pasteboard box containing a woman's clothing, a diary, and a marriage certificate belonging to Mrs. Leta Pearl Coffman Baldwin of Gary, formerly of Benton Harbor, was found in the Chicago river near Polk street yesterday.

The diary, begun on Jan. 1, protested her love for her husband, John Griffith Baldwin, a farmer living at Watervliet, Mich. They were married Oct. 3, according to the wedding certificate, but the diary indicated they had not been living together. It told of Mrs. Baldwin's earning money and sending it to her husband to buy a tractor.

Policemen David Hickey and Peter Miller found the box after assisting coast guards in recovering the body of Edward Mundt, 63 years old, of the Lawson Y. M. C. A., who plunged into the river earlier.

PEDDLER ROBBED OF $35.

August Dangelo, 27 years old, 3750 South Union avenue, a fruit and vegetable peddler, complained to the Deering street police last night that two men in an automobile robbed him of $35 at West Thirty-ninth and Wallace streets last night.

The ANSWERS to questions we're often asked

WHO BORROWS?

Chicago men and women in every walk of life—over half a million of them to date. Here is a typical list, by occupations, of people to whom we have recently made loans:

Artist	Engineer	Musician
Accountant	Electrician	Newsdealer
Architect	Foreman	Nurse
Baker	Florist	Optician
Bookkeeper	Furrier	Printer
Butcher	Grocer	Painter
Cook	Garage man	Plumber
Carpenter	Housewife	Physician
Contractor	Iron worker	Roofer
Clerk	Janitor	Salesman
Chauffeur	Jeweler	Stenographer
Conductor	Junk dealer	Teacher
Decorator	Jobber	Upholsterer
Dentist	Locksmith	Vulcanizer
Druggist	Manicurist	Window trimmer
Draftsman	Machinist	X-Ray operator
Executive	Merchant	Yardmaster

HOW DO THEY BORROW?

Many people borrow on their automobiles. More of them put up stocks and bonds. But most people borrow simply on character—that is, their own signature plus the signatures of two friends. When the borrower receives his money a bank account is opened in this bank. He deposits a fixed sum each month, so the money is on hand to pay off the loan when it comes due. This plan turns borrowers into savers, helps people to get ahead in the world. That is one reason why thousands of Chicagoans endorse and recommend the lending policy of this unusual bank.

WHY DO THEY BORROW?

For every good reason under the sun.
Here are just a few of them:

To pay taxes	To pay tuition
To improve home	To pay union dues
To move family	To furnish home
To group debts	To pay church
To pay doctor bills	To buy trousseau
To assist parents	To buy clothes
To pay for insurance	To assist relatives
To buy a home	To modernize store
To buy a horse	To install plumbing
To pay undertaker	To buy out partner
To buy rooming house	To buy securities
To pay off mortgage	To repair automobile
To discount bills	To paint house
To pay attorneys	To visit relatives

HOW MUCH DO THEY BORROW?

Any amount required—$50.00—$250.00—$500.00—$1,000.00—$5,000.00 or more.

WHAT DOES IT COST TO BORROW?

Here are the costs and terms of one year character loans. If you care to put up banking collateral the costs are even lower.

AMOUNT YOU WANT	TOTAL CHARGE FOR ONE YEAR	YOU SIGN NOTE FOR	MONTHLY DEPOSITS 11 at	MONTHLY DEPOSITS 1 at
$ 100	$10.02	$ 110.02	$ 9.16	$ 9.26
200	19.55	219.55	18.29	18.36
300	27.58	327.58	27.29	27.39
500	36.91	536.91	44.74	44.77

DO THEY PAY BACK?

We try never to lend a person more than he can reasonably be expected to repay. Our terms are generous, our rates are low and our method of dealing with people is fair and liberal. As a result, in practically every case borrowers are able to repay us Johnny-on-the-spot.

SAVINGS ACCOUNTS INVITED

We also safeguard the savings of thousands of Chicagoans. This is a strong State bank, a member of the Federal Reserve System, and of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation which insures each depositor's savings up to $5,000. And we pay 2½% per annum compounded semi-annually—that is higher than the prevailing interest rate in Chicago.

LEAP YEAR DAY GIRL OFFICIALS JAIL BACHELORS

Aurora Is Taken Over by Husband Seekers.

Aurora got a new deal yesterday when a bevy of "personable unwed" girls ruled the city on leap year day. More than 100 bachelors, designated as public enemies, were "arrested" by "Chief of Police" Helen Thompson, and all were thrown into a narrow cell in the city jail.

They were arraigned before "Magistrate" Jean Harrison, who imposed fines on every man except Attorney Thomas O'Malley. He pleaded not guilty, asserting that he had proposed marriage to "Jailer" Dorothy Ward, and that she had refused him. The others were forced to provide a variety of feminine desires, including flowers, dresses, silk underwear, brassieres, hose and candy.

Drive Truck to Real Fire.

During the day the bachelor girls had a city council meeting, directed trafic, and even drove a hook and ladder truck to a real fire.

In Chicago Sidney Summerfield, chief clerk of the county marriage license bureau, said 126 couples applied for licenses, more than twice the number of last leap year day, in 1932.

Miss Ann Krakowki, 22 years old, 4437 Thomas street, and Bruno Grabowski, 22 years old, 1836 South Kimball avenue, were married by Circuit Judge William J. Wimbiscus of Spring Valley, sitting in the Marriage court. "Think of the money we will save on anniversary presents three out of every four years by not having any," they said. Mrs. Agnes Danielson, 48 years old, 902 North Central Park avenue, and Arnold Dahl, 46 years old, of the same address, were also wed in Marriage court.

The first leap year baby was a girl born to Mrs. John Krzak, 25 years old, 2649 West Cullerton street, in the Lewis Memorial hospital a few seconds after midnight.

Twins were born in the same hospital to Mrs. Roy Watson, 32 years old, 3573 Dickens avenue.

Two Celebrate Together.

Mrs. Rebecca Van Baalen and Mrs. Hermine Kohn, both widows, celebrated their 80th birthdays together at the Home for Aged Jews, 6140 Drexel avenue.

Open house was held at the home of Mrs. Alida MacNeil, 2855 Berteau avenue, on the birthday of her mother, Mrs. Marie Lungershausen, 88 years old. Jeanne Rasmuson, 4 years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rasmuson, 3330 North Ridgway avenue, celebrated her first birthday.

BELIEVE $30,000 STRADIVARIUS IS HELD FOR RANSOM

New York, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Police tonight searched eight states for a $30,000 Stradivarius violin, stolen from the dressing room of the Polish violinist, Bronislaw Huberman, last night when he was playing a concert in Carnegie hall.

While they continued working on the theory that the instrument was held for "ransom," they said no demand for money had yet been made.

Because of the conspicuous design of the violin and the small disposal value police said they did not believe the thief intended to sell it.

The fact that six bows valued at $9,000 were left behind led the authorities to believe the thief was not a musician and did not know the value of the bows.

The violin was insured by Lloyd's for $30,000. The insurance company was notified of the theft today before Huberman left for Chicago to keep a concert engagement.

Charge Woman Book Agent with $1,000 Pay Fraud

Judge George B. Weiss issued a warant yesterday in Women's court against Mrs. Frances Jacobs, 45 years old, 4117 Madison street, former sales woman for Book House for Children, 360 North Michigan avenue. The warant charges that in the final three months of 1935, Mrs. Jacobs obtained a total of $1,026 in commissions on orders which the company alleges were false.

'LEAP DAY' RULE OF WOMAN GOES BACK 600 YEARS

Oberlin Co-Eds 'Date' Their Teachers.

New York, Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Leap day, which comes once every four years, tacked on as an extra day in February, is an outgrowth of computations by Julius Cæsar's astronomers in the year 46 B. C., settling the solar year at 365 days 6 hours.

The custom for women to "get their men" during leap year, and particularly on Leap day, seems to have no satisfactory explanation, although it was made a legal prerogative in Scotland as far back as 1288.

Whole Town Celebrates.

Leap day developments yesterday included:

In Oberlin, O., undergraduate men of Oberlin college grumbled and wives of faculty members were widowed as co-eds followed the college tradition that women students shall "date" their instructors on Leap day.

In Taunton, Mass., George and William Chace, twins, who worked at the same bench in a factory for half a century, observed their fifteenth birthday.

Leap year births included:

Sons, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Huebner of Coatsburg, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. George Winters of Quincy, Ill.

Bloomington Residents Celebrate

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Mrs. Minnie Miller of Bloomington celebrated her 18th actual birthday today, but she was born as the civil war was ending, Feb. 29, 1864."

Mary Elizabeth Chapman of Chenoa observed her first natal anniversary today, although born in 1932.

U. S. Grant Fey of Mackinaw had two candles on his cake today. He is in the third grade at public school.

TWO LEAP YEAR BRIDES TELL HOW THEY PROPOSED

New York, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Leap year reaped 149 marriage licenses in Gotham today, but whether prospective brides had used their quadrennial right of "popping the question" was a secret in most cases.

The throng was such that extra police were detailed throughout the day.

First in line were Joseph Slabinsky, 23 years old, and Julia Kachelnik, 23, of Boston, both natives of Russia. Julia stood right up and told everybody how she did the proposing.

"We had been to a romantic movie," she said, not a bit abashed. "I said 'Why don't we get married, Joe?' Joe said 'Sure, dear,' and that was that, and here we are."

Joe grinned, nodded his head, and said: "Sure, sure, honey."

Along came Conrad Donis, 22, and Paulina Ramirez, 21. Paulina, too, admitted it was she who had popped the question.

SENATORS FIGHT OVER AUTHORITY TO OUST ALIENS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Senators clashed angrily today as a committee heard a charge that the immigration service was "lobbying" for greater discretionary authority in deporting "undesirable" aliens.

H. L. Chaillaux, national director of Americanism for the American Legion, declared immigration service agents were making speeches in favor of the Coolidge-Kerr bill for deportation of foreign born criminals because it would give the department more discretion than a rival bill by Senator Robert R. Reynolds [Dem., N. C.].

"It is unfair for them to go about the country advocating this bill," said Chaillaux. "They ought to go back on their jobs."

Earlier Senator Reynolds had protested that witnesses opposing the Coolidge-Kerr bill were being "cut short" on their time before the senate immigration committee.

"If the witnesses are to be rushed," he said, "if they are not to be availed of an opportunity to talk and others are not to be allowed to question these witnesses, perhaps the best thing to do is to withdraw."

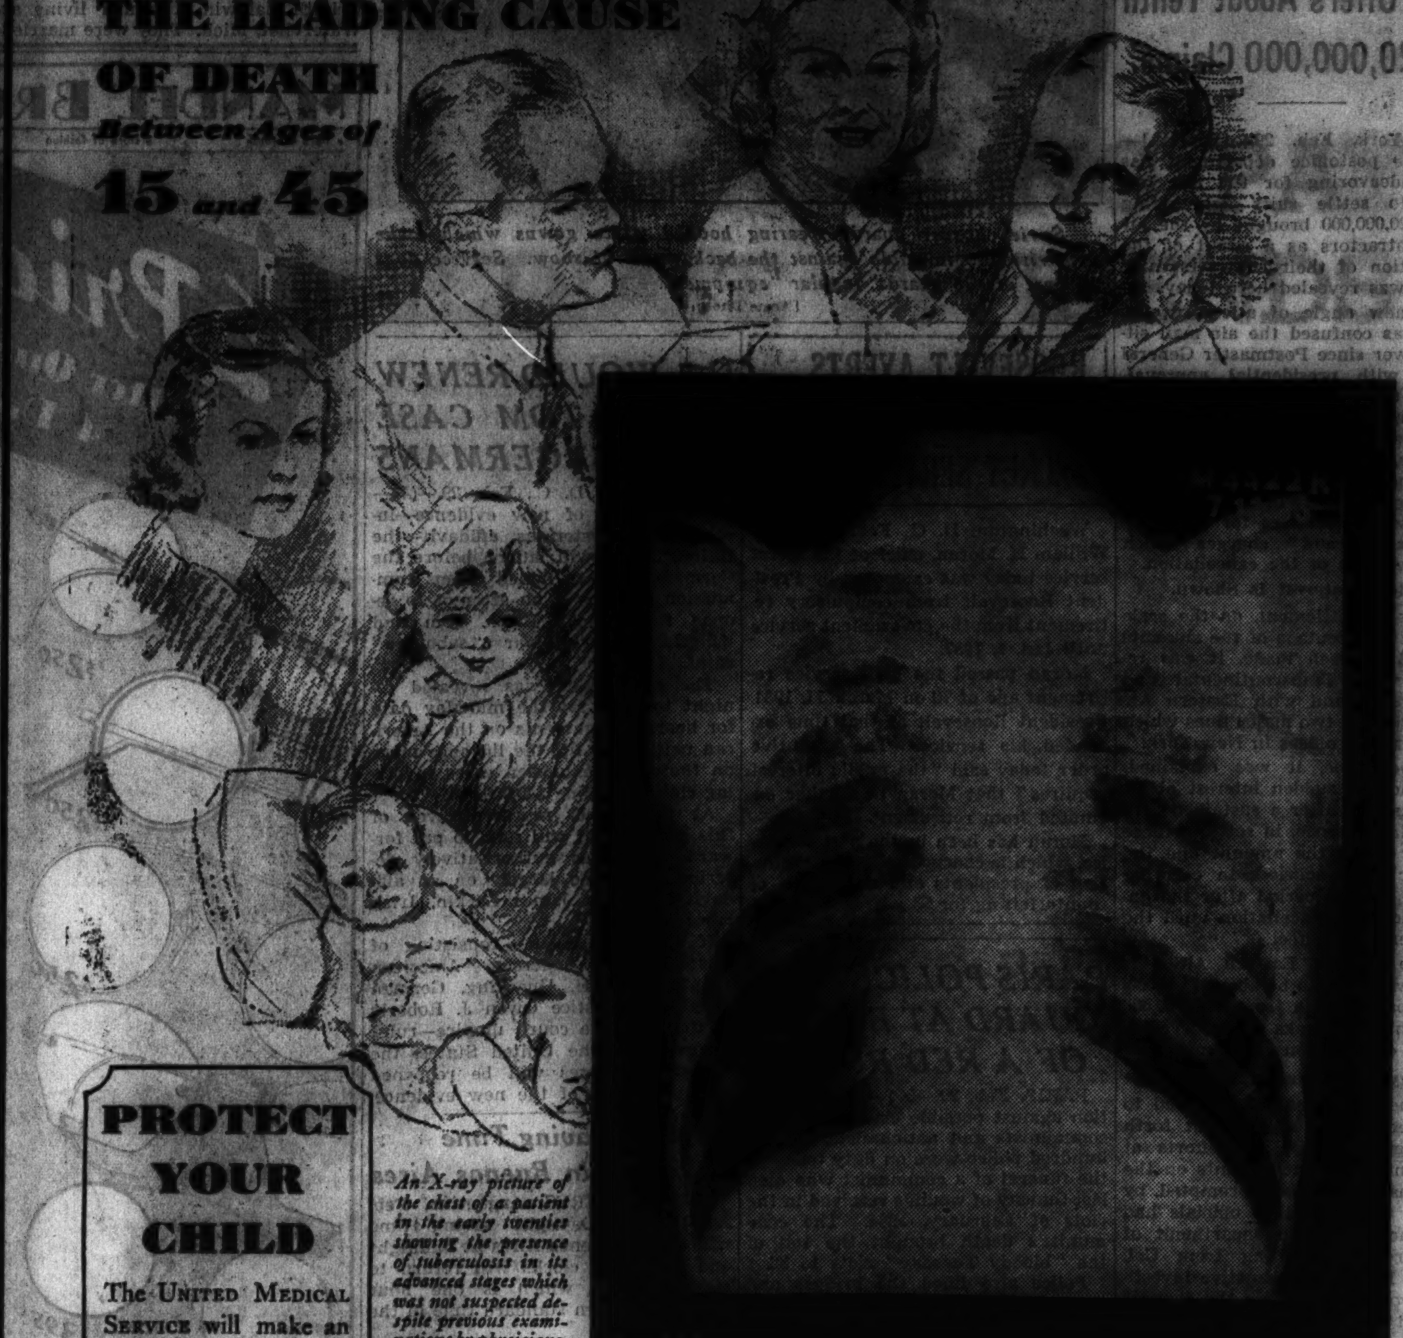
Tuberculosis
THE LEADING CAUSE OF DEATH Between Ages of 15 and 45



An X-ray picture of the chest of a patient in the early twenties showing the presence of tuberculosis in its advanced stages which was not suspected despite previous examinations by physicians.

PROTECT YOUR CHILD
The UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE will make an X-ray examination of the chest of every child of school age for $1.00

Nearly 100,000 persons died of this terrible disease last year

TUBERCULOSIS is increasing—the battle of prevention must continue unabated. Experience shows that the slightest let down costs additional lives and suffering. Read these startling facts about this dread disease so that you can protect your own health and help to protect the health of others. Tuberculosis is the leading cause of death between the ages of 15 and 45. Everyone is a potential victim for nearly everyone harbors tuberculosis germs at some period during their life time. Most infections take place in early childhood. The germs can be dormant in the lungs for years until suddenly, without warning, they may multiply and begin their devastating attack upon the delicate tissue of the lungs. When active it is highly contagious. Active tuberculosis often follows a period of lowered bodily resistance occasioned by sickness, undue exposure and under-nourishment, or it may appear in the strong and healthy. Tuberculosis is a most insidious disease. There are no definite early symptoms to sound a warning of its presence. A sensation of fatigue or tiring easily is often the only sign. But no one need die from tuberculosis. If detected in its early stages it readily responds to proper treatment and can be arrested before serious damage to health has occurred. An X-ray picture of the chest is the only certain method of diagnosing the earliest traces of the disease. The old familiar practice of listening to the lungs and thumping the chest cannot disclose early or incipient tuberculosis, in fact this method has failed to detect it in its more advanced stages.

Since the inauguration of UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE X-ray examinations are easily obtained and at low cost. Thousands of X-ray examinations have been made, many disclosing the presence of tuberculosis in patients who had no previous knowledge or suspicions that they were infected. As early detection provides the only means of controlling the development of tuberculosis every individual is urged to have an X-ray examination of the chest at least once a year when in normal health, and more frequently if the body has been weakened by sickness, exposure, overwork, or under nourishment. AS MOST TUBERCULOSIS INFECTIONS TAKE PLACE IN CHILDHOOD, PARENTS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SAFETY OF THEIR CHILDREN.

EXAMINATIONS and treatments are rendered by competent and experienced medical men with special knowledge and training in their respective fields of medicine and registered by the State of Illinois. Modern medical facilities including the newest and most complete X-Ray equipment in the middle west, a modern and completely equipped medical laboratory and other necessary scientific apparatuses lend additional value to their diagnostic and treatment service.

ANN HEWITT'S MOTHER FACES FELONY CHARGE

Suicide Attempt Violates New Jersey Law.

Jersey City, N. J., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter, mother of sterilized Ann Cooper Hewitt, was held a virtual prisoner in the psychopathic ward of the Medical center today on a charge of attempted suicide and for possible extradition to San Francisco in connection with the alleged mayhem committed on her daughter.

Police were on guard at the hospital where the wealthy woman was found last night recovering from an overdose of a sedative. The ward is cut off from the rest of the hospital by three steel doors and all windows are barred.

Suicide Attempt Is Felony.

Police charged her with being a fugitive from justice and attempting suicide. The latter is a felony in New Jersey. Police also were presented today with a warant charging her with mayhem which had been sent to New York police by San Francisco authorities.

Hearing on the attempted suicide charge was set for March 6, when if she is able to appear, Mrs. McCarter will be told a charging of being a fugitive from justice has been filed against her in New York.

New York police had sought Mrs. McCarter for more than a month on the warant which charged that she duped her daughter into submitting to a sterilization operation. Last night it was learned she had been in the Medical center since Feb. 21 under the name of Mrs. Jane Merritt of Boston and previously had been registered at a hotel under that name.

Civil Suit Defended.

A Medical center physician, summoned to her hotel after midnight on Feb. 21, found her unconscious on her bed, overcome by the sedative she had been taking for her nerves. Deputy Chief of Police Charles Wilson said she had attempted suicide.

Mrs. McCarter is a defendant in a criminal complaint and a $500,000 civil suit initiated by her daughter as a result of the alleged sterilization operation. Ann, who is 21 now but was a minor when the operation was performed, charged that her mother wanted to prevent her from having children who might share in a fortune left by her father, Peter Cooper Hewitt.

Will Demand Extradition.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Assistant District Attorney August Fourtner announced today he will take steps for the immediate extradition from New York of Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter, charged with mayhem for a sterilization operation on her daughter, Ann Cooper Hewitt, 21.

Drs. Tilton E. Tilmann and Samuel E. Boyd, likewise charged, will appear March 6 before Municipal Judge Sylvain Lazarus, who will decide whether to hold the defendants to trial before Superior court.

DROWNS IN LAKE

FRANK DURKIN.

Frank Durkin Jr., 12 years old, 3000 Arthington street, was drowned yesterday when he broke through the melting ice on the lake between Northerly Island and the mainland near the foot of 14th street. Two companions made heroic efforts to rescue him.

Durkin with the companions, Vernon Hicks, 11 years old, 2736 Arthington street, and his brother, Earl Hicks, 12 years old, had stopped at the Shedd aquarium and the Field museum when they decided to visit the Adler planetarium on the island. The two Hicks boys crossed on the foot bridge to the island, but Frank ventured out on the ice, kicking it to see how strong it was.

"Come on, it's strong enough," he called to his companions. Just after he shouted the ice gave way. The two Hicks boys ran to the shore. Vernon took off his belt, handed it to Earl, who tossed the end of it to the struggling boy in the water who caught it. Vernon then grabbed Earl by the heels and pulled, but the belt slipped from Frank's grasp and he disappeared.

Frank was in the fifth grade of Our Lady of Sorrows school, 3121 West Jackson boulevard. His father is a city employé. There are two other brothers and three sisters in the family.

JOHN D.'S HEALTH REPORTED GOOD 'FOR A MAN OF 96'

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—John D. Rockefeller is in "excellent health for a man of 96, it was said today at his winter home, "The Casements.".

Living in strict seclusion, Mr. Rockefeller recently abandoned the daily automobile rides which of late years have given townspeople their only glimpse of him.

The home provides a cozy retreat for his declining years. A central heating plant keeps the temperature equitable. A small elevator eliminates climbing stairs. Spacious grounds provide ample room for the flowers of which he is fond.

Occasionally Mr. Rockefeller's leisurely routine is enlivened by a visit from a member of the family or an old friend.

GET CONVICTIONS IN 95 PER CENT OF FEBRUARY TRIALS

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley announced yesterday that 95 per cent of the cases brought to trial in Criminal court during February resulted in convictions.

Court attachés pronounced this the best record in more than half a century. Convictions seldom reach more than 70 per cent for a month.

In his report Prosecutor Crowley said there were 130 guilty verdicts obtained during the month, with only seven acquittals. Of the number convicted, 100 persons were sent to the penitentiary, four to other state institutions, and 17 to the Bridewell.

Nine defendants, or only 7 per cent of the persons brought to trial, were placed on probation.

Sixty-six convictions were for robbery with a gun, carrying sentences of from one year to life in the penitentiary, Crowley reported, while there were thirteen convictions obtained on burglary charges, which carry the same sentences.

Although the crime figures for the month are not complete, Crowley declared that the number of crimes committed would be considerably lower than in past months. This he attributed to the increased vigilance of police and the state's attorney's office, and the coöperation of the courts. The recent extreme cold wave also kept crime at a minimum, he said.

During the month only 104 indictments were returned by the Cook county grand jury, the lowest in many years. Automobile thefts, Crowley said, would average less than eight a day for February, which compares to an average of 17 a day during the last year and 97 a day at the start of the automobile theft campaign in 1932.

Mr. Crowley praised the work of the judges and of Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle.

Has Death Date Set Up to Keep Spiritual Advisor

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Barney Flemming, colored, condemned murderer, arranged an earlier date for his death today to avoid losing, in life, the counsel of his spiritual adviser, the Rev. FEDERAL YOUTH AID IS UNSOUND, SAY EDUCATORS

Ignores Basic Principles, Resolution Holds.

A resolution charging the National Youth administration, the New Deal educational agency, with "neglect of sound educational principles" was adopted by the Progressive Education association yesterday at the close of its annual session at the Palmer house.

Although the possibilities for constructive planning and intelligent leadership of youth through federal agencies are boundless, the resolution stated, the National Youth administration "has so far failed to realize the potentialities of its opportunities through neglect of basic principles."

Other resolutions urged the cooperation of educators in safeguarding freedom of speech, of the press and of education.

Family Life Still Vital.

The fact that family life still remains a primary factor in enriching the life of the child was stressed at the closing session by Evelyn Mills Duvall of the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education.

"In recent years," she said, "there has been an inclination to lose sight of the importance of the family factor because of the advances made in formal educational methods, but now the value of family life again is recognized.

A plea that educators and parents quit "taking too rapturously" the artistic expressions of children was made by Mrs. May Hill Arbuthnot of Western Reserve university.

"A few gyrations do not make a Pavlowa, the 'Iceman's Song' does not make great music, and the child's story about 'The Little White Bed' is not great literature," she said. "Let's not over praise our children's works of art, but let us by all means build up an environment that fosters self-expression."

Hard to Be "Creative."

During the three day session speakers from all over the nation urged the educators to put creative arts into the schools and keep them there.

To all of these, E. O. Melby, dean of the school of education of Northwestern university, replied yesterday:

"As teachers we are commanded to be creative, yet how can we be? We are told to give freedom, but you know that the average school of America is not based upon democracy, but upon dictatorship and autocratic control.

"We are told that we must maintain the correct curricula which should help us select leaders for American democracy—and yet those who urge that are themselves utterly ignorant of what democracy is."

What is the most influential force in the life of the child? "The parent," said Edna Dean Baker, president of the National College of Education. Teachers are second; associates third, and, in diminishing order, the radio, motion pictures and books.

FIRE DESTROYS WHEEL, RIM CO. IN INDIANAPOLIS

Indianapolis, Ind., March 1 [Sunday].—(AP)—Fire which started in the near north side district early this morning destroyed the Indiana Wheel and Rim company and damaged 11 other businesses occupying the same building. A third alarm brought nearly 100 firemen to the scene.

One fireman was overcome. Two members of a salvage crew were injured when their truck collided with an automobile en route to the fire.

The wheel and rim company was the heaviest loser, the total loss being estimated at $100,000.

The building occupied nearly a quarter of a block. Spread of the flames was halted by streets and alleys.

CRIPPLED GIRL PROMISED AID BY ROOSEVELT

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Dorothy Porter, 15, thinks President Roosevelt is "swell" because he has promised to help her go to the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia.

The story of how Dorothy, who has been afflicted with infantile paralysis since she was 6, obtained an audience with the President here last week, became known tonight.

For hours she shivered in the cold awaiting his arrival. When he came Police Chief Timothy J. Leahy arranged a meeting.

Recounting the experience, Dorothy, who lives with her mother and grandfather on welfare aid, said:

"He was swell. Maybe things will be different soon. Maybe I'll be able to swim all I want to next summer."

BEAR 35 MILES FROM BROADWAY.

CHICAGO DEATH RATE FALLS 3% TO 10.1 PER 1,000

Chicago's death rate last year was 10.1 per 1,000 persons, a decrease of 3 per cent from the 1934 figure, according to the annual report of Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner, made public yesterday. In the report Dr. Bundesen observed that the average death rate for 88 large cities in the United States was 11.6 last year, 13 per cent higher than the Chicago rate.

As one reason for the drop in the Chicago rate, the report pointed to the infant death rate which declined from 47.7 per 1,000 births in 1934 to 40.1 last year. The 1935 infant death rate for the 88 other large cities was 22 per cent higher than Chicago's.

The report also mentioned the substantial decrease in automobile and other accidental deaths which it attributed in great part to Mayor Kelly's "Keep Chicago Safe" campaign. During 1934 there were 2,433 persons killed by automobiles or other accidents, while last year there were 1,890.

Suicides were reduced 7.6 per cent in 1935, and homicides 28 per cent.

Commenting on the possible effect of the depression on death rates since 1930, Dr. Bundesen reported that in the five years ending Dec. 31, 1930, the death rate from all causes in Chicago averaged 11.25 per 1,000 population, while since that time it has averaged 10.07 per 1,000. He said that prior to 1930 the suicidal death rate per 100,000 was 16.6, while since that time it has reduced to 16.2.

Heart disease headed the list of all single causes of death, being responsible for 28.5 per cent of Chicago deaths last year.

THREAT OF GENERAL STRIKE IS MADE BY AKRON LABOR UNIONS

Akron, O., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The Central Labor union designated tonight a committee empowered to call a general strike in Akron if force is used to break the blockade at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company.

Leaders of all organized labor met in closed sesison. A committee of 25 was authorized to act in connection with the strike which has halted all operations at Goodyear for two weeks.

A subcommittee of 13 was appointed to call upon the sheriff, mayor, police chief, and county prosecutor and advise them of the labor unions' position and determination.

CARRYING A BUCKEYE Prevented Rheumatism IN THE GAY '90'S

Great faith was placed in the Buckeye or Horse Chestnut in Grandfather's time. Carrying one was believed to be sure protection against Rheumatism. So popular was the superstition that Buckeye watch fobs were the vogue for years.

RHEUMATISM TODAY is attacked at its source. Medical science knows that infected teeth, tonsils and sinuses—specific diseases like Tuberculosis, Syphilis or Gonorrhea—Metabolic and Allergic disorders, are all sources of Rheumatism, Arthritis and Neuritis.

OFTEN THE PHYSICIAN is handicapped in making a thorough diagnosis of Rheumatism because the patient can not afford the outside laboratory and X-Ray procedures which are necessary, but expensive.

THE CIVIC MEDICAL CENTER has lowered medical costs—and is able to give the person of average means the full advantages of modern medical diagnosis and treatment at fees he can afford.

The Civic Medical Center is prepared to assist the family physician in his diagnostic problems.

"If you're looking for an apartment, take this tip from me!"

RADIO ARTIST TELLS HOW HIS LONG SEARCH FOR MODERN, SMART, WELL-LOCATED APARTMENT COULD HAVE BEEN MUCH SHORTER

By CARLTON BRICKERT

"AS a special narrator and character player engaged in radio work, I have to keep engagements at broadcasting stations at many hours of the day and night.

"We had been living in a house in the suburbs, but I found it inconvenient getting to town and back at all hours. We decided to give up the house and take an apartment close to town.

"We wanted something smart and modern in a well-kept building close to transportation. Finding an apartment which met all of these requirements soon proved to be a large order. We spent a great deal of time driving around, just looking—with no results.

"Finally We Thought of The Tribune"

"Finally we thought of looking in the Tribune want ads. We read them every day and made a few calls from time to time. One day we saw a want ad which caught our eye. It described a 6-room apartment in the 1400 Lake Shore Drive Building. My wife marked it and I cut out the ad and put it in my pocket.

"At the first opportunity I dropped in at the office of Elmer A. Claar, 1400 Lake Shore Drive, rental agent for the building. Mr. Arado of that office showed me the apartment. I recognized at once that it was the one we wanted.

End of Search!

"I had to go back to the studio for another engagement, but I called up my wife and she drove in and looked at the apartment the same day. She called me back and said, 'That's it!' So we signed the lease and moved in. We are very well satisfied with the apartment.

"We began our apartment hunt the wrong way. Consulting Tribune want ads first is the way to find the kind of apartment you want."

A new note in apartment arrangement—the combination dining and living room in the Brickert apartment.

"Occupancy Reaches New High Peak Through Tribune Want Ad Campaign"

"We recently decided on a rental campaign for our 1400 Lake Shore Drive building, and scheduled ads of fifty lines to run exclusively in the Tribune each day for forty consecutive days.

"Each of these ads covered an entire price range from small apartments at modest rentals to larger and more sumptuous units. We are glad to say that the results of this campaign far exceeded any returns we have ever had when our appropriation was used to cover various mediums.

"Tribune advertising certainly pays. We have had a most gratifying dollars-and-cents return, and our building occupancy will be at a high peak for many months to come as a direct result of this campaign."

(Signed) ELMER A. CLAAR,
1400 Lake Shore drive.

TURKISH JUSTICE TURNS NEW LEAF; FREE FOREIGNERS

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Feb. 29.—Turkey, a nation whose courts 15 years ago were deemed too anti-foreign to be intrusted with the trials of non-Turks, today acquitted seven foreigners and one Turk of plotting to take the life of President Mustapha Kemal Ataturk. And the verdict was received by the nation with general satisfaction as proving the fairness of Turkish justice.

The story of this strange case, unusual, if not unique, in Turkish annals, began seven months ago with the announcement of the discovery of the plot. A confession was announced and a wave of indignation swept the country against the accused. As the trial advanced, however, the indignation turned into skepticism and finally to relief at the outcome.

Circassians Involved.

The foreigners involved were Circassians, a people of the western Caucasus known in history for physical beauty and their custom of selling their most beautiful girls in slavery to the Turks.

The confession was said to have been obtained from a Circassian named Yahya. Arrested in Turkey, he is alleged to have told of meeting Circassian political refugees in Palestine and Syria who dispatched him and six colleagues to Turkey armed with guns and bombs to slay the president. He was to get final orders from Ali Saib Ursavash, a member of the Turkish parliament.

Before the Ankara criminal court, however, Yahya, Ursavash, and the six other defendants pleaded not guilty. Yahya declared that he had made his "confession" under torture.

Dramatic Events Follow.

There followed dramatic and, for a Turkish court, unprecedented developments. The examining magistrate denounced the prosecution. No evidence whatever was produced against the accused, he averred. He added that if the case had not been of national importance he would immediately have thrown it out of court.

Despite the vehement protests of the Ankara district attorney, the magistrate held his ground. And acquittal came after three weeks of hearings.

"The accused stated that their confessions were extracted under pressure, and that statement has not been disproved," the court ruled.

GOVERNOR FIRES GEORGIA REGENT OF UNIVERSITY

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge today ousted his 13th state official since becoming Georgia's executive as he heard reports of planned court tests of his financial "dictatorship." The governor today demanded in vain that banks release $2,000,000 of impounded state funds, held up after his suspension of the state treasurer and controler.

Gov. Talmadge removed Marion Smith, Atlanta attorney, and chairman of the board of regents of the University of Georgia system from the board and named David I. [Red] Barron, one time Georgia Tech football star and now a college president, to succeed Smith.

This was the third ouster since the governor issued a proclamation setting up his "dictatorship" less than two weeks ago. Previously he suspended Treasurer George B. Hamilton and Controler General William B. Harrison.

An injunction suit against the highway board and the de facto treasurer seeking to prevent diversion of highway funds to general purposes was presented to Superior Judge J. H. Hawkins at Marietta. As the judge was injured recently in an auto crash, he suggested the case be taken elsewhere.

CHILE PRESIDENT ASKS NEW POWER; 17 SEIZED IN PLOT

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 29.—(AP)—The government ordered the arrest tonight of several more persons allegedly involved in a revolutionary attempt to seize power, after 17 had been held today.

President Arturo Alessandri requested congress to meet in extraordinary session Tuesday, to "discuss a bill granting the president extraordinary powers for the defense of the state and preservation of the constitutional régime."

Jose Manuel Cerda, secretary general of the Socialist party, who was charged with posting revolutionary posters in Valparaiso, and Juan Antonio Rios, radical deputy, were among those arrested.

WE GO ON EASTERN TIME TODAY.

Perhaps no subject of public discussion can provoke so much heat as the topic of standard time zones, principally because of imperfections in the system itself. It assumes to divide the surface of the earth into strips one hour wide, which, of course, is perfectly satisfactory to only those few communities in which a noon median divides the working day into equal parts. Even then certain trades will be dissatisfied—as outstanding examples, the milk distributor and the tavernkeeper. Years ago standard time was called "railroad time" and at its inception encountered quite as much opposition as has daylight saving time from the supporters of mean local time, often referred to as "God's time." It took a Scotch-Canadian a matter of 15 years to make a sale of the theory to the authorities, but once established, curiously enough, standard or railroad time became "God's time."

As automotive transportation, better roads, and improved communication commenced to knit the country more closely together, many people began to realize that they were attempting to sleep through valuable hours of sunlight, with no greater benefits than an abbreviated evening. The theory of daylight saving for summer months gained ground as an incomplete and not wholly satisfactory restoration of the old idea of a mean local time. While country towns with their affairs still tangled in railway schedules did everything to resist it, all large cities finally adopted a by-law that had the effect of setting clocks forward one hour for a six month period of each year.

With the power of the railways to control local affairs entirely broken in the city and rapidly waning at intermediate points through the growth of individual and independent transportation, other groups commenced to think of all year eastern time for Chicago, to extend the benefits of daylight saving time. Under such a plan the great majority of the people could have daylight to travel both to and from the store, office, or factory. It is true that during a period of possibly two months in midwinter daylight barely stretches from seven to six, but why permit this short period to govern the rest of the year? When the plan was launched by Ald. Cronson the board of education and the Parent-Teacher association appeared to support eastern time on behalf of 300,000 school children. Automobile groups, as well as the judge of the Trafic court, testified as to the assistance that would be rendered in battling death and accidents on our streets. Labor groups, retailers, real estate men, air lines and business—in fact, representatives of practically every walk of life—appeared during a two day hearing to testify in favor of the resolution, with the only voice of protest coming from those who place selfish interest above the public weal.

This is an age of increasing independence, and railway service no longer governs our lives. The more flexible forms of transportation, including the private automobile, are available and we can enjoy the health giving sunlight, even if in doing so there is a conflict with railway schedules. As was successively the case with standard time and daylight saving time, the opponents will eventually see the advantage of a clock time that most nearly coincides with mean local time; i. e., the habits of the people.

After several days of hearings in Chicago the interstate commerce commission has under further consideration the request of the city council that eastern standard time be extended to certain railroad operations here. If the request should be granted the railroads affected and the city would have a common clock. Toward the close of the hearing it was intimated by a railway witness that the adoption of eastern standard time might make it necessary for the railways to lighten their trains, increase the number, and run them one hour faster. As one of the complaints against railway travel is infrequent service, this result would prove beneficial to both the public and the carriers.

The first experiment with daylight saving proved its popularity. In the war it was used as an expedient to conserve resources and energy, an expedient which argues that it has essential value. If majorities had not liked the new time arrangement from the start it would not have prevailed. It would have been discarded. In November, 1920, the people of Chicago voted on it and 353,000 voted to keep it and 291,000 voted no. Six years later there was another test and the favorable vote was 340,000, the opposition dropping to 180,000. From time to time the period of daylight saving was increased. It came to an end too soon in the autumn. It did not begin early enough in the spring. The council consulted popular desires when it passed the eastern standard time ordinance embracing the entire year.

Chicago and the territory about it now begin a schedule of more daylight. A majority of the the citizens want it and the number liking it will increase.

MILITARY DOGMATISTS.

Though he writes dispassionately, a sharp criticism of the American command in the last war is implied in an article in the Field Artillery Journal by Col. Conrad H. Lanza. He writes as a student of military science. His tone is suggested by his title, "The Artillery Support of the Infantry in the A. E. F."

Col. Lanza sketches the training of the artillery before and during the war. He explains the preconceptions regarding the rôle of artillery which were in the minds of the general staf; he explains how false, in his opinion, these notions were; he intimates how severe and needless were the resultant losses, and finally he shows that it was not until mid-October, 1918, almost on the eve of the armistice, that the high command finally and reluctantly began to concede that it might have been wrong, and began to take the advice of men at the front who had known all along what was wrong but had been forbidden to apply their knowledge because it ran counter to the general staf's dogma.

It appears from the colonel's recital that the general staf of our army was determined to force the enemy into a war of maneuver. It believed that the infantry could bring about this result. The dogmatists conceded that to break through a first line position artillery support was necessary, but beyond that the infantry was to advance on its own. If it then met opposition it was to isolate and subdue it without artillery support.

The artillery was regarded, therefore, as subordinate at all times to the infantry. It was to blast the enemy out of their first line trenches and then to cease firing for fear of hitting the advancing American infantry. Practical experience with these tactics quickly proved their weakness. A few men with machine guns could hold up the advance and repeatedly did so. Col. Lanza notes that after the first advance as few as 75 men with machine guns could hold a kilometer of front against our attacking infantry. The immediate losses were seldom heavy because our infantrymen promptly took cover, but by doing so they were immobilized and became perfect targets for enemy artillery fire. Thus thousands of our men were needlessly killed and wounded, Col. Lanza believes, because of the refusal to let our artillery play on the enemy's deeper defenses.

While our men were being slaughtered our artillery which could have saved their lives was silent, waiting for orders to fire which often failed to arrive and always arrived too late. As Col. Lanza puts it, "punishing enemy machine guns and batteries after they have been located by firing on our troops may benefit others following us, but it will not bring back to life dead infantrymen and may fail to bring a victory."

Our command persisted in these tactics in face of the fact that the same ideas had been abandoned by the English as suicidal and by the other allies as soon as they had acquired enough artillery to give their infantry proper support. The tactics which we were just learning to use in October, 1918, had been employed with marked success by the Germans fully a year before.

"Our pre-war instruction," says Col. Lanza, "had taught the limitations of artillery. But its possibilities were almost unknown. . . . This led to an inferiority complex as to the ability of the artillery to do anything decisive; it was always some other arm which was to bring about the decision. The artillery was considered an auxiliary, sometimes useful, never necessary, and sometimes a nuisance. . . .

"Bloody losses assisted in proving that driving back the enemy a few kilometers did not necessarily mean that he would be on the run. . . . We tried to bring about open warfare; so did every other nation strong enough to adopt the offensive. We never succeeded [in France] and no other nation succeeded until toward the end of the war."

Space is lacking to give in detail some of the instances of blind folly which Col. Lanza lists. They expose the deficiencies in the education of trained officers and more especially a stubborn refusal to learn from experience.

Editorial of the Day

FOR THE LOWLY, TOO.
[Illinois State Journal.]

Almost ignored, because of the importance of the TVA ruling, was the declaration of the United States Supreme court that "the rack and torture chamber may not be substituted for the witness stand" in a decision which set aside death sentences imposed on three Mississippi colored appellants, convicted of murder. The decision grants them a new trial.

Chief Justice Hughes in his decision referred to testimony that confessions were obtained by hanging one of the appellants from a tree for a time and whipping the others while naked with a rubber strap with buckles on it. A deputy sherif was alleged to have been present both times, with two other officers attending the whipping.

One of the current proposals to limit the court's jurisdiction would act to prevent individuals from bringing their pleas before the justices. Had this been in effect the torture chamber would have gone unreproved and its victims would have been executed. This decision serves as a strong reminder that our highest tribunal gives justice to the poor and lowly as well as the affluent.

THE CONSTITUTION AND THE NEW DEAL

(Address by Monie Appel of the St. Paul Bar.)

I.

Mr. President, Members of the Union League Club of Chicago. Gentlemen: I count it a very real honor to be here today as the guest of so distinguished an institution as the Union League Club of Chicago. And at this time when the country is about to enter upon an era of high debate, I view it also as an opportunity to make some small contribution to the clarification of the basic issue which will be the subject of that debate. And hence I have chosen as the title of my address today "The Constitution and the New Deal."

The constitution is a short document which can be read aloud in twenty minutes, but it set up a new system of government which had never theretofore existed in any nation at any time. This system of government, which has come to be known throughout the world as the American system, was built upon two unique conceptions. The first of these was that of a federalized union.

When the war of the revolution had been won and the treaty of peace signed the thirteen colonies became thirteen free and independent nations. Each of them possessed and exercised over its territory and its people that complete sovereignty which marks a member of the family of nations. When they undertook to form a more perfect union they gave up to the federal government a certain portion of that sovereignty, but they retained another and very essential portion of it. They thus set up in the territory of each state two separate and independent governments, each exercising sovereignty over the same territory and the same people at the same time. This system of government, without prototype in the history of organized society, could function only if the line between the powers of the federal government and the powers of the several state governments could be drawn with reasonable exactitude.

Certain definite powers were, therefore, delegated to the federal government. They are not many, and in order that you may perceive concretely the intensely nationalistic character of all of them, I wish to enumerate them. They are the power to raise and support armies; provide and maintain a navy; punish piracies; conduct foreign relations; declare war and make peace; make treaties; levy and collect taxes; coin money; punish counterfeiting; borrow money; establish postoffices; enact a uniform bankruptcy law; enact a uniform naturalization law; fix the standard of weights and measures; grant patents and copyrights; regulate foreign and interstate commerce.

* * * *

The federal government is thus one of enumerated powers. It has the foregoing powers expressly delegated to it in the constitution and no other powers. All powers not expressly delegated to the national government are reserved to the states or the people. And in order that there might be no future misunderstanding about it the tenth amendment to the constitution explicitly so states.

The founding fathers well knew De Tocqueville's famous dictum that > Local institutions constitute the strength of free nations.

By reserving to the states full power over matters of local concern they intended to preserve and perpetuate local government, without which there can be no democracy.

When matters affecting only a local area are administered by public officials appointed from a far-off national capital it means that such public officials are responsive to the will of the national capital. And it means that the people who live in that area live under a government which is not responsive to their will as to matters which affect only them. This is the very negation of democracy.

This first basic principle that matters of national concern shall be administered from the national capital and that matters of local concern shall be administered by local governments responsive to local will is of the essence of the American system of government. In the words of the great chief justice, John Marshall, it is > . . . a principle which so entirely pervades the constitution, is so intermixed with the materials which compose it, so interwoven with its web, so blended with its texture, as to be incapable of being separated from it without rending it into shreds.

Therefore, if we would preserve the American system of government, we must preserve this first basic principle of a federalized union.

The second unique conception upon which the American system of government was built was that of a separation of powers within the federal government.

The government of the United States, as set up by the constitution, is divided into three separate and co-equal branches—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial. The legislative power, which is the power to make laws, is vested in the congress. The executive power, which is the power to administer laws, is vested in the President. And the judicial power, which is the power to construe and interpret laws, is vested in the Supreme court and the inferior federal courts. Each of these coördinate divisions of government can exercise only the power which is vested in it, and no one of these three divisions can ever exercise any of the powers vested in either of the other two. That is the principle of the separation of powers.

The American system of government was the very first to put this principle to work as a practical mechanism in the affairs of men, but it was not new in the realm of ideas. Philosophers, searching for some means of protecting the citizen against the arbitrary and capricious use of governmental power, had been thinking about this principle of the separation of powers for more than two thousand years before the constitutional convention assembled in Philadelphia. It had been discussed by Aristotle walking with his pupils in the grove at Athens. With the coming of the Renaissance and the reawakening of interest in the classics of the ancient Greeks it was revived by Bodin, one of the greatest of French lawyers. Locke took it up and wove it in as a part of the philosophy of natural law, which is the philosophy in which Jefferson was steeped and from which he took his statement in the Declaration of Independence that every citizen has certain inalienable rights which no government can justly invade. Kant, never outside his own little German province and yet influencing profoundly the thought of the world, advocated a separation of the powers of government as a practical bulwark against tyranny. And finally Montesquieu, having toured the then known world as a student of government, published in 1748 his Spirit of the Laws, one of the most important books ever written, and gave to this doctrine of the separation of powers the impetus which sent it into the constitution of the United States. We know this because we know that there were in the colonies at the time of the revolution over 2,500 copies of this great book. We know the names of many of the men in the constitutional convention who had it in their libraries, and in many instances we know the very comments which they scribbled with their own hands upon the margins of the leaves.

The founding fathers knew well the bloody story of humanity's long struggle against the forces of arbitrary and oppressive government. They were thoroughly familiar with the polity of England under the Tudors and the Stuarts, when the consolidation in the hands of one man of the power to make laws, to execute laws, and to judge laws, enabled him to crush out the liberties of Englishmen. They embedded deep in the American system of government the principle of the separation of powers to the end that no man and no set of men might ever be in position to crush out the political and economic liberties of the citizens of this republic.

HOW ARE YOUR SINUSES?

MANY of us have two or three colds each year. If a day or two in bed winds up each affair, well and good. We may assume that fortune has smiled upon us. But if the cold persists—if strength returns slowly—it is practically certain that bacteria have decided to take up their abode in some one of the mucous lined spaces in the skull.

Attention has been called to the hollow chambers that lie in the cheek bones. They form a part of the sinus system and are subject to invasion by pus producing organisms with stoppage of the normal discharge. When this occurs pain results and the patient is ill.

For the most part these sinuses cannot empty by gravity, inasmuch as the drainage opening is at the top. Fortunately, however, the mucous lining, if not diseased, possesses cilia [hairlike projections], which help sweep secretions outward. In addition, when we breathe, air currents create a sort of vacuum, drawing out the contents. It is obvious then that under normal conditions, that is, in the absence of infection and when the patient is breathing through the nostrils, the sinuses will remain healthy.

Let us see what happens when microorganisms enter upon the scene. The nasal passages may become so swollen and inflamed that breathing must be through the mouth. This deprives the sinuses of the sucking action of the currents of air. Furthermore, if the mucous membrane becomes irritated the outward sweep of the cilia is stopped. Pus may, therefore, accumulate and absorption take place.

Many physicians believe that with the onset of a cold not only the nose but the sinuses become involved. There is great engorgement of the blood vessels and increased activity of the mucous glands [catarrh]. During the acute period ventilation of the sinuses is lessened, but resumes its normal state with the subsidence of the inflammation. Whenever recovery is delayed there may be some mechanical obstruction to the outflow of pus.

Acute infections may become chronic with a long continued chain of undesirable symptoms unless proper management of the condition is instituted. First there must be rest in bed, with sufficient moisture in the air of the room. Any operative procedure or mechanical interference is rarely warranted at this stage. In fact, patients are cautioned against blowing the nose other than with the utmost gentleness.

There is no drug that can be introduced into the nose or used as a spray that will relieve the condition quickly, and the wisest course to follow is to build body resistance to the highest possible point. If the nose is completely stopped so that air can neither enter nor leave via the nostrils a small amount of ephedrine may be used by the physician to shrink the mucous membrane. Occasionally a weak solution of sodium bicarbonate or sodium chloride [common salt] will help loosen and wash away the accumulated mucus and pus.

Many authorities advise the removal of the stored up pus, after the acute symptoms have abated, through washing out the pocket [antrum]. The opening necessary to admit the tip of a syringe is made with as little injury as possible, although in some cases enlargement of the natural doorway will be required. Great care must be taken not to harm the thin bones of the nasal cavity [the turbinates]. By means of the increased size of the outlet drainage may be free, aided by currents of air during the act of breathing.

We can understand then that any cold is a possible forerunner of sinus trouble. Prevention demands rest in bed in the acute stage. This is the quickest and best method of building resistance. Fresh air comes next in importance, and as convalescence dawns the patient should walk out of doors for an hour each day. If sunshine is available so much the better. If not, ultraviolet from an artificial source may be used with good effect. Breathe through the nostrils, and if the air is clear [not smoke or dust laden] deep inspirations may be taken.

WHOOPING COUGH.

F. J. B. writes: During my 83 years I have been exposed to whooping cough many times. I have never been inoculated. Recently, after having a severe case of whooping cough in the house for six weeks, I was taken with a choking cough. My physician inoculated me with the serum and after the second shot the paroxysms ceased. Many express no faith in the serum. What is your opinion?

REPLY.

Whooping cough vaccine, if carefully prepared, is of value in preventing the disease. It is not 100 per cent perfect, however, but then few things are.

As a curative measure the vaccine is probably of slight value.

GALL BLADDER INFECTION.

G. L. S. writes:

1. What causes a streptococcic infection of the gall bladder?
2. What are the symptoms?
3. Is an operation necessary?

REPLY.

1. It is commonly caused by infected teeth, tonsils, or sinuses. The gall bladder is subject to inflammation by many types of bacteria.
2. Pain, usually in the right side of the abdomen, nausea, and fever.
3. An operation is often though not always necessary.

FALLING EYELASHES.

A. G. writes:

1. Why do eyelashes fall out?
2. Will they grow back?

REPLY.

1. Probably disease of the hair follicles.
2. Not if the follicles have been destroyed. Usually inflammation will subside without destroying the roots. Certain eyelash and eyebrow dyes are toxic to some persons.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY ANDREAS BACKER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OSLO, Norway.—One of the most discussed political reforms in Norway under the Labor cabinet is the tax on interest derived from bank deposits. This was recently passed by parliament and sanctioned by King Haakon.

All taxes on income or property in Norway—whether payable to the state or to the community—are calculated on the basis of returns made by the taxpayer himself. He has to submit a statement every January showing how much he has received in earned income during the previous fiscal year, and the total amount of his financial and property wealth at the end of that year.

For many years the public authorities have realized that not all amounts were given out, especially in regard to bank deposits. Since the banks are under no obligation to reveal how much depositors have to their credit on the books, it has been impossible to escertain how many millions have been set aside in this way to avoid taxation. The statistics bureau has estimated the annual amount to be about $300,000,000.

Late last year the Labor cabinet proposed a bill to parliament allowing a direct tax on all interest which individuals derived from bank deposits. In the face of opposition from both conservative and liberal parties, and even from some radical members, this bill was passed. A few days later the new law was sanctioned by King Haakon, and it was immediately put into operation by the communities.

In brief, the law provides that twenty-five per cent of the interest on deposits is to be paid over in tax. For example, should a bank give an interest rate of four per cent, one quarter of that would go to the government under the new tax.

An important feature of this new development is that the new tax will not be paid through the taxpayers—it will be retained by the bank, and be paid by them directly at the end of the fiscal year. Since the new law covers also the incomes of last year, depositors will suffer a heavy blow when substantial sums are deducted from their balances for interest accrued during 1935.

The cabinet expects this tax to produce about $4,000,000 annually, of which $2,000,000 will go directly to help communities in financial difficulties, while the other half will be distributed among the communities in general according to special quotas.

Americans having money on deposit in Norwegian banks, and Norwegians living in the United States, will not be affected by this reform. It applies only to nationals living in Norway, and upon industries and business concerns within the country.

The Bank association, when the bill was proposed, advised parliament not to vote for it on the grounds that it would result in a withdrawal of money by lesser depositors, who would buy instead tax-free state bonds. The answer to this was that the banks had to choose between this law and another proposing that banks should be forced to give out the names and balances of all depositors. To this the Bank association objected.

After the bill was passed small investors and depositors immediately started withdrawing their funds and buying tax free state bonds. This movement has been so strong that it is expected that before long a law will be proposed providing that persons holding state bonds must pay a tax on their interest.

TERMS OF WILL.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My father died in March, 1935. There is supposed to be a will in which I am mentioned. As yet I haven't seen it, nor has it been probated. 1. What steps shall I take to see the will? 2. When must it be probated? My stepbrother has the will. 3. How can I make him produce it? There is real estate. He is collecting the rent. 4. Can he be made to account for this money?

H. S.

1. Notify the custodian that if he does not file the will with the clerk of the Probate court, you will take steps to enforce penalties against him.

2. It seems probable that probate can be entirely dispensed with.

3. See 1.

4. Where owners of undivided interests in real estate cannot agree, any one of them is entitled to force a division or a public sale by partition proceedings. The cost of such proceedings, including the complainant's solicitor's fees, are chargeable against the proceeds of sale.

WHERE TO PROBATE?

Edgewood, Ia., Feb. 21.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A parent died in Oregon, where she has resided for thirteen years, leaving three children, and owning real estate in Iowa, including her former home property which has been rented during her absence. 1. Can her will be legally probated in Iowa? 2. Can she will her property to one child, cutting off the other two, in Oregon? 3. What inheritance taxes would accrue in Oregon, the property being valued at possibly $3,500? 4. Could a daughter, resident of Oregon, legally act as administratrix in Iowa, if the will could be probated in Iowa?

N. D.

1. The primary probate should be in Oregon, but subordinate proceedings could be had in Iowa.

2. Yes.

3. It would be exempt.

4. It is a rule of practice to require an executor or administrator to be a resident of the county where the estate is being administered. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

Manchester, Ia., Feb. 21.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My father was a Canadian who came to this country about 1877 and has lived here ever since. I have just found out that he has never taken out his American citizenship papers. Both my brother and I were born in this country. Father is very old and has acquired some property. 1. We are wondering what bearing the above fact would have when he passes on and the estate is settled. 2. What procedure must my brother and I go through to become citizens and protect our inheritance?

W. B. H.

1. We would not anticipate any serious consequences.

2. Children born in this country are citizens by virtue of the United States constitution.

SPEAKING OUT OF TURN.

Menomonie, Wis., Feb. 25.—Today we read Gen. Hagood is being disciplined by order of the President for remarks made under stress in a congressional investigation, where speakers were urged to speak frankly.

Granting Gen. Hagood's remarks were out of place, our President, when irritated by a Supreme court decision, made remarks which were out of place. It is human nature to forget oneself when under a strain. Surely the situation presented by Gen. Hagood would drive any man in his position distracted. United States soldiers under his care, enlisted to serve their country to the extent of sacrifice of life if necessary, are not being properly housed and necessities for their comfort are lacking. In the same area federal money is being lavishly spent in providing luxuries for CCC men. Gen. Hagood couldn't get a broken steam pipe fixed in the soldiers' quarters but flagstone walks are provided for CCC camps.

Putting your self in his position, do you wonder he spoke out of turn? And now relieved of duty in that area he awaits further orders from the President! One might expect similar conditions in Rome, Berlin or Moscow, but not in our United States—the land of the free.

ADALIN WRIGHT MACAULEY

MUZZLED OFFICERS.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—So Gen. Hagood is a martyr in the eyes of the Republican TRIBUNE because he happened to be punished by a Democratic administration.

Has THE TRIBUNE forgotten that another martyr was crucified by a Republican administration for the same reason? Another Republican administration double-crossed a general of the marines, also, because he couldn't keep his mouth shut.

A soldier is taught to obey orders and keep his thoughts to himself. A general is not immune to this rule, so as an ex-marine it is my belief that Gen. Hagood violated the 19th article of war and should be punished accordingly, regardless of the party in power, and no paper should make an issue of this.

CAN'T SAY.

Chicago, Feb. 21.—What became of the fellow who used to come around to shovel snow and cut grass? Is he boondoggling or did he go to Washington? I have not seen him for a couple of years.

PETER GODFREY.

SECURITY.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—To obtain anything worth while calls for effort, so any one expecting old age security without effort, via the Townsend or any other ultra-utopian plan, will and of right ought to be sadly disappointed.

Twenty years ago the people believed the accumulation of wealth would prepare them to meet old age, but that theory has been disproved; we have seen how quickly people can be reduced from a state of financial independence to poverty.

So it follows that security lies not in the accumulation of wealth which can suddenly desert you, but in an accumulation of education and experience which cannot desert you; for example, you may have $100,000 today and nothing tomorrow, but if you are a doctor today you will always be a doctor.

It follows that with the educational facilities available in our country there is absolutely nothing to stop a person who is willing to put forth effort in his own behalf from being secure in his old age without the aid of government pensions or charity.

BERT WEBSTER.

HOW ABOUT THE MONEY TO RUN IT?

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Would it not be possible for the board of education to establish a university in the square occupied by the old Criminal Court building, funds for such project to be obtained from the national government?

The entire university could be housed in a tall building. The construction would give employment in all the building trades. The location would be central and accessible. It would offer a university education at a smaller cost and would allow the students to live at home. The small additional cost for education could be borne by the average family and would also absorb the large body of high school graduates that cannot find employment or are unable to attend the university away from home.

FRANCIS J. GANNON.

PRECEDENT.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—What was it that Col. Teddy Roosevelt did during the Spanish-American war? My mind is a little hazy, but if I remember correctly, his attack on embalmed beef was a violation of army ethics. Just the same he won out. When the administration jumps Mr. Hagood, why not cite the above in full detail?

RADIO WRITING A SPECIALIZED, TECHNICAL ART

It's Toil, Not Flashy Ideas, That Put It Over.

Points for Beginners

Radio broadcasting, an industry born only sixteen years ago, has become the center of interest for millions of people. James O'Donnell Bennett has prepared three articles dealing with phases of radio after having spent many hours in the offices and studios of W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune radio station, watching the work of preparing and presenting the hundreds of varied programs. The first article follows:

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

"How can I get into writing plays for radio?"

When that is not the first it is pretty sure to be the last question asked by hundreds of the more than one hundred thousand visitors who since October have gone behind the scenes of radio in THE TRIBUNE's new temple of radio adjoining Tribune Tower.

They behold a plant as big as a battleship and as delicately adjusted as a Swiss watch.

They learn that the plant cost more than half a million dollars. In the transcription room, where music and drama—recorded on phonograph disks—are played for broadcast programs, they see several small record playing machines costing a thousand dollars each.

They are told by the guides that the potential number of listeners to W-G-N programs every nineteen and a half hours is about eleven and a half million, which is nearly 15 per cent of the total number of radio listeners in the United States.

Efficient Staf of 200.

They follow the swift, quiet, accurate work of a staf that numbers two hundred instrumentalists, singers, and actors, and eighty-four production men, continuity writers, program men, engineers, office executives, and clerks.

Observing the vast extent and variety of this model plant's facilities, many a visitor says: "This is the road to fame and fortune. I will write a play for radio."

Especially are women captivated by the opportunity, for this is a field where women compete on equal terms with men.

The result is that Francis Coughlin, one of W-G-N's continuity writers, gives interviews every week to from twenty to thirty persons whose ambition is to write plays for radio.

Go with Mr. Coughlin behind the scenes of radio and you learn many an interesting fact about the rapid development of a new technique in play writing.

Fanciful Notions Rampant.

There is a great deal of dazzling fable and a great deal of sobering fact about radio script writing.

The fable runs that an untried writer breezes into a radio studio and presents an idea or a script over which the experts promptly go into ecstasies.

The fact is that most radio scripts are very carefully planned to appeal to a radio audience in a very definite way. They are not haphazard inspirations. They represent hard work by competent writers. "Despite all the amazing gadgets we have at our command," said Mr. Coughlin, "and despite all radio's technical advances, radio shows are written with the same old human brain. They can't be done by machinery and they are not patented stuff poured out of a can."

The Old Brain Runs Down.

There is a saying among continuity experts that everybody has at least one script in his system, but that ninety-nine and nine-tenths of those who say, "I will write a play for radio," cannot carry a show through five days for thirteen weeks—thirteen weeks usually being the time unit in the contracts which sponsors of a show make with a broadcasting station.

A five-day-a-week show running for thirteen weeks means sixty-five distinct episodes lasting fifteen minutes each. No episode can be padded with description. Each must pop with drama and carry the story definitly forward.

Sometimes the thirteen week units pile up into years. "Painted Dreams" has been on the air about 5 years. The inventiveness required for such spinning out of a tale would soon have exhausted the resourcefulness of such masters of plot as Scribe or Clyde Fitch.

A Big Plot of Little Plots.

Every green radio writer thinks he requires but one plot to carry him through a thirteen week whirl, but what he does require is one big plot with more than threescore episodes constantly developing his main plot.

Nor, in the long tug, is plot the only essential thing. One essential thing is character. As Mr. Coughlin put it: "Huck Finn would be as interesting on the Yangtze-kiang as he is on the Mississippi."

The requisites for a successful radio play are, therefore, a constantly developing plot with characters human and vivid enough to carry the story. Beautiful language and weighty dialog expounding weighty themes—as in many a French play—will not carry it.

Like Writing 4 Novels a Year.

Few newcomers in the field of radio drama realize the tremendous volume of copy they must turn out. It takes twelve pages of typewritten dialog to make a fifteen minute show or episode. Three, five, and sometimes six different episodes of a drama are presented every week. "Painted Dreams" is presented six days a week and its author, Miss Kay Chase, writes a new episode every day for the drama that has been on the air for four or five years. This means the writing of about half a million words a year, or the equivalent of four novels of the so-called "popular" type.

A rapid, gifted writer will often compose an episode in two hours. Another, not less gifted—indeed perhaps more so, but by nature a slow worker—will toil over his task all day.

Radio does not pay writers as well as the movies do. The average price for a script of five episodes is $150. Or, to estimate the rewards on the basis of a weekly wage, the pay comes to $150 a week, for the work is so intensive and exacting that no writer likes to do more than five episodes a week.

Veterans Lack Advantage.

This kind of writing is so new that there is no standard price. A five episode script that is extraordinarily novel may bring much more than $150.

The older writers of stage drama have little success in radio drama. They elaborate too much and are unable to keep step with the fast, exact pace of the new medium.

How exact the pace is may be judged from the fact that each fifteen seconds of the time required in presenting an episode is marked on the manuscript. When the dialog is light and airy, five or six typewritten lines will use up fifteen seconds, but if it is serious thirty seconds will be required.

All through the presentation the timing is very strict. Never can more than a fifteen second leeway be allowed. A radio drama must begin and end in the time scheduled for it. There is no holding the curtain while the star—as one notable American actress used to do—finishes her entr'acte game of cards.

Continuity is of these three types:

1. The dramatized story, or what we have been calling "radio drama."
2. Program continuity, which is a running description of a prize fight, race, or ball game, or the telling of what a symphony to be presented by the orchestra is like, how many movements it contains, and who its composer was—a Borowski program note in brief, so to speak.
3. Sales talk.

In some respects the last is the most difficult, because, badly done, it is the quickest resented, the most pitilessly shut off. To cajole is bad, to plead is worse, and to bully is worst. "Straight, honest talk," said Mr. Coughlin, "does more selling than all the trick stuff in the world. Brevity should be the soul of the commercial announcement—and it seldom is. A sales talk should run not more than three minutes in a fifteen minute program. Prolixity defeats itself."

Guff Just Doesn't Go.

In Canada, where radio is state controled, the government has limited sales talk to a minute and a half of a fifteen minute program.

Nor is Mr. Coughlin much for dramatic passion in "commercials." "Many a woman selling soap," said he, "thinks she's Sara Bernhardt and wants to emote. That does not move any goods. And frantic insistence on 'charm' soon tires the listener."

Type two—program continuity—sounds easiest, but requires great skill and knowledge if it is to be done well. Here the person preparing the material for the air can't know too much about his subject, and he is supposed to know about a multitude of subjects. He must be swift and accurate in research, and then pack hours of research into a few minutes.

A Word or Two of Caution.

And now type three, which so many of W-G-N's visitors want to write and think they can.

Perhaps many of them can do the writing. But can they bring a masterful touch to those parts of their radio drama where there is no writing? In other words, the pauses. The newcomer should study the power of radio silences. The pause can be made electrifying and gripping, and a dead silence more effective than the loudest sound or the most ornate cluster of words. But the tendency is to crowd a script with stylish words. That is a mistake, because the listeners are not allowed time to study and enjoy a jeweled sentence.

What they want is the situation in broad colors, laid on swiftly. The themes that grip them and that they can easily follow are love, valor, adventure, and the great common denominator, humor. "Mystery stories," said Mr. Coughlin, "are not so hot in radio because the audience has no time to study out the mystery. And many a radio drama flops for the lack of a villain. There must be black and white."

Time and the Target.

Even the time of day is considered when radio drama is offered.

Afternoon shows run to romance because then the audiences are mostly women. Men, slippered and at their ease at home, like dramas of adventure.

But W-G-N's experts have found that there is no hard and fast line between men and women listeners. Their listening reactions are the product of their education and environment rather than of sex. A song well sung and a tale well told make the universal appeal.

Next Sunday's story of behind the scenes at W-G-N will tell of the new, quick firing type of young actor that radio is developing.

FARMERS TAKE 20 CENT CUT IN PRICE OF MILK

Officials of the Pure Milk association, bargaining agency for more than 14,000 dairy farmers in the Chicago area, announced yesterday that they had accepted a reduction, effective today, of approximately 20 cents a hundred pounds in the price paid to their members for fluid milk.

The Chicago milk dealers have been paying PMA members 50 cents a hundred pounds more than the general market price paid for milk by condenseries and other processors. Recently this has amounted to about $2.11 a hundred for fluid milk. The new rate cuts the price paid to farmers to 30 cents above condensery quotations for 85 per cent of base, or about $1.91 a hundred at the present market.

Sparrow Fires Church; Flees as Alarm Sounds

Ocala, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—An English sparrow menaced the First Methodist church building with fire today when it picked up a lighted cigaret and flew with it from the street to its nest in the eaves of the church. The bird flew away when the alarm sounded. Should he come home he would find his nest in ashes and a big hole chopped in the roof by firemen.

WPA TO RESUME WORK TOMORROW ON CITY'S PAVING

Tour Discloses Permanent Gains in Program.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

The city's repaving program under federal Works Progress administration auspices, which was halted by the zero waves, will go ahead with a full force of men tomorrow morning Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt announced yesterday.

Nine thousand WPA laborers and 1,100 union asphalt workers paid by the city constitute the working force. Up to Jan. 12, since which time operations have been virtually suspended because of the weather, the WPA gangs had torn up 83.3 miles of asphalt paving—1,466,985 square yards.

59.3 Miles Is Repaved.

City asphalt laborers had laid new paving on 59.3 miles of these streets, and had laid the lower, or binder course of pavement, on an additional 4.4 miles. The whole paving program, depending on how much can be done before WPA activities are terminated, contemplates relaying about 500 miles of city pavement.

Work on many other WPA projects was resumed last Monday. A dozen of the construction projects were visited during the week with a view to determining what, if any, permanent benefits the city is to have when the spending of the WPA millions is terminated.

The list of projects visited was furnished by WPA headquarters. The inclination of any organization to put its best foot forward would suggest that those described are at least average, and probably above, in their potentialities of permanent usefulness.

Run by Competent Bosses.

Whether the projects are worth the money being spent on them is, of course, something to be determined in the accounting office rather than the field, but the field inspection did disclose that the work is being run by engineers of experience and competence. Some project superintendents, drawing $250 a month, formerly earned $12,000 to $15,000 a year for private employers, or were themselves successful contractors, their superiors say.

These superintendents, almost without exception, were frank in discussing the virtues and faults of their men and the problems of transforming relief "clients" into useful workmen. It was possible to verify many of their statements by observation.

Labor Below Standard.

It was generally agreed that WPA labor at $55 and up a month is less efficient than labor on private construction jobs. At the same time every boss argued that his men are far from being boondogglers.

Only two superintendents were willing to estimate exactly the efficiency of their gangs. One put that of his men at 80 per cent of that of gangs he had used on similar private contract jobs. Another made an estimate of 50 per cent. Rough observations indicated that each man was approximately right and that the efficiency ratings formed a fair maximum and minimum for all projects.

Various reasons were given for the lower efficiency. One was that the average WPA worker is "rusty" from unemployment and sometimes undernourished. A superintendent who had many Negroes in his gang blamed cold weather. Another reason given was the comparatively low wages. The boss of a paving gang which was working steadily, and apparently well, observed:

"If these fellows see that they are really accomplishing something they'll work. If they think they're just being worked for work's sake, they'll loaf—and so would I."

Machines' Help Welcomed.

Another superintendent observed that his men worked well because work on that project which could be done most efficiently by machinery was being done that way, and manual labor was being used only where it would be used normally. Putting men at work which can be done more easily by machines only discourages them, he said.

This observation may have been the explanation of the most consistent boondoggling observed, that among gangs engaged in breaking up asphalt pavement by hand.

Communist agitators appeared on almost every job when the projects were started last fall, the superintendents said. In some places they caused serious trouble, particularly where pay checks were delayed.

These agitators have been eliminated and discipline today is good, the bosses said unanimously. The men have found that if they are caught agitating, loafing, or drinking on the job the superintendent can fire them, and that once fired they can't go back on relief. Nevertheless, most of the superintendents agreed that WPA labor can't be pushed and requires close supervision.

Punctual Pay Aids Morale.

Morale has been built up, they said, by such simple devices as rushing pay rolls through as quickly as possible, seeing that street cars are on hand to take men back home on mornings when they report and are dismissed because it is too cold to work, getting proper clothing and shoes for them through relief authorities, and, in one case, by cutting federal red tape to divert lumber delivered for another purpose to provide a shelter house where the men might eat their lunches—in short, by the devices which any good foreman uses to look out for his men.

The first WPA project inspected is at the old Cook county jail, Illinois and Dearborn streets, which 131 men are engaged in demolishing. About a third of these men are union laborers, engaged in actual demolition of walls and cutting steel with oxy-acetylene torches.

Every one on the project was working steadily. The superintendent was particularly proud of the fact that his gang had the best safety record on any demolition project in the country.

Along the north side outer drive, from Irving Park boulevard to Foster avenue, several thousand are engaged in transforming eighty acres of filled land into a landscaped extension of Lincoln park. In addition to filling and grading the land they are laying an extensive system of drains, water pipes for sprinkling, and conduits for the park lighting system. A number of paved drives are to be laid later.

A considerable proportion of the men here were not overextending themselves. One of their bosses asserted that this was due principally to a three week layoff because of cold weather. He predicted that a few days' steady work would find them doing more.

Dynamite Loosens Clay.

Along the north side sanitary channel, north of Foster avenue, was found the most highly mechanized of the projects visited. Here 750,000 yards of earth are being excavated from the canal spoil bank for use as fill in Lincoln park.

During the winter the heavy clay is first loosened by dynamite blasts, exploded at night, then loaded by hand on the cars of a narrow gauge railroad. Thereafter it is handled mechanically. Cranes lift the clay from cars and dump it into trucks.

The men here, slopping about in deep mud resulting from the recent thaw, were cursing lustily but working nearly as lustily. One gang, engaged in spreading cinders on a road, was competing within itself as to who was to get the next load to spread.

Crowding Cuts Efficiency.

In contrast to this was the next project visited. In Fullerton avenue, near Meade avenue, a gang was engaged in excavating the parkway in the center of the street, apparently in preparation for paving. Here the men were crowded so closely together that it was impossible for more than half of them to work at a time, and that half was taking little advantage of its opportunity.

In contrast again, another WPA gang was engaged in exactly the same type of work on an intersecting street. These men were spaced so they had room to work and were working.

The Riis park project at Fullerton and Narragansett avenues was shut down for the day when it was visited, but the ground intersected everywhere by ditches and other excavations gave plentiful evidence of activity.

1,200 Men Laying Pipe.

The park, formerly a sixty acre golf course, is being made into an intensely developed recreation area, with baseball and softball diamonds, football fields, tennis courts, a running track, picnic grounds, two lagoons, and a number of shelters and other buildings. The 1,200 men working here have laid twenty-four miles of water pipe and an equal mileage of drains.

In the park system on the south side three gangs resurfacing asphalt drives were visited. About 75 per cent of the men were WPA laborers, apparently working as efficiently as the union asphalt workers beside them.

At Chicago airport between 100 and 150 WPA laborers are engaged in installing a large drain sewer around the edges of the field.

Work was halting for the day when the demolition project at the old city garbage rendering plant at 39th and Iron streets was visited, but here, too, the premises showed ample evidence of the work done by the gang of about 125 men.

Free Speech Issue Raised in Maj. Gen. Hagood Ouster

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—The constitutional issue of free speech has been raised by the administration in a dramatic manner in its vindictive disciplinary action against Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood for his criticism of the New Deal, the American Liberty league declared tonight.

The league, with the publication of a pamphlet entitled "The Story of an Honest Man," joined in the general assault on the administration for the removal of Maj. Gen. Hagood from his post as commander of the Eighth corps area. The pamphlet was released as a senate military affairs subcommittee was summoned to meet Monday to consider a demand for investigation of the incident.

Whitewash Considered Probable.

With the announcement of the meeting came a definite indication that the overwhelming Democratic majority would force a whitewash of the administration. Subcommittee Chairman M. M. Logan [Dem., Ky.], asserted "most investigations are just bunk," and that he didn't regard the Republican demand as of "any importance whatsoever."

At the same time Representative Blanton [Dem., Tex.] continues on the war path in defense of Hagood, taking to himself full responsibility for the general's testimony critical of the WPA.

The record published by the Liberty league pointed out that Maj. Gen. Hagood had been told by Gen. Malin Craig, army chief of staf, that he was perfectly free to answer any questions at the hearing. The league also pointed out that Hagood's testimony was corroborated by Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the Hawaiian department, and Representative Lawrence Lewis [Dem., Colo.].

"Infringement on Congress."

"The incident has demonstrated, apparently, that a citizen may not speak the truth as he sees it—not even at the request of a congressional committee—without exposing himself to official retaliation if his views are uncomplimentary to those presently in power," the league said.

"Aside from the obvious infringement upon the rights of the individual this is in effect an infringement upon the prerogatives of congress itself, since the result of such a policy is to deny the legislative branch the benefit of receiving honest advice from public servants concerning matters peculiarly within their knowledge.

"In testifying, he [Hagood] said some uncomplimentary things about a pet administration experiment—things which many persons undoubtedly believe to be true. But true or not, he had a right to express his views. His testimony was published and almost immediately he was deprived of his command. Apparently his distinguished career is ended."

"Mere Pretense" Charged.

The league declared any attempt to convince the public that the disciplinary action was taken without the knowledge of President Roosevelt is "an insult to the common sense of the American people and a slander upon the intelligence of high officials of the war department." The league said the attempt to show that Maj. Gen. Hagood was disciplined for commenting on nonmilitary subjects "is a mere pretense" which is exposed in Gen. Craig's publicized memorandum to Secretary of War Dern.

Late in the afternoon, Congressman Blanton, Hagood defender in the house, made public a letter to Gen. Craig in which he charged Hagood was "put on the spot" by the house appropriations committee. Blanton said Hagood's testimony was given at an informal hearing at which only Democrats were present and appropriation matters were being discussed informally.

"Punishment of Hagood," the Texan said, was "as severe as electrocuting a criminal. Gen. Hagood was put on the spot by our committee. Our committee is responsible. If any one deserves punishment it is our committee, and not this brave officer who in a frank, truthful manner gave us his conscientious opinion regarding matters the committee brought up."

Blanton was one of a congressional delegation which called Thursday on Secretary of War Dern to plead for reinstatement of Hagood. The war chief turned a deaf ear to the plea.

Compared to Dreyfus Case.

In all the sound and fury over Hagood's removal, which stands out in as bold a relief as the Dreyfus case among the many instances of New Deal vindictiveness and persecution, the general's supporters have stubbornly pointed to the facts in the case as demonstrating their charge of terrorism.

Hagood appeared before an informal meeting of a house appropriations subcommittee on Dec. 17 to present the army housing program for the 8th corps area. He journeyed from Texas at the call of the committee.

He told the committee he would like to have it understood that he was not present in the capacity of an advocate. "I am not here to urge appropriations," he said. "I am here only as a witness to answer questions as to the needs of my command." This is borne out in the printed proceedings.

Gives Colorful Testimony.

He then proceeded frankly and picturesquely to tell his needs and problems, employing the phrase "stage money" and delivering the criticism of the WPA which brought him punishment. Only Democrats were present at the hearing, and one of these, Representative Blanton, said he considered much of the testimony as much "off the record" as testimony he had given on confidential matters relating to the national defense which were stricken and did not appear in the published proceedings.

The record shows that other witnesses substantiated Hagood, including army officers, though their testimony was less colorful. A record of the testimony was sent to Hagood and returned by him on Dec. 30 with the statement that he had no occasion to change any of his answers.

Sends Telegram to Clerk.

On Feb. 8 Hagood wired the clerk of the subcommittee and several of the members that "higher authority has directed that army officers give out no information in reference to army appropriation that is inconsistent with present budget as submitted to congress."

He pointed out his testimony was given before presentation of the budget, but asked that everything inconsistent with the budget or that could be construed as a criticism of the New Deal be stricken out.

The message was received as 1,200 copies of the report were delivered to the subcommittee and turned over to newspaper men to be released when the war department bill was reported to the house two days later.

Though resultant publicity was over the protest of the general, he was relieved of his command on Feb. 24 on an order issued by Gen. Craig, which it has been said was dictated by the White House.

Karakas	18	13	11—42
Hainsworth	10	8	8—26

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Harvey Jackson made the comeback Toronto has been pleadir for for two months and the Maple Leafs defeated the Chicago Blackhawks, 4 to 2, in a National Hocky league game tonight. Jackson's two goals, his first since December, gave the Leafs their margin of victory.

The defeat was the Blackhawks' first in seven starts, they having tied three and won three in their six preceding games. Immediately after the contest, the Chicagoans boarded a train for home, where tomorrow night they meet the New York Rangers.

Jackson beat Mike Karakas in the first and third periods, while 10,500 cheered. His brother, Art, assisted him in the last goal.

His first was the only one of the first period. Each team scored in the second period, Donnie McFadyen matching Bob Davidson's goal.

Gottselig Comes Through.

Jackson scored again near the middle of the third period. Johnny Gottselig matched that goal on a play with Paul Thompson and Doc Romnes, then Frank Clancy gave the Leafs their final goal.

Karakas gave a splendid exhibition of goal tending, kicking out 42 shots. George Hainsworth, his opponent, had to handle only 28 shots, including the two he missed.

The victory enabled the Leafs to keep a point ahead of the Montreal Maroons, who defeated the Canadiens.

Horner got a major penalty in the second minute of the game for charging Larochelle into the boards, and when the Hawk raised his stick threateningly, striking him, Larochelle got a minor.

Leafs Take Lead.

When Chicago got the man advantage through Larochelle's return they pressed but the Leafs made a workmanlike job of holding the Hawks scoreless while they were shorthanded.

Harvey Jackson gave the Leafs a lead in 12:24. Clancy passed to him for goal that marked the end of the longest slump a major star has encountered in years.

Close checking by Toronto held McFadyen, Gottselig and Brydson almost shotless in the first few minutes of the second period, while Thoms, Finnegan and Horner sifted through for good drives. Obviously waiting for a break, Hawks went into a long shooting game and got back fast to stop Leaf attacks.

One More for Leafs.

The Leafs made it 2 to 0 on a brilliant play by Conacher. He carried the puck the full length of the ice and passed out to Davidson, who hit the post on the first try and batted the rebound past Karakas.

Wiebe then went off for tripping Boll and Gottselig took the puck from Jackson. He slipped around Horner and passed to McFadyen, who scored from close in.

March, Romnes, and Thompson had things pretty much their own way for a few minutes at the start of the third period, although Thoms got in one unexpected shot that Karakas had trouble stopping.

Harvey Jackson then got his second goal in 8:40 when he took a pass from his brother Art, sailed in close and let drive a shot Karakas had little chance to save.

Clem Loughlin, Chicago manager, was ordered off the bench by referee Babe Dye for some remark he made, but Loughlin refused to move even when two policemen were called. After a short conference Loughlin seemingly won for he remained with his players.

$10,000 Race at Hialeah Won by Mantagna

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., Feb. 29.—Mantagna from the stable of W. H. Furst of Chicago defeated Chance Ray in a thrilling stretch drive to win the first running of the Widener Challenge cup handicap at a mile and a quarter this afternoon at Hialeah Park. His margin at the end under the energetic piloting of Jocky Eddie Litzenberger was only a head. A mighty cheer arose from the crowd as the time, 2:01 4-5, two-fifths under the old track record, was posted.

In third place, one and one-half lengths behind the winner was Sablin, which was coupled with Stand Pat as post favorites. A half length farther back was Fidelis. Mantagna paid $11.40, $5.40 and $3.10 across the board. Chance Ray was $13.50 and $4.10 for place and show. Sablin, as the Seagram entry, was $2.40 to show.

Chance Ray Takes Lead.

As the field of nine came by the stand the first time, Chance Ray had jumped to the front with Mantagna in attendance, Steel Cutter and Stand Pat nearly alongside, and the others fighting for positions around the first turn. It was Chance Ray's sizzling pace, six furlongs in 1:11 and the mile in 1:37 which was responsible for the new record.

The field rounded the stretch turn with Chance Ray still holding a fractional length margin over Mantagna, and a furlong out the issue was strictly between these two. Stride for stride they raced right to the wire with Mantagna bounding forward in the last strides to poke his nose in front.

Sophia Tucker Beats Owaller.

In the secondary stake feature, the Nursery stakes for 2 year old fillies at three furlongs, Sophia Tucker turned up as the surprise winner by a nose over Owaller from the Denemark stable which previously had been regarded the best filly shown here with two brackets and a second.

After ten minutes post delay caused principally by the post behavior of Sophia Tucker, the latter and Owaller broke on top and raced to the wire together with Sophia getting the nod.

Sophia Tucker paid $22.20 to win and Owaller $3.60 place, with Mayro from the H. Teller Archibald barn in third position, $5.90 to show. The race was worth $3,250 net to the winner.

Furst, owner of Montagna, is a son-in-law of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars of Chicago. The mutuel handle today was $458,299, second largest of the meeting.

WHOPPER WINS ON COAST

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Arcadia, Cal., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Whopper, giant of the nation's race horses, won a smashing three lengths victory in the $10,000 added all age San Juan Capistrano handicap of 1⅛ miles at Santa Anita today, closing day at the track.

Largest Crowd of Meeting Attends.

Nearly 55,000, largest crowd of the 58 day season, were drawn by the combination of zephyr weather and the excitement of getaway day.

The pari-mutuel handle for today's eight races was $1,271,261, making the total bet at the track's windows during the meeting amount to $25,261,903, which is a daily betting average of $435,550. The total bet at the meeting smashes every record in California turf history. Last year for a meeting which lasted for 64 days of racing, the total handled was $15,997,584, a sum of $9,264,319 less than this year.

Eleven horses started the feature. Whopper, owned by Hal Price, Headley, which was coupled with Pre-Eminent, early pace setter, in the betting, paid $9.40 to win, $4.60 to place and $3.80 to show in the $2 mutuel betting. Tick on returned $16.40 and $6.60 for his backers. Ariel Cross was good for $8 show money. Whopper's time for the mile and a furlong was 1:50.

Whopper Gets Away Second.

Whopper bounded from the post in second position behind his fast starting stablemate, caught Pre-Eminent in the first quarter mile, and ran the fight out of Tick On, Ariel Cross and First Minstrel, which finished fourth, before the turn into the stretch.

Whopper, with Willie [Smokey] Saunders up, carried 112 pounds. The race was worth $10,950 to the winner, $2,000 to Tick On, $1,000 to Ariel Cross and $500 to the owner of First Minstrel. The field finished in the following order behind the leaders: Time Supply, Scotch Bun, Singing Wood, Pompey's Pillar, Azucar, Ann O'Reilly and Pre-Eminent. Discovery was scratched before the race started.

CHICAGO BOXERS DRILL TO WIN GOLDEN GLOVES

11 Seek Titles Friday at Stadium.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Eleven Chicago boys went to work in local gymnasiums yesterday, confident they will carry away the lion's share of the spoils from the Chicago Stadium Friday night after THE TRIBUNE's ninth annual Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions comes to a close.

These lucky eleven were the only one's that Chicago was able to qualify for the finals in the record breaking tournament.

It is a smaller number than usual, yet the eleven may be able to do the trick, since they are scattered so well through the eight divisions. They need to win five titles to hold that lion's share.

Chicago Feathers Whipped.

In only one of the eight divisions did Chicago fail to land a qualifier. That was in the featherweight class, in which our big city boys were whipped and whipped soundly. In all the other classes Chicago has at least one colorbearer, and in four of them Chicago is represented by two dashing punchers.

Most of the fans here believe that Johnny Brown is Chicago's best bet in the entire tournament. They see in this former newsboy, who represents the Catholic Youth organization, the most improved fighter to come back to Golden Gloves this year.

He demonstrated throughout the early rounds of the great tournament that he has just about all of the requisites of a champion in any sort of company. If Johnny should falter in the hectic fighting of the final round, Chicago has another dandy bantamweight colorbearer in Frank Kainrath, who also hails from C. Y. O.

Scrivani Has Backers.

Andy Scrivani's big army of followers believe he will win the lightweight title. Andy was a great champion as a featherweight last year. He, too, could be figured as almost a sure fire champion but for the fact that he has moved into the heavier division.

The ability of Chicago qualifiers in the other divisions is not nearly so well known. Still ,they were a confident lot when they started limbering up yesterday after their strenuous early round battles last Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

One Chicago fellow to get a rousing reception when he entered the gymnasium was lanky John Washington, the colored heavyweight who has been developed at Trafton's gymnasium.

A Workout for George.

George Trafton was so happy over Washington's early fights that he personally sparred a couple of rounds with the big fellow during the afternoon. "And I couldn't lay a glove on him," Trafton said. So you already know who Trafton picks to win the heavyweight championship.

The qualifiers in twelve other cities went to work yesterday on the final tuneup for the championship scraps. Reports are that they haven't the least notion that most of the titles will go to Chicago.

At the same time final preparations went forward for the presentation of the championship matches. The crowd, which already has bought every seat in the house, will be the largest to see a boxing event of any sort in America so far this year.

FLORIDA DERBY TO CHANGE ITS NAME NEXT YEAR

Miami, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Hialeah Park's $20,000 Florida derby will be run next Saturday for the last time under that name. Convinced the term "derby" has lost prestige through over use, President Joseph E. Widener of the Miami Jocky club announced the state's winter riding classic will be known by another name in the future.

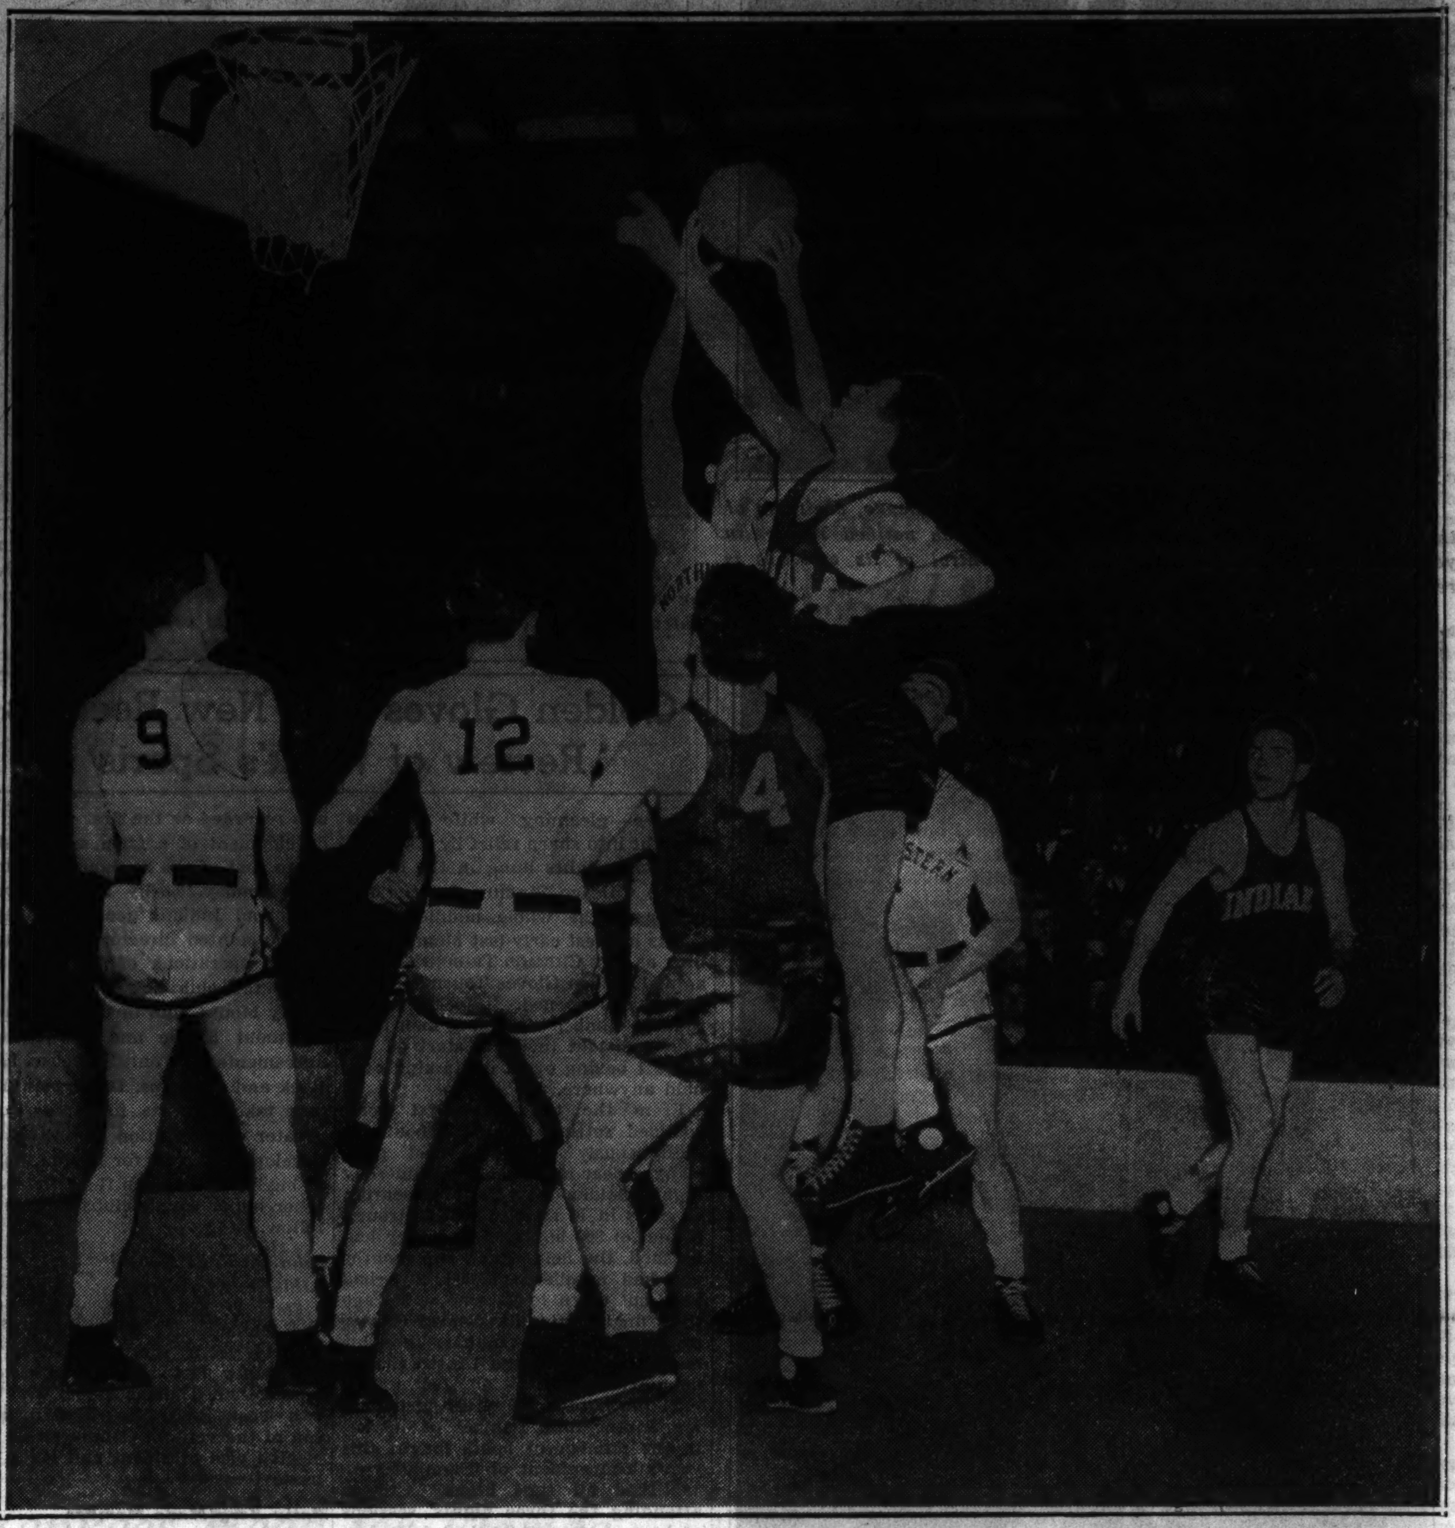
Fifteen or more of the 93 fine 3 year olds entered for the eighth renewal are expected to go to the post in the mile and furlong test that marks the season's close.

Tacked onto the regular Hialeah meeting of 46 days, however, is "Charity day," so the horses will run again Monday, March 9, for the benefit of Miami's needy.

Notre Name, Georgia Tech to Resume Football Series

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Announcement that Georgia Tech will resume football relations with Notre Dame in the fall of 1938 under a game and game agreement was made here today, The Constitution said arrangements for the resumption were made during a visit here by Elmer Layden several days ago and ratified by the boards of the two schools. Tech is to open in South Bend, with the Irish playing in Atlanta the following fall.

HOOSIERS MARCH OVER WILDCATS TOWARD TITLE



Indiana remained tied with Purdue for the Big Ten basketball lead last night by defeating Northwestern, the team which conquered the Boilermakers last week, 41 to 34. Indiana Beats N. U., 41-34; Purdue Routs Iowa, 54-38

Indiana kept pace with Purdue in the Big Ten basketball race by turning back Northwestern, 41 to 34, at Patten gymnasium last night while the Boilermakers were defeating Iowa. Each team has won ten games and lost one, with each having one game to play.

Led by the sharpshooting of Forward Ken Gunning, who made eight baskets and a free throw, the Hoosiers built up a 26 to 15 lead in the first half and then staved off a strong Wildcat drive in the final period.

In addition to Gunning's great shooting, the Hoosiers were aided by Fred Fechtman, 6 foot 7 inch center, who gave his mates a big edge by controling the tipoff.

Although forced to cede the tip-off to Fechtman, Jean Smith, Northwestern's sophomore center, kept his mates within striking distance by virtue of a great shooting performance. He scored nine baskets for 18 points. Mike McMichaels, leading scorer for the Purple this season, connected with four baskets.

PURDUE, 54; IOWA, 38

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Purdue remained very much in the All-Hoosier battle for the Big Ten basketball title here tonight as the Boilermakers turned in one of their most impressive performances of the season in routing Iowa, 54 to 38. It was Purdue's tenth triumph in eleven Big Ten games.

The game provided a brilliant home finale for Capt. Bob Kessler, the Boilermakers' ace forward, who scored 22 points on eight field goals and six free throws. Austin [Red] Lambert, outstanding back guard, and Ed Elliott, center. Jewell Young, Purdue's sophomore flash, also had a big evening, dropping in eight baskets.

With two and one-half minutes to go and the Boilermakers leading, 43 to 38, Purdue cut loose with a final burst that left Iowa gasping and accounted for eleven points in rapid succession. The game started like a rout and ended like a rout, but in between there was more scoring action on the part of both quintets than has been seen here in years.

The desperate efforts of the Iowa guards to halt the drives of Kessler and Young were costly. Suesens fouled out of the game shortly before the end of the first half, and Van Ysseldyk followed him to the showers with two minutes of the game left.

ILLINOIS, 30; OHIO, 29

Columbus, O., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Ohio State came back strong in the second half tonight, but Illinois managed to turn in a 30 to 29 victory before 5,339 spectators.

Trailing, 25 to 14, at the end of the first half, Ohio State held Illinois to five points in the second period while connecting for seven baskets and one free throw. The floor play of the Buckeyes was far superior in the final period, and with the loss of Center Bob Riegel, Illinois was forced to the utmost to hold its lead as the game drew to a close.

Ohio tried 54 shots at the basket and completed 12, while Illinois made 12 of 56 shots.

Regents Deny Big Ten Right to Dictate

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 29.—Judge A. C. Backus and Edward J. Brown, Milwaukee members of the University of Wisconsin board of regents, struck back sharply at the Western Conference late today when advised the Big Ten contemplated disciplinary action against the university unless control of athletics was restored to the faculty by July 1.

Both were emphatic in statements that the regents were within their province in ousting Drs. Walter E. Meanwell and Clarence W. Spears and that they had not usurped or trespassed upon the rights of the university's faculty athletic council, which had recommended retention of Dr. Meanwell and dismissal of Dr. Spears.

Operate Under State Laws.

Backus, one of the members of the original investigating committee in Wisconsin's muddled athletic affairs, said:

"The Western Conference can not nullify the laws of Wisconsin under which the regents operate. There always has been faculty control at Madison and there still is. The faculty athletic council initiates action, but it does not follow that we have to abide by its findings, and we did not in the Meanwell-Spears case."

Brown, who was appointed a regent Jan. 7, said:

"As a regent holds his office by virtue of an act of the people of the state of Wisconsin, he is bound to see that act enforced.

"Acted for Best"—Baker.

"If the recent controversy [the case of Drs. Spears and Meanwell] is considered as such, then it is time the Western Conference faculty athletic committee reconstruct itself on a basis of the laws of the various states and universities in which it has members."

Robert V. Baker Jr. of Kenosha, a member of the board of regents since July, 1932, said in his opinion the board of regents did not usurp any undue powers or violate any faculty rules.

"The board acted," he said, "for the best under the circumstances, which is just as it should be."

BAN EFFECTIVE JULY 1 UNLESS FACULTY RULES

Committee Named to Handle Case.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The University of Wisconsin will be suspended from the Western conference July 1, 1936, the faculty committee of the Big Ten decided in an all day meeting yesterday at the University club unless before that deadline the Wisconsin faculty notifies the Big Ten faculty committee that they "consider themselves in control of the athletic affairs at that institution."

By this threat, which may become fact, the members of the faculty committee of the Western conference answered the board of regents of Wisconsin which had disregarded the wishes of the Wisconsin faculty by firing Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, director of athletics, although the regents, at the same time, yielded to the extent of also bouncing Dr. Clarence W. Spears, football coach. The regents originally had supported Spears, for whom the faculty had been gunning.

Big Ten vs. Regents.

Thus the current scenario of internal athletic dissension at Wisconsin, which began this time over who gave whom a drink of liquor, now has unfolded a struggle between the faculty governing body of the Big Ten and the regents of Wisconsin appointed by the governor. The situation has no parallel, not even in the memorable suspension of the University of Iowa, for that edict resulted from violation of eligibility rules and financial aid to athletes. The present dispute involves a principle.

The meeting of the faculty committee yesterday, over which Dean George A. Works of the University of Chicago presided, did not say that the Wisconsin regents do or do not have control. The committee was more adroit. It insisted that the Wisconsin faculty must have control of Wisconsin athletics and then added, unless the faculty at Wisconsin admits it does have control, Wisconsin is out of the Big Ten.

Complete Text of Decision.

The complete text of the decision of the Western conference faculty committee follows:

"The faculty representatives of the Intercollegiate conference have observed the course of athletic events at the University of Wisconsin during recent years with interest and deep concern. That the board of regents of that university and the governing boards of the other member institutions have, within their charters and applicable law, plenary control over the affairs of those institutions no one would seriously deny. It is, however, equally clear that the conference has jurisdiction to determine whether member institutions comply with the requirements for continued membership therein.

Faculty Control Required.

"The conference has no formal constitution, but it is indisputable that complete faculty control of intercollegiate athletics is a prime requirement for membership. Such membership at least implies a definite compact with the other members that such control is delegated to the faculties. The official publication of the conference declares:

"'Only institutions having full and complete faculty control of athletics may retain membership in the conference.' And when a former member institution was being re-admitted to membership the conference deemed it important to record that the governing body of that institution had 'delegated the control of athletic affairs to the faculty of the institution.'

"An occasional or isolated refusal by a governing body to adopt or follow an expression of faculty desire in the management of its intercollegiate athletic program does not necessarily indicate a departure from the conference requirement; but a persistent and consistent course of action in repudiating duly expressed faculty sentiment can only mean that the faculty of that member does not have that measure of control demanded by the basic law of the conference. It must be obvious that athletic control involves more than the power to determine such matters as rules of eligibility, extent of schedules, and conditions of practice and participation; it must include also a considerable measure of control over the selection of personnel of the staf in active charge.

"Reasonable Doubt" Established.

"The evidence at hand establishes more than a reasonable doubt that the University of Wisconsin now has that degree of faculty control required of members of the conference. Now, therefore "BE IT RESOLVED that unless the faculty of the University of Wisconsin shall in the meantime notify this conference that they consider themselves in control of the athletic affairs at that institution, the University of Wisconsin shall be declared suspended from membership in the conference beginning July 1, 1936.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a committee of faculty representatives consisting of Prof. George A.

Works, of Chicago, to be chairman; Ralph Aigler, of Michigan, and Thomas E. French, of Ohio State, be created to act on behalf of the conference in receiving any communications from representatives of the University of Wisconsin, and with power of behalf of the conference to make any further studies or to participate in any conference with such representatives of the University of Wisconsin."

Phillips Represents Wisconsin.

All ten of the Western conference universities were represented at yesterday's meeting at the University club. The report was presented to the press by Prof. William Marshall of Purdue, secretary of the committee. Wisconsin was represented yesterday by J. D. Phillips, business manager of the university who is a member ex-officio of the board of regents and the Wisconsin faculty committee. Prof. Andrew T. Weaver, former chairman of the Wisconsin faculty committee on athletics and faculty representative on the conference committee, was not here. He and the other three Wisconsin faculty men on the Wisconsin committee had resigned Feb. 15 less than a half hour after the board of regents ousted Dr. Meanwell, Dr. Spears, and Trainer Bill Fallon.

Profs. Robert Aurner, Asher Hobson, and Gus Bohstedt joined Prof. Weaver in quitting the Wisconsin athletic committee. The student member, Howard Heun of Richmond, Ind., president of the student athletic council, also resigned, leaving only the alumni members, Walter Alexander of Milwauke and Walter Heyman of Chicago, now holding office.

New Committee Must Be Named.

Because of these resignations those intimate with the arguments over control cannot see how Wisconsin's faculty can report to the faculty committee of the Big Ten that it controls Wisconsin athletics. Unless the board of regents promises to permit control by the new committee, yet to be appointed, and definitly admits that it cannot hire or fire the personnel of the department of athletics, it seems likely that Wisconsin will quit the Big Ten by order on July 1.

Others think that the Wisconsin regents might intimidate the faculty, but it was pointed out last night that this would be difficult in view of the protection the professors would receive from the North Central association which rules on the educational qualifications of universities and secondary schools.

The faculty committee yesterday left one means of communication open between the Big Ten and Wisconsin. Works, Prof. Aigler, and Prof. French, appointed yesterday, not only may "receive communications" from Wisconsin, but may "make further studies" of the situation or "participate in any conference with representatives of the University of Wisconsin."

Broadcast Up to Each School.

Prof. Works announced that the members had voted to retain the present rule on broadcast of Big Ten sport events, notably football games.

The action of the faculty committee yesterday leaves the radio broadcast of sports events up to each university. Some have sold exclusive broadcasting rights; others have permitted broadcasts if the programs were not commercially sponsored.

BADGERS' FATE IN THEIR HANDS

For the third consecutive year and for the fourth time in the last five years, Maine Township High school of Des Plaines won the state swimming championship at Oak Park yesterday. Bill Zerrien of the victorious team also thrilled the crowd by bettering the new state mark he made Friday night in the preliminaries in the 200 yard free style. He was clocked in 2:07, more than 7 seconds faster than the previous mark made by Ogilby of Rockford in that school's triumph in 1933.

McCallum U. High tied the state record of 0:24.8 in the 50 yard free style event. The New Trier medley relay team lowered the 150 yard mark for the state by a fraction when the trio, Beebe, Mack, and Harvey, finished in 1:25.8, just 1-10 second faster than Maine did Friday night.

BIG SIX VETOES A. A. U. GAME FOR OLYMPIC FUND

Lawrence, Kas., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Any chance that the Big Six basketball champion might meet the winner of the Missouri Valley A. A. U. tournament in Kansas City for the benefit of the Olympic fund faded today as Big Six faculty representatives vetoed the plan for such a game presented by Claude V. Cochran of Kansas City.

Dr. H. D. Bergman of Iowa State, faculty group secretary, said the members deemed it unwise to extend permission for Bix Six teams to increase Olympic basketball activities beyond participation in elimination tournaments.

The faculty men also turned down a request of Leon Lundblade of Beloit, Kas., that conference freshmen athletes be permitted to play in Ban Johnson Baseball league games before the close of the spring semester.

Golden Gloves Sets New Records Review of Week's Sports

Three gleaming white squares brought into sharp relief by a battery of blazing lights hung in the center of the Chicago Stadium became the center of the whole middle west's sports interest early last Monday evening as THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S ninth annual Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions opened. Into the roped squares climbed six young men from widely distant towns to start off the biggest boxing event of its kind ever held anywhere.

From the time the first gong sounded setting off three bouts simultaneously until the last gong clanged near midnight on Wednesday night, Golden Glovers representing 43 cities in 16 states battled through a total of 365 bouts. When they had finished, the field which two months ago had numbered 17,000 boys had been cut down to 32, who will wage their final battles for Golden Gloves, symbolical of the highest amateur boxing honors in the United States, next Friday night.

In the number of cities participating, in the total number of entries, in the number of bouts fought this year's Tournament of Champions established all time highs. Crowds attending the three nights' sessions of boxing also established four new records, the attendance for each exceeding by a big margin the previous highest figure for corresponding nights in other years. The three night total consequently was higher than ever before.

Members of only 13 teams reached the final night's fighting. The number placed by each follows:

So intense was the interest in the finals all seats were sold out eight days in advance of the event, thereby establishing another record for the tournament.

Tom Kearney, Noted Bookmaker, Dies.

Tom Kearney, famous the country over as the man who had handled millions of dollars in wagers and never welshed on a bet, died Sunday at St. Louis at the age of 65 years. Kearney, a gambler for nearly a half century, gained his greatest reputation as a betting commissioner in 1924, the year Black Gold won the Kentucky Derby. Black Gold, backed heavily in the winter books, ruined bookmakers everywhere when the time came to pay off at long odds offered months before the race. Many bookies simply closed up shop and moved away without making any effort to pay the winners. Kearney, though it cost him $74,000, paid off every wager he had taken, gained immeasurably by the favorable publicity. In 1934 he was said to have made $100,000 when the St. Louis Cardinals won the pennant and the world series.

Yawkey Takes Steps to Build Farm System.

Tom Yawkey, owner of the Boston Red Sox, having spent three million dollars on his club without making a pennant winner, announced what was regarded as the first step in the development of a farm system similar to that of the St. Louis Cardinals last Monday. Billy Evans, former Cleveland Indians general manager, was appointed director of all minor league operations of the Red Sox. Since the club now owns only the Rocky Mount club in the very minor Piedmont league and has working agreements with only Syracuse, Little Rock and Memphis, the appointment was taken as the forerunner of a greater concentration on the task of developing players for Boston instead of buying them, with the purchase of other minor league clubs expected to follow.

John D. Shibe Named Athletics President.

John D. Shibe, vice president of the Philadelphia Athletics for the last 14 years, was elevated to the presidency last Monday to succeed his brother, Thomas Shibe, who died two weeks ago. Roy McGillicuddy, son of the veteran Connie Mack, was elected vice president and Mack was made treasurer.

Patty Berg Made Member of Curtis Cup Team.

Freckled little Patty Berg, 18 years old, from Minneapolis, shot 73 for the 18 holes of the qualifying round of the South Atlantic women's golf tournament at Ormond Beach, Fla., last Tuesday, thereby winning the medal and equaling the course record. Two days later, the sensational young golfer reached a new high spot in her career when she was chosen as a member of the American team which will defend the Curtis cup, international women's golf trophy, against a British team at Glen Eagles, Scotland, on May 6 and 7.

Other members of the team are Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare of New York; Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crew of Miami; Mrs. Opal S. Hill of Kansas City; Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky.; Charlotte Glutting of South Orange, N. J.; Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite of Fort Worth, Tex., and Mrs. Louis Cheney of Los Angeles.

Maroons Will Stick to Sports Policy.

If University of Chicago athletic teams win more events in the years to come than they have in the recent past it will be attributable, in part, to a decline in the caliber of the other teams in the Western conference, rather than to an improvement on the part of the Maroons.

This was indicated by Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the university, last Wednesday night when he told Chicago alumni that the university would continue to pursue its present policy in athletics, treating the athletic department like all other parts of the university, neither subsidizing nor discriminating against athletes. If other universities come around to the principles of the University of Chicago in athletics, he said, then the Maroons should win more games; if not, then there is little likelihood that the Maroons' record will be much better. In either event, sports will continue their present course as a part of the educational program at the Midway, he said.

Pettigrew, Purdue, defeated Schwedier, Lawrence, 3-1.
Bucker, Purdue, defeated Harris, University of Chicago, 3-0.
Wakefield, Purdue, defeated Headiside, Lawrence, 3-0.
Strange, Lawrence, won by default from G. Noll, Purdue.

HOLLYROOD MADE DERBY FAVORITE IN FIELD OF 102

Brevity Next in Line at Odds of 8 to 1.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Hollyrood and Brevity ruled the winter book favorites tonight among the 102 horse field of Kentucky Derby eligibles announced today by Col. Matt J. Winn, Churchill Downs executive director.

The nominees for the $40,000 added classic May 2 lacked a standout, but the odds quoted valued half a dozen that showed class as 2 year olds at 12 to 1 or less. Longest odds among the 102 eligibles, smallest field proposed since 1922, were offered on James F. O'Neil's Judge Kavanagh, 1,000 to 1.

Charles Murphy of St. Louis, whose odds were received here today, made Hal Price Headley's Hollyrood his favorite at 6 to 1. His other short odds were Joseph E. Widener's Brevity, which is a 2 to 1 choice for the forthcoming Florida Derby, 8 to 1; Marshall Field's Tintagel, which won the Belmont Futurity last year; the Bomar stable's Arlington and Kentucky Jocky club Futurity winner, Grand Slam, and the Coldstream Stud's namesake, Coldstream, all bracketed at 10 to 1.

72 Colts Are Listed.

Eastern commissioners offered similar odds except they indicated they will make Brevity the favorite.

There were 72 colts among the nominees, 27 geldings and 3 fillies, of whom previously there have been several to lure the sentimental betters, despite the fact that only one filly was a winner in the 61 previous Derbies. The fillies named were the Foxcatcher Farms' Gold Seeker, W. C. Goodloe's Seventh Heaven, and R. A. Kleberg's Split Second.

With two obvious exceptions, the field was regarded as including every likely top-notch 3 year old in the country. These were Jean Bart, the absence of which was a surprise since his fast third to Tintagel and Hollyrood in the Belmont Futurity, and C. V. Whitney's Red Rain. Whitney had announced Red Rain would not be named because a bad hoof was being given plenty of time to heal.

Three Sons of Gallant Fox in Field.

Gallant Fox, 1930 derby winner, has three sons in the field, John Salinski's Cavalero, William Woodward's Granville, and Mrs. R. A. Van Cliff's Phantom Fox. Zev, the 1923 winner, is represented by O. F. Woodward's Zsar and Reigh Count, who won in 1928, by Warren Wright's Count Morse.

Collectively, the derby nominees have been to the barrier 1,018 times and come home with 218 firsts, 86 seconds, and 131 thirds. Among the leading stake winners last year who were nominated, Seabiscuit had run most often, 35 times, winning $12,510 with 5 firsts, 7 places, and 5 shows. Black Highbrow won almost the same, $12,460, with 11 firsts, 8 seconds, and 2 thirds in 30 starts.

Cooper Leads Florida Open Golf with 137

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—A burst of subpar golf sent Harry Cooper of Chicago into a four stroke lead at the half-way mark of the Florida west coast $3,000 open tournament today with 137.

Shooting a two under par 71 on the morning round, Cooper came back in the afternoon with an even more brilliant 68.

Tied for second at 141 were Paul Runyan, the White Plains, N. Y., professional, and Gene Sarazen.

Runyan Gets a 70.

Leonard Dodson of Pembine, Wis., who won the St. Petersburg open last week, wound up with a 72—70—142 in fourth place.

The best rounds of the day were contributed by Al Krueger of Cincinnati, and Ky Laffoon of Chicago, both of whom cracked par by four strokes for afternoon 67's.

Krueger Recovers.

Krueger's card, however, was cheapened by a previous 76 and he will go into the final 36 holes tomorrow tied with Johnny Revolta, the Professional Golfers' association champion, at 143. Revolta had 73 and 70.

Laffoon needed 81 in the morning and was far behind the leaders despite his 67.

Torchy Toda, professional champion of Japan, had a 69 this afternoon after a 78 in the morning and was almost out of the running with 147.

TWO TOURNEYS BRING GOLFERS BACK TO FLORIDA

Miami, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The prospect of two more pay days brought money golfers flocking back to southeastern Florida this week.

Nearby Hollywood's first open tournament, to be played Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday over Johnny Farrell's par 70 course at the Hollywood Country club, and the 12th annual international four-ball matches starting next Sunday at the par 72 Miami Country club course, offer the professionals, in all, $6,500 in prizes.

Farrell, former national open champion who is having his first try at tournament sponsoring, predicted today nearly 200 golfers would set out over the well trapped, 6,350 yard Hollywood course Tuesday in the 72 hole competition for prizes aggregating $2,500.

A. B. C. PRIZES TO TOTAL $108,500 FOR NEW RECORD

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Elmer Baumgarten, secretary of the American Bowling congress, said today the $108,590 cash prize list for the Indianapolis tournament was the largest in the history of A. B. C. meets.

The previous high, he said, was the $107,790 list for the Chicago tournament in 1929. Entry fees this year totaled $162,885. Another new record was made by the Indianapolis meet when 2,853 five man teams entered. The tournament has attracted 9,178 individual entries and 4,567 two man teams.

PURDUE QUINTET AGAINST PLAYING IN OLYMPICS

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 29.—[U. P.]—The decision to keep Purdue university's basketball team out of the Olympic trials was reached by the players themselves, Coach Ward Lambert said today.

"A majority of the players voted against the Olympics because they felt the added competition would be detrimental to their health, both mentally and physically," he explained.

Lambert said he agreed heartily with the players because of the strenuous schedule they have had this season.

The players expressed only one regret—that they will be unable now to meet Indiana and thereby determine which is the better team. The Hoosiers and Boilermakers are waging a close race for the Big Ten title.

CHICAGO TRACK TEAM DEFEATS PURDUE, 55¾-38¼

Ellinwood Sets Meet Record in Half Mile Run.

Chicago's track team ran its string of victories over Purdue to an even dozen yesterday defeating the Boilermakers, 55¾ to 38¼, in a dual meet at the Midway field house. Purdue won the first two events and lost the remainder with the exception of a Chicago forfeit in the two mile and a tie for first in the high jump.

Ray Ellinwood, Chicago sophomore who bettered the world's indoor 440 record two weeks ago, entered only the half mile yesterday. MICHIGAN WINS

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Michigan defeated Indiana, 50 2-3 to 44 1-3, in a track meet tonight. The Wolverines came from behind in the last two events, the low hurdles and relay, after having spotted the visitors a lead midway in the program.

Michigan won because its hurdlers, Bob Osgood and Moreau Hunt, were able, in the absence of Dan Caldemeyer, Indiana star, to take first and second in both events.

One Yost field house record was broken, Malcolm Hicks of Indiana running the 440 yard dash in 50.4, two-fifths better than Stan Birleson's old mark. Indiana won seven firsts to four for Michigan. Summaries:

HAWKS FACE RANGERS

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The New York Rangers, known as the Old Gents' club of the National Hocky league for the last few seasons, will totter on to the Stadium ice tonight to meet the Chicago Blackhawks, but all local clients should beware of that tottering stride, for it will be just another ruse of the guileful Lester Patrick, the Rangers' manager.

It is true that such patriarchs as Ching Johnson, Howie Morenz, and Bill Cook cannot be expected to scamper out on the ice, for they are getting on in years, but Mr. Patrick, by recent cunning machinations, has seen to it that these graybeards will have plenty of nimble youth to aid and abet them.

Has Four Promising Rookies.

Taking a leaf from the book of the St. Louis Cardinals' chain store system, with a bow to the team breaking technique of Connie Mack, Patrick began to rebuild, with the result that he now has four promising rookies who already have more than paid for their keep. They are Defense Man Babe Pratt, Right Wings Phil Watson and Mac Colville, and Left Wing Alex Shibicky.

He began the rebuilding when he traded Glenn Brydson to the Hawks for Morenz. That trade, he admits, was an even exchange, and he points out that the Rangers' recent unbeaten string of nine games, which didn't end until Thursday night against Detroit, began with Howie's coming to the New Yorkers. It will be Morenz's first Stadium appearance in a Ranger uniform, and he will be at left wing, a position he never played until going to New York, being on a line with Lynn Patrick, the boss' boy, and Cecil Dillon, the league's leading goal getter.

Several Veterans Available.

With Colville, Watson, Pratt, and Shibicky to uphold the youth angle, Patrick will have veterans galore. There will be Bill Cook, one of the all-time forwards, who has shifted between defense and wing since early season. There will be Frank Boucher, the playmaking center, who is rated the Chesterfield of the league, having won the sportsmanship trophy so many times he will refuse it this year. And there will be that bald and eagle beaked terror of the blue line, Ching Johnson, who is said to be having one of the greatest seasons of a long career.

The Hawks, striving to finish the season in second place against the desperate pressure now being applied by the Rangers and the Bruins, hold the edge on the season series against the New Yorkers. They won all three games played at the Stadium, and have won, lost, and tied once each at New York, scoring, in all, eleven goals, against the Rangers' five.

Northwestern Fencers Beat Washington, 12 to 5

Northwestern's fencing team defeated Washington university, 12 to 5, at Patten gym yesterday. Led by Tully Friedman, who swept three foil bouts, the Wildcats won six of the nine matches. Ralph Greenberg accounted for two victories. The sabre bouts were evenly split, Brooking of Washington taking both of his bouts and Stevens and Psiharis winning two for Northwestern. Gillies and Neal won the four epee contests for Northwestern.

Illinois Water Poloists Defeat Northwestern, 4-3

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Illinois won its fourth straight Big Ten water polo game today, defeating Northwestern, 4 to 3. Brouk scored two goals and Overman and Lewis one each for the Illini. Berry scored two goals and Smithson one for the Wildcats.

Gordon, Chicago high jumper, clears the bar at five feet ten inches to finish in a four way tie for first place with Beal and Kovacs of Chicago and Lemen of Purdue. The Maroons won the meet, 55 3-4 to 38¼.

Black Horse Polo Team Beats Cornell

The Hornets defeated the 122d Field Artillery Juniors, 21 to 17½, in the opening game.

Aided by a five goal handicap, the Artillery men held the advantage until the final moments of the second period when a goal by Capt. Bill Everett gave the Hornets a half point lead. Making four goals in the third period, the Hornets held the lead throughout the remainder of the game.

Yankees Head for Florida as Pat Malone, Rolfe Sign

New York, Feb. 29.—(AP)—The New York Yankees signed two more veterans, Pat Malone and Robert [Red] Rolfe, as the first contingent entrained today for the spring training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla.

The receipt of contracts from Malone and Rolfe left only Bill Dickey, Charley Ruffing, and Ben Chapman, among the regulars, who have not signed.

The group that left by train included only two ball players—Vito Tamulis and Johnny Broaca. The remainder of the party was composed of Coaches John Schulte, Arthur Fletcher, and Earle Combs; Scout Paul Krichell and Mrs. Krichell; Road Secretary Mark Roth and his assistant, Rex Weyant, and newspaper men.

INDIANS AWAIT REGULARS.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The 12 pitchers and 5 catchers comprising the Cleveland Indians' advance squad tonight were awaiting the arrival of the main squad of infielders and outfielders.

The battery candidates have been training for a week. No session is scheduled tomorrow, but Monday the tribe, 30 strong, will go into training with five infield and outfield positions definitly set and only second base and right field in doubt.

CARDS PLAN GAMES.

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—What they do in practice is one thing and what they do in a game another, so Manager Frank Frisch intends to find out.

To give his rookies a chance to perform under a mild kind of fire, he's sending them against his regulars in a six-inning game tomorrow.

BROWNS HEAD FOR CAMP.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—With the first workout scheduled for Monday, members of the St. Louis Browns were converging today on the team's spring training camp here. Catcher Rollie Hemsley and Outfielder Roy ["Beau"] Bell left St. Louis today by train; Manager Rogers Hornsby was driving from Hot Springs, Ark., and other players were coming from their homes by whatever route they pleased.

The signing of Johnny Burnett, reserve infielder, still left Sam West, Lyn Lary, Harland Clift, and Jack Burns out of the fold.

CUBANS BEAT REDS, 5-1.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Feb. 29.—(AP)—The fine pitching of the Cuban moundsman, Dihijo, and Don Brennan's wildness gave the Almendares team of Havana a 5 to 1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. Dihijo blanked the major leaguers until the ninth inning, when a close decision by Umpire Bill Klem put a runner on base and an error on Gilly Campbell's infield grounder allowed him to score.

The Cubans made five runs in the fourth, all off Brennan, who filled the bases on passes and then was hit heavily. Score:

Cincinnati [N.]	000	000	001—1
Almendares	000	500	00*—5

Batteries—Derringer, Brennan, Nelson, Barnes and Campbell; Dihijo and Hernandez.

PIRATES EN ROUTE.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Coach Jewel Ens and Pitchers Guy Bush, Ralph Birkofer, Clarence Struss, and Russell Bauers climbed aboard the Pittsburgh Pirates' train here late today as it passed through St. Louis en route to San Antonio.

The new arrivals interrupted a friendly argument going on between the Buccaneers' two first string catchers, Al Todd of Elmira, N. Y., and Tommy Padden of Manchester, N. H., about who was going to get first call behind the bat when the season opens. Todd was purchased in a winter deal from Philadelphia.

The Pirate vanguard left Pittsburgh last night. Cy Blanton, the most effective pitcher in the National league last season, will join the squad in Dallas. Manager Pie Traynor and several others from the west coast will be at San Antonio to meet the players tomorrow night.

EARNSHAW SHOWS SPEED.

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The Dodgers went through two long, hot workouts today in their second day of training. George Earnshaw, who has been getting into shape for the last week or so, was far ahead of the rest, turning on the steam and sending over a few curves the hitters couldn't even touch.

TERRY IS PLEASED.

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Manager Bill Terry of the Giants said he was thoroughly satisfied with the results of the first week's training after he sent his batterymen through a three hour drill today. The infielders and outfielders are scheduled to report Monday. The "Dannings" and "Mancusos" played another six inning game, with the former winning 5 to 4 on John Leonardo's triple in the sixth.

Pennsylvania Prep Player Dies of Football Injury

Punxsutawney, Pa., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Francis Sandy, 18, died today five months after his neck had been broken in a high school football game. Since the accident, the youth has lain in a hospital supported by a special brace and other equipment. Residents raised a $1,200 fund to help defray expenses. Punxsutawney schools will close Tuesday during his funeral.

Quartet of Sox Pitchers Look Good for 1936

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—James J. Dykes, manager of the White Sox, has been looking at his 1936 pitching crop for well onto a week now, but is not ready to put himself on record. All that he knows is that, of necessity, he will have to carry nine mound laborers throughout the impending race, but the class of the prospective nine as a whole is something else. However, there are possibilities for good results, and that is considerable for Sox fans who have been starving for years barring the incursion of their favorites into the first division during the front half of the 1935 season.

There were two definite reasons for the fashion in which the Sox got away in the 1935 race after all the experts had agreed Dykes' team would never be able to lift its nose above seventh place. One of the reasons was the unexpected comeback of the veteran Ted Lyons, who at the end of the year had accumulated 15 victories. The other was the splurge of Rookie John Whitehead, who won his first eight big league starts and finished the season with 13 triumphs. That accounted for 28 victories nobody had figured on at the start.

Lyons May Duplicate Labors.

Lyons will be back, and there is no reason to believe he can't come close to duplicating his labors of last season.

With Whitehead profiting by his one year of experience in big time, the logical guess would be that he will be just that much better. The past is filled with cases of fellows who faded after being one year sensations, but Whitehead, if ability alone is considered, can hardly tumble into that class.

Whitehead Doesn't Watch Condition.

The danger in the case of Whitehead is that he doesn't pay sufficient attention to physical condition. It was this that caused him to slow down after his brilliant start last year, and whether he'll have the same indifferent attitude this summer is the question.

Vernon Kennedy, who enemy hitters insist is a better pitcher than Whitehead, can easily develop into the No. 1 man of the Sox staf this year. He wasn't started much last year until the season was well along, but he concluded his labors with 11 victories, one of them a no-hit affair.

Stratton May Be Regular.

Dykes' other prospective mound regular is Monty Stratton, who is figured to be ready after two years of priming in the minors. He came up late last season after a winning summer with the St. Paul team, and showed enough to win Dykes over as a rooter. He pitched one game in which the Tigers called the turn on every ball he pitched, but even with this knowledge they failed to hit him hard. Stratton is built on the lines of Tex Carleton and Paul Dean.

The four named above give Dykes, at least on paper, a fairly formidable quartet but, of course, to turn in victories they'll have to have help. Pitchers can't win unless given some runs, but the Sox should be above average in this particular line of diamond endeavor.

Even if the Lyons, Whitehead, Kennedy, Stratton quartet proves as good as expected there will still be room for more. There are plenty of men available for secondary rôles, but all are problems. Les Tietje, who won nine last season, should be a great pitcher, but apparently lacks confidence. Dykes refuses to give up on him. Babe Phelps and Whitlow Wyatt turned in a few good games apiece last season and probably will be no better this year.

Salveson Needs Minor Seasoning.

Johnny Salveson won only one game after coming to the Sox for Bud Hafey in a swap with the Pittsburgh Pirates last season, and if he ever is going to be of any worth it probably will not be until after he has been given a year or two in the minors. He's only 22 years old. The only other holdover on the squad is Ed Durham, whom Dykes refuses to figure as a possibility until he sees what the mild mannered southerner can do after being idle for two seasons because of arm trouble.

Altogether Dykes' staf represents 57 victories last season. Lyons won 15, Kennedy 11, Whitehead 13, Phelps 4, Wyatt 4, Tietje 9, and Salveson 1.

Four More Arrive.

Four newcomers figured in today's workout, which was extensive in view of the fact that the athletes will have a vacation tomorrow. The arrivals were Vernon Washington, Marshall Mauldin, Malin McCulloch, and G. F. Stumpf, all outfielders. The only absentees now are Ted Lyons, Ed Durham, Zeke Bonura, Luke Appling, and Jack Hayes.

KLEIN CONTINUES HEAVY HITTING AT CUBS' CAMP

Chuck Raps 2 Homers; Cavarretta Slugs.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Avalon, Cal., Feb. 29.—The extra day of the year was the hottest the Cubs have enjoyed here in several annums and Manager Grimm was so pleased with the zeal shown by his boys that he promised them a day off a week from tomorrow to make up for the added session the calendar author ran in on them. It will be the first layoff not enforced by bad weather that Grimm ever has given the Cubs on Catalina.

Chuck Klein, who knocked four extra long homers yesterday, added two more today, but did not hold the center of the stage by himself. Phil Cavarretta, whose rights to the first base job are being challenged by Manager Grimm, cut loose with some power and got a big hand from his manager rival. Phil took plenty of sun today and began to lose a rather startling pallor that he brought here from the snowy reaches of Chicago.

Pitchers Get Attention.

The pitchers continued to demand plenty of attention from Grimm. Through last winter's extension of the Cub minor league affiliates—the string now consists of Birmingham and Portsmouth in addition to Los Angeles—the seven pitchers now in camp who will not be retained by the Cubs will be assured of jobs unless they flunk completely.

While the seven who won't reach Wrigley field, Chicago, probably will be disappointed when they get the news, they eventually will consider themselves fortunate to land paying jobs with solvent clubs, such as the three in the Cub string. At least four of them are almost certain to go out on option, and will be back in the Cub camp next fall. Two will go to an AA club, even if Los Angeles doesn't requisition them, one will go to Birmingham. The others will find consolation with Portsmouth, which is in a B circuit, providing they keep showing as much promising stuff as they have to date. Only one pitcher who took a full cut in the 1935 world series pot is likely to find himself in a minor league habitat and that's not a certainty.

Ford's Arm Is Sore.

The first sore arm among the lads showed up today. It is the property of Gene Ford, the big Hawkeye farm boy. Before Ford was stricken tutors had been trying to get him to "throw with his arm and wrist instead of his shoulder." In trying to correct his straight arm throwing Gene got himself a sore arm and will take a course of treatments under Dr. Lotshaw's battery of fancy lamps.

Capt. Woody English went through the day's drill in stocking feet, as a result of breaking in new shoes yesterday. Woody is subject to a strange affliction which he describes as aching toenails. His feet do not blister or swell, but his toenails curl and cause him deep agony as they pull away from the pink epidermis under same.

Will Visit Movie Company.

Manager Grimm continued to growl about the "cornfield infield," but held to his plan to stage the first intraclub game of the year Wednesday. He said the first game will be seven innings.

After the contest Manager Grimm will head a party of guests to the island isthmus, 19 miles over the mountains from here, where most of the "South Sea island" movies are taken. A company is on location there and the Grimm party will remain over night to make a study of how cinema stars spend their leisure. Those who are afraid of high places will be taken to the isthmus by speed boat.

The hitters today placed their orders for the supply of bats to be used on the exhibition tour.

Sparta Battles Olympia in Cup Match

BY OFFSIDE.

The Sparta-Garden City eleven, Chicago professional champions, and the Olympias, last year's western amateur finalists, will meet today in the second round of the National Challenge cup. TONY KEBERLE.

Tony Keberle, who plays center forward, holds the United States amateur half season record for goals with 66. Keberle is the Olympias' chief threat against Sparta. Sparta, which had little trouble in winning from the Ben Millers of St. Louis last week, will rely on the same lineup.

Another match of local importance is the fourth round of the National Amateur Western Division cup game, between the Wilsons and the Wacker F. C. of Milwaukee, Wis. The game is set for Kuppenheimer stadium, 19th street and Keeler avenue, starting at 2:30 p. m. Today's schedule:

STATE BOWLING ENTRY LIST TO CLOSE APRIL 1

Tourney Opens at Gold Coast April 18.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Entry blanks are being distributed for the thirty-ninth annual Illinois state bowling tournament, which will be held, beginning April 18, at the Gold Coast Recreation, 1213 North Clark street. Secretary Al Sindelar has set midnight, April 1, as the closing date for entries in both booster and regular divisions. It is estimated there will be $12,000 in prize money.

On South Side Alleys.

Six regularly scheduled matches and 12 postponed encounters will be rolled this afternoon in the All-Star Individual league at White City. Joe Wilman, who is leading the race, will meet Jim Waterson. Among other matches are Eli Maricich vs. Wally Freitag, Bill Lenzen vs. Al Rankin, Lee Hile vs. Eddie Zajac, Harry Halgren vs. Ad Plunge, and Tom Chyzy vs. Sykes Thoma. . . . Frank Brown went wild in the Crocombe House league, knocking over the pins for a 716 count on games of 235, 245, and 236. Other high scorers were John Groger, 663; Ed Hart, 656; Joe Rosenberg, 651; Jim McMahon, 642, and John Sube, 639.

On North Side Alleys.

The Budweisers fought their way back into a tie with Fuller Press for leadership in the Gold Coast Major league when they swept their series with Luxor Cigars while the Fullers were dropping one game to the Black Bears. Puccinelli had high game of 267 and Schroeder top series of 711, which helped Gold Coast win three from Edelweiss. . . . Twice this season Neumann Tailors have lost the last game of a series of the A. J. Williams Jewelry quintet by one pin. The most recent close setback threw the Tailors into a tie with Kruse Service Station for the lead in the Chicago Junior Traveling league. Among the high individual shooters were Ted Schmitt, 681; George Dawson, 641; Ray Frenk, 615; Babs Schranz and Roy Hoisington, 613, and Andy Sharkey, 601.

Randolph League.

The Randolph leaguers really scorched the alleys, especially in the matches involving the Mary Ann Breads and Roosevelt Brewing and the leading Mineralites and Budweisers. All four teams were over the 3,100 mark as the Mary Anns and the Budweisers won the odd games in the two series. Buck Flint topped the individuals with 724. He was followed by Schultz, 688; Bernicchi, 682; Gratz, 681; Layden, 672; Wilman, 671, and Wright, 667.

Windy City League.

A match that probably will decide the championship in the Windy City Major league will be rolled tomorrow night at the Windy City alleys, where the O'Keefe Coals, who are leading by two games, will take on the second place Blazek Tailors. If either team falters during the remaining five sessions of the league the ever dangerous Mineralites, who are four games from the top, will be ready to take command. Tomorrow night's schedule:

Tom Curran Blatz vs. Pilsen Olympia; Lauterbach Coal vs. J. M. Kralovecs; Betinis Boosters vs. Soper Brothers; Blazek Tailors vs. O'Keefe Coals; Mineralite vs. Vogel Brothers; Almanaris Water vs. Serrano Cigarros; McKesson's Old Crow vs. Strachan Coals; G. & W. Distillery vs. Burlington Zephyrs.

North End League.

Benny Helgeth of the P. J. Westers, blasted out 268, 233, and 233 for a 734 total in the North End league. As a result Benny's team piled up a 3,185 total and swept a series with the Samuelson's Arcades to regain third place. Jule Lellinger's Birk Brothers took a firmer grip on first place when they handed the second place Schamberger Schlitz a three game setback. The Birks totaled 3,178 with the aid of a 701 series by Leo Krisch. Tomorrow night's schedule:

Idle Hours at Milford, 9 o'clock; Birk Brothers vs. Roosevelts at the Gold Coast at 9 o'clock; Westers vs. Reed's Butterscotch at Lincoln Square, 7 o'clock; Schambergers at Samuelson's Arcade, 7 o'clock; Fox De Luxe vs. Michelobs at North Town, 7 o'clock.

Extra Daylight Will Cut Down the Massacre

If you drive home from work at the tail of the evening rush hour, you'll notice tomorrow afternoon benefits from Chicago's new eastern standard time that will be even more appreciable next fall and winter when the days are shorter. With an hour of light added to the end of the day, you won't be squinting from head lamps. Pedestrians won't be shadows in the dusk.

Next fall and winter, if you drive to work early, you may have darkness under eastern standard time that you wouldn't have under central standard time but this will be more than offset by the added hour of light at the end of the day.

Daylight Prevents Accidents.

The Chicago Motor club balanced these advantages and disadvantages as calculated from police accident reports during 1935 and concluded that an additional hour of light in the late afternoon last year would have averted 24 trafic deaths and 840 personal injuries. The method of calculation eliminated all other factors such as weather, trafic volumes and pavement conditions.

In cross-examining Oscar M. Gunderson, safety and trafic engineer for the motor club, on the witness stand at an interstate commerce commission hearing last week, Thomas L. Marshall, attorney for the Chicago Daily News, introduced a trafic accident chart purporting to show that the morning rush hours are more deadly than the evening. The inference the lawyer tried to create was that the loss of an hour of light in the morning was more vital than the gain of an hour of light in the afternoon.

"Your figures may be correct," Mr. Gunderson replied to a question from the attorney, "but they are lacking in significance. These figures of yours show that the number of deaths per 100 accidents in the early morning is high. But the fact remains that the total number of trafic deaths in the morning are few as compared with total number of deaths in the late afternoon; so the need for daylight is greatest in the late afternoon."

Death Statistics.

In the five years from 1931 to 1935 inclusive, 66 persons were killed in Chicago trafic between 5 and 6 a. m.; 78 between 6 and 7 a. m., and 81 between 7 and 8 a. m. In the same period, 395 were killed between 5 and 6 p. m., 385 between 6 and 7 p. m., and 375 between 7 and 8 p. m.

NEWS AND VIEWS

To meet the demand for a large and luxurious chauffeur driven car, Chrysler has added a town car to the 1936 line. This car is built on the 133 inch chassis of the Chrysler de luxe eight, with a strictly custom body by Le Baron.

Standard equipment includes the following body appointments: Wainscot panels of walnut, inlaid; window moldings of walnut to match panel; vanity compartment in upper rear quarters, with mirrors and concealed light at the top operated by an automatic switch; ash receivers above each arm rest; two cigar lighters; signal buttons to chauffeur located in front of each arm rest; hand mirror; notebook in the top of left arm rest; dome lights and quarter lights, with operating switches on body pillars; assist loops, robe rail, and hassocks.

H. A. Wehmeier, vice president and general manager of Community Motors, Inc., Chicago's Pontiac distributor, reports that Pontiac dealers throughout the country have doubled their sales in 1935 over 1934 and fully expect to register at least a 50 per cent further increase in 1936. Factory production in 1935 was over 180,000 cars, compared with 80,000 for 1934.

This winter has provided a thorough test for the new types of tire chains, according to a representative of leading tire chain manufacturers in the United States and Canada. These manufacturers are licensed under United States and Canadian patents to make tire chains on the new bar-reinforced principle. They manufacture both complete chains and emergency units under the brand names of McKay, Hodell, Pyrene, and Weed American.

When the new type bar-reinforced tire chains were announced earlier in the winter the claim was made that they would double the mileage and double the safety of ordinary chains. As evidence that this claim has been fully substantiated during a winter of bad driving conditions it is now reported that the demand for bar-reinforced tire chains greatly exceeded calculations.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

TURN SIGNALS.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—For the last five years I have had on my car electrically operated signals, which show the man following what turn I intend to make, either right or left. These signals can be seen at a considerable distance. At night they have a red light and are operated from the battery. I would not want to drive my car without these signals, as they have saved me many an accident or collision.

These signals are inexpensive. Every one driving in Europe must have his car equipped with these signals. Why not make it compulsory in Chicago?

If the cab companies would provide such signals on their new cars it would mean a big protection to the riding public.

RICHARD GRIESSER.

DANGEROUS SPEEDS.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Due to insufficient and antiquated lighting facilities, and to the lack of speed signs and warning signals, Archer avenue and 55th street from Cicero avenue to Harlem avenue have become a death trap. About 30 per cent of all trafic that travels over these two highways travels from 45 to 75 miles an hour. This is no exaggeration.

Children have to cross this highway, and at times are forced to wait from 5 to 20 minutes before they can cross. In the last five years there have been numerous fatal accidents. Proper lighting, continuous patrols by state and city police, warning signals, and speed signs would have a tendency to eliminate much of this outright killing.

JOHN KELLER.

MONTREAL'S SAFETY RECORD.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—While the writer was in Montreal recently a statement was noticed in the Montreal Daily Star to the effect that but three fatalities had occurred as a result of automobile accidents from Jan. 1 to Feb. 12. As Montreal is approximately one-third the size of Chicago, on a population basis, and as our record up until Feb. 12 was something like one hundred fatalities, Montreal's record seems to be a little short of amazing.

It is probable that the automobile registrations are not as great in proportion to population as they are here in Chicago, and yet it is not immediately apparent to the casual visitor, as trafic on the downtown streets seems to be proportionately as dense as it is in most cities.

This record is so remarkable that it certainly puts Chicago to shame. Maybe we should send a commission to Montreal to learn the "secret of their success" in keeping auto fatalities down to such a low point.

B. A. PARKS.

TAXI TACTICS.

River Forest, Ill., Feb. 26.—Whom need one know to be permitted the privileges exercised by the cab drivers of the city? I refer, naturally, to left turns, U turns, stopping for passengers in the middle of the block, and generally cruising at such a rate that trafic is slowed considerably.

VINCENT V. LOTTS.

COWBOYS IN AUTOS.

Big Springs, Tex., Feb. 16.—Go easy on the Chicago motorist. He's not so bad. Two days of driving across Texas has convinced me that the world's worst motorist is to be found here.

The New Deal "easy money" has taken the cowpuncher off his horse and put him in a new car. He thinks the brakes are used only when he wants to get out of the car and the horn is used only to hail his friends on the sidewalks or in the house.

F. J. B.

AGAINST LICENSE ENFORCEMENT.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Hal Foust's articles on various routes through the south were comparatively interesting. They made a fellow feel like cranking up the old model A and taking after him. But when your paper, under the Hal Foust byline, starts attacking those without money for 1936 licenses, you're letting this reporter go too far. I suggest sending him to Saskatchewan, Canada.

GAS TAX GROWS TO GIANT SIZE IN 17 YEARS

First Imposed by Oregon in 1919.

BY HAL FOUST.

Last week was the seventeenth birthday of the first gasoline tax levy in the United States. It was a 1 cent per gallon levy imposed by Oregon effective Feb. 25, 1919.

In this first year, 1919, Oregon and three other states that immediately followed its lead collected a total of $1,022,000 from this source. In 1935, gasoline tax collections in the United States were $808,422,000.

Since its inception, the motor fuel excise has exacted $5,318,615,856, according to the American Petroleum institute, a figure difficult to comprehend except as a New Deal "easy money" appropriation—and, as collected from the average car owner, it wasn't "easy money." The petroleum institute points out that last year's $800,000,000 revenue was equivalent to the cost of the Panama canal plus two operations the size of Boulder dam.

The following table shows the growth by years in automobile registrations [in hundreds of thousands] and the growth of the gas tax [also indicated in hundreds of thousands of dollars] with a calculation of the average gas tax per car per year:

1920	92	14	.15
1921	105	54	.51
1922	122	127	1.04
1923	151	386	2.56
1924	176	804	4.57
1925	199	1,484	7.44
1926	220	1,876	8.52
1927	231	2,583	11.20
1928	245	3,049	12.45
1929	265	4,313	16.29
1930	265	4,939	18.60
1931	258	5,364	20.77
1932	241	5,759	23.87
1933	238	6,993	29.30
1934	249	7,351	31.00
1935	260	8,084	31.09

The gasoline tax, when its revenue is used entirely for road construction and maintenance, was defended as an equitable excise by Roy F. Britton, director of the National Highway Users' conference, in an address last month before the annual convention of the American Road Builders' association. He condemned without mincing words, however, the diversion of gasoline revenue from the road fund, as has been done with millions of dollars by Illinois during Gov. Horner's administration.

Tax Is Unfair.

"The distance that a citizen must travel by automobile in his daily occupation," said Mr. Britton, "is an absurd measure of the amount of taxes which he should pay for any purpose other than construction and maintenance of the highways he uses. That unfair yardstick is used when gasoline taxes, levied on a special class of citizen for a special purpose, are diverted to any other purpose. . . .

"If the funds diverted last year had been used for highway work, nearly $150,000,000 would have found its way into the pockets of labor and would have given employment to more than 200,000 people the year 'round. . . .

"It would be hard to point to taxes that are sounder or more defensible in theory than the registration fee and the gasoline tax—the two principal motor vehicle tax levies. The registration fee is generally regarded as a 'readiness to serve' charge. The gasoline tax, reduced to its lowest common denominator, is a 'tax by the mile.' . . .

"When proceeds of this 'tax by the mile' are used for anything but development of the roadways that make the tax paying trafic possible, that tax becomes a sales tax on a special class, a discrimination and a mockery. . . .

"It is necessary that we demonstrate and keep on demonstrating the absurdity of the contention that now finds favor in some quarters—namely, that our road system has reached a great measure of completion. . . .

"The level of taxation rates should certainly be such as to encourage travel and not to retard it. With such a balance we create a 'benign circle': motor vehicle use produces revenue through the gasoline tax, which revenue builds more roads, which—in turn—create more use, more revenue, more roads, and so on."

PACK TURMOIL LEADS STADIUM TO CANCEL SHOW

The boxing show scheduled at Chicago Stadium Saturday night has been canceled, it was announced yesterday by Co-Matchmaker James C. Mullen. The action followed the turmoil and confusion created by Referee Norman McGarity Friday at the west side building when he declared the scheduled eight round bout between Lorenzo Pack and Cowboy Frankie Edgren no contest in the sixth round. The matchmaker indicated that the next card may be presented March 13.

An investigation into the allegation that Pack "was not doing his best" will be conducted by Chairman Joe Triner at the Illinois boxing commission one week from tomorrow.

Mullen Makes Statement.

"What good is a hearing now?" Mullen said. "The decision has been rendered. It's silly to think for a moment that Pack was trying to carry Edgren. Pack is coming and Edgren is going."

Pack, 20 years old, is only one year out of the amateur ranks. After his victories in the Golden Gloves finals, intercity, and international competition, he turned professional. Previous to Friday's contest he had scored nine straight knockouts.

Fans Protest Decision.

The crowd of more than 10,000 that attended did not approve of the verdict, which was the topic of conversation along the boxing rialto yesterday. Everybody held that the match should have been given to Pack on a technical knockout in any round after the second round.

Lorenzo, who floored the cowboy in this round and had him in a bad way in every round thereafter, appeared at the Stadium yesterday for his check, which amounted to about $1,600, and then left for Detroit, where he will meet Tony Galento of Orange, N. J., Friday night.

Edgren Has Eyes Treated.

A little later Edgren showed up for his purse of approximately $1,200 and then went to a physician to have cuts over each eye treated.

Asked why he didn't quit, Edgren exclaimed:

"What for?"

Sam Buxbaum, Chicago trainer, who seconded Edgren, attempted to toss in the towel after the fourth round, but the Colorado heavyweight refused to allow it.

COLUMBIA TRACK SQUAD DEFEATS PENN, PRINCETON

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Columbia won the second annual triangular track and field meet with Penn and Princeton today, but the feature performance was turned in by the Quaker flyer, Gene Venzke, in running the anchor leg on Penn's victorious two mile relay team.

Starting even with Columbia's McIntosh, Venzke loafed through the first quarter, but turned on the heat in the second two laps to finish 30 yards in front. He completed the half mile in 1 minute 56.4 seconds to give Penn a winning time of 8:09.7.

With two events still to be run off, Columbia was far out in front in the point standing, and only the second place position remained to be decided with Penn and Princeton fighting it out.

M'COY FAILS TO WIN VINDICATION IN MURDER CASE

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Kid McCoy, who was welterweight boxing champion of the world in the 1890's, said today he was "terribly disappointed" by the decision of the California advisory pardon board Friday denying his application for a full pardon for the slaying of his sweetheart 12 years ago.

"I'm going to try again as soon as possible," he said.

McCoy, whose real name is Norman Selby, was paroled in 1932 after serving 7½ years of a 24 year sentence. He has contended throughout that he is innocent. Now 63, McCoy is an employé of a motor company here.

Table Tennis Tips

[This is the eleventh of a series of weekly articles on table tennis by Coleman Clark, former national champion, present western doubles champion, and authority on this sport. Readers are invited to send contributions and address questions to the conductor of the column, care THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Tribune square, Chicago.]

BY COLEMAN CLARK.

We have all seen or know of table tennis, players who have all the strokes, and the physique to become world beaters, yet somehow they fail to come through. Do you fall into this classification? If so, reflect one moment and perhaps you will agree that nervousness or lack of concentration is the cause.

Nervousness.

If you are the jumpy kind [lots of us are] when you come up against a strange player do your level best to hide your weakness. Poker face your emotions—your disgust when you miss an easy shot. Your adversary may be just as frightened of you as you are of him, so if he observes that you become easily upset it will only encourage him. Don't curse your bad luck if you get a tough break—smile if possible. If you are the nervous type make it a point to play as many different persons as you can. Jump at the chance to enter tournaments and league play. There is nothing like experience to overcome the jitters and round out your game.

Concentration.

If you concentrate sufficiently on your match all nervousness will disappear. This will take your mind off yourself. After all, you can't think of two things at the same time.

You may have everything that goes to make up a good player, but if you don't concentrate on play during competition you will never get very far. Never relax—go after every point. Big leads can melt away like snow if you take things easy. Supposing you are leading, 19 to 13, and begin to ease up, content to let your opponent lose the last few points. He keeps the rallies going and you try a few frisky shots that miss their mark. Of a sudden you realize that your opponent is nearly level with you. You become rattled in the feeling that your adversary is fighting almost level with you when you thought the game was in the bag. At this point your nerves fail you and the chances are he takes the match that you never should have dropped. Concentration is one of the keys to success. Cultivate it.

Shamrocks and Pontiac Sextets to Clash Today

The Sandy Beach sextet of Pontiac, Mich., unbeaten in seven straight games, clashes with the Catholic Youth organization Shamrocks this afternoon at the Chicago Stadium. The Pontiac club is champion of the Greater Detroit Municipal Hocky league.

Three members of the United States national champion hocky team of 1935 are members of Sandy Beach. They are Bill Saari, Al Soumi, and Bill Rozinka. The trio played here last winter with the Baby Ruth sextet, which won in the playoffs against the Boston Olympics.

Coach Hal Owen will send the Pontiacs through a drill at the Stadium this morning. Following the Sandy Beach practice the Shamrocks will loosen up in a skating session before the match begins at 2:45 p. m.

The only change in the positions of the Shamrocks will be the shifting of Eddie Janelle, wingman who was tried at defense last Sunday, back to left wing. Tony and Steve Beda, the C. Y. O. brother combine, will be facing a brother forward line on the Sandy Beach sextet, which will have Bob and Mike Owen at right and left wing. 50 Holdouts Worry Major Club Owners

New York, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Major league club owners enter the month of March with the biggest holdout headache they have experienced in at least four years.

Where only a handful of athletes remained to be brought to terms at this time a year ago, a recount today revealed approximately 50 unsigned players, including at least 30 in the American league alone. The National league list is smaller but comprises a more noteworthy group of stars.

The total has been reduced by scarcely a dozen within the last two weeks, including the capitulation today of Red Rolfe and Pat Malone of the New York Yankees.

Leiber Stands by Threat.

Many of the best known performers still have salary grievances which they seem willing to air publicly and loudly. Aside from the holdout of the Dean brothers the most serious case to develop this week involves Hank Leiber, slugging outfielder of the New York Giants. Hank's threat to quit if he doesn't win a substantial increase is not taken seriously by club officials, but it adds a sturdy note to the general overture of dissatisfaction.

Even if the magnates go no more than halfway with their recalcitrant hired hands it appears likely to cost them an aggregate of $100,000 extra to get all needed signatures on the dotted line.

How's This for a Team.

The holdouts are not yet sufficiently organized in baseball to conduct a training camp of their own, from which united shouts of defiance could be hurled, but they could master a first class team on any field.

Here are the topnotch holdouts:

PITCHERS—Paul and Dizzy Dean of the Cardinals, Van Mungo of the Dodgers, Buck Newsom of the Senators, and Charley Ruffing of the Yankees.

CATCHERS—Ernie Lombardi of the Reds and Bill Dickey of the Yankees.

FIRST BASEMEN—Zeke Bonura of the White Sox and Hank Greenberg of the Tigers.

SHORTSTOP—Luke Appling of the White Sox.

THIRD BASEMEN—Harland Clift of the Browns and Pinky Higgins, Athletics.

OUTFIELDERS—Paul Waner of the Pirates, Wally Berger of the Boston Bees, Hank Leiber of the Giants, Babe Herman of the Reds, and Ben Chapman of the Yankees.

Medinah First to Set Date for Golf Invitation Event

Medinah Country club was the first to set the date for its annual invitation event, the Camel Trail, which will be held Aug. 12. Skokie will stage its Kiltie day on Aug. 5 and Exmoor tentatively has picked July 30 for its jamboree.

Collegian golfers are awaiting announcement by the United States Golf association of the location of the National intercollegiate golf tournament. It is possible it may be held at a club in the Chicago district.

The Chicago District Golf association is planning a big junior tournament. It will be an invitation event, to which directors of high schools, Y. M. C. A.'s, C. Y. O., and similar organizations will be asked to nominate at least two of their best players. Fred O. Rippel of Westward Ho is chairman of this tournament.

The Biloxi golf party, under the auspices of William Dewey of the Edgewater Beach hotel and J. Vincent Lanigan of the Illinois Central railroad, will leave March 5 at 1 p. m. by the Panama Limited. A thirty-six hole handicap will be played during the week at the Edgewater golf course, and the tourists will have a chance to play in an open event on March 8 at the Biloxi golf course.

SCHAEFER KEEPS WORLD FIGURE SKATING TITLE

The Austrian star, recent winner of the Olympic title, had a margin of six points over Henry Graham Sharp of England, who finished second. Robin Lee of Minenapolis, American champion, took eighth place, and Erie Reiter of Minneapolis eleventh in the field of 17.

The German combination of Maxie Herber and Ernst Baier, also Olympic champions, easily won the doubles title, replacing Rotter and Szollas of Hungary, who did not compete.

Maribel Vinson and George E. B. Hill and Grace and Lester Madden, the two American pairs from Boston, finished fifth and sixth, respectively. The Maddens had been conceded a chance to finish higher, but Lester fell on his back twice in attempting difficult evolutions.

The youthful American entries in the men's singles skated well, but were unable to overcome the handicap of inexperience in competing against a field of older stars. Schaefer, who had a comfortable lead after the school figures were skated yesterday, increased his margin in the fancy skating, at which he excels. Meanwhile Lee dropped back from seventh to eighth while Reiter's ranking remained unchanged.

PATTY BERG IS BEATEN ON 21ST HOLE FOR TITLE

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Lucille Robinson of Des Moines, Ia., defeated Patty Berg on the windswept Ormond Beach course today to win the South Atlantic women's golf championship after 21 holes.

Miss Berg, leaning against the 30 mile an hour winds which blew in from the Atlantic ocean, didn't play so well as on the first four days of the tournament, but Miss Robinson had to fight the strong wind, too.

Comes from Behind.

Miss Robinson, 23 years old, was one up after nine holes, lost her lead on No. 11, when Miss Berg scored a birdie four, and went one up again at the 12th. She equaled Patty's birdie three for the 213 yard 13th and lost with a par five on the 417 yard 14th, when Patty got her second successive birdie.

The gallery thought the match was about over when Miss Robinson went one down on the 15th with one over par four, while Miss Berg one putted for her par three and when they halved the 212 yard 16th with par fours.

Seventeenth Is Turning Point.

The 438 yard dog leg 17th proved the turning point of the match. Miss Robinson carded a birdie four to square the match as Miss Berg got a par five. They halved the 18th with fives and the match went to extra holes.

They drove into the wind on the third extra hole. Miss Berg got 160 yards on her tee shot and Miss Robinson's ball fell ten yards shorter. Both had good brassie seconds. Miss Robinson's third stopped a foot off the green and Miss Berg's was three feet back of it. Miss Berg approached weakly, using a midiron for the downhill lie. Miss Robinson was bolder, and her ball ran 6 feet past the pin. Miss Berg's ball was 6 feet short and her putt went a foot past, but Miss Robinson holed out for her par five to win the match.

BUSINESS GROUP FIGHTS FEDERAL SANITARY SETUP

Sewage a State Problem, Says Chamber Head.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Opposition to wholesale transfer of water pollution control from states and communities and establishment of federal sanitary districts, as proposed in pending legislation, was voiced today by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

In a letter to chamber members, Harper Sibley, president of the organization, called attention to the Lonergan bill which would set up a permanent federal planning and administrative agency and would charge it with carrying out a federal program of pollution control. A subcommittee of the senate commerce committee has heard proponents of the bill and will hear opponents within two weeks.

Oil Waste Also Considered.

The committee also is considering a bill which would make the discharge of oil on tributaries of coastal waters illegal and regulate discharges of industrial waste into navigable waters.

"The interest of chambers of commerce, representing communities with sewage problems, and of trade organizations representing industries with a very large stake in the proper solution of this problem, prompts the national chamber to inform its members of this proposed legislation and to remind them of the opportunity for presenting such facts as they think would be helpful in a proper solution," Mr. Sibley wrote.

"The national chamber long has advocated that states and local communities should retain control over problems relating to their water resources. The Lonergan measure proposes a wide departure from the principle of placing responsibility for pollution control upon interested states and localities.

Urges State Agreements.

Pollution problems in some instances do concern several communities or states, and in such instances the principle approved by the chamber is for the interested states to deal with the subject through compacts.

"The Lonergan measure, however, would divide the United States into federal sanitary districts and authorize the establishment by a federal agency of standards of purity and rules for such districts governing the discharge of sewage and industrial waste into navigable waters, and for the enforcement of these rules. These proposals obviously are contrary to the views given to this chamber by its membership.

"The chamber recognizes the importance of adequate measures to cope with water pollution. It is opposed, however, to wholesale transfer of activities to the federal government that should be retained by state and local communities. By leaving this responsibility upon the state and community, there will be best protection of economic needs and encouragement of initiative, efficiency and economy in planning, executing and administering projects. Thereby is preserved, also, the integrity of local government."

May Be U. S. Citizen

LILY PONS.

New York, Feb. 29.—(AP)—Lily Pons, French opera star, announced today she will bring her furniture over to this country and "perhaps" become a United States citizen.

"I shall become a legal resident when I return in April," she said before sailing on the Conte di Savoia to sing in opera at Monte Carlo. Her present home is in Paris.

Miss Pons, who had been ill for a week with laryngitis, boarded the boat at the last moment. She wore a full length mink coat and muff to match.

"I lost four pounds in my illness," she said. She now weighs barely 100.

HOPKINS FORBIDS GOOD WPA JOBS FOR CANDIDATES

Friend of Democrats First Exception.

Elective officeholders or candidates cannot be employed in administrative jobs by the Works Progress administration, according to a recent ruling of Harry L. Hopkins, federal administrator.

The ruling, which came to light yesterday, was issued by Hopkins only a few days ago, although WPA has been in existence over eight months. Hopkins prefaced his decision in a letter to state administrators with no explanation except that the question of policy had arisen.

"Loyal Democrat" Excepted.

It became apparent immediately that exceptions are to be made to the ruling. Hopkins' office in Washington was asked if it would apply to Walter Williams of Benton, who holds elective office as trustee of the University of Illinois, and also is the district WPA administrator who announced late last year that good WPA jobs would go only to "loyal and deserving Democrats." The answer was "no," as Williams' elective office is "an honorary rather than a political office."

Ralph H. Burke, deputy Illinois WPA director, said that the ruling was not new in Illinois.

Road Jobs to Officials.

No jobs have been given to candidates or persons holding elective offices, according to Mr. Burke, except in a few instances where no one was qualified for a road job except the county superintendent of highways.

"In those cases," said Mr. Burke, "we required the county superintendent to take a leave of absence from his county job so that he would not be taking pay from both. I don't know how far reaching the policy is, but I should think offhand that it would apply only to candidates running for pay offices."

'CALLED NAMES' BY MILLIONAIRE; ASKS DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Mrs. Barbara C. Morrison filed suit for divorce today against Morris Morrison, multi-millionaire sportsman, charging he called her "filthy names," was rude to guests, and attentive to other women.

She asked that a million dollar trust fund be set up for their year old son, Edgar. She also seeks $7,500 monthly alimony, including $2,500 monthly to be used to support the son.

The Morrisons were married Sept. 12, 1933, at Salt Lake City, Utah. Mrs. Morrison's lawyer said Morrison is a New York City resident who spends considerable time in Los Angeles.

HOME SHORTAGE NOW HERE, SAYS KENNETH RICE

Title and Trust Officer Is Optimistic.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Foundations have been laid for one of the greatest real estate booms in our history, according to Kenneth E. Rice, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company. He made this statement in an address on the realty cycle before the Ely chapter of Lambda Alpha, an honorary professional land economics fraternity of Northwestern university.

KENNETH E. RICE.
[Moffett-Russell Photo.]

With housing shortage already with us, and its inevitable sequel of higher rents and then increasing property values in the offing, Rice predicted the next development will be resumption of building on a big scale.

Many New Factors Present.

Rice pointed out that real estate cycles ordinarily move with a regularity and similarity that enables one to make reasonably sure predictions, based on previous records. Never before, however, have there been so many new and uncertain factors in the field to confuse the statistician.

"The government has never before interested itself in the construction of housing or in mortgage financing," said Rice. "At the moment, the Farm Credit administration and the Home Owners' Loan corporation have extended credit secured by real estate to the amount of over six billion dollars, and much more in the actual construction of housing.

All Set for Big Boom.

"There exist huge bank reserves, which are susceptible of vast expansion. The insurance companies and other large institutions also have enormous funds which remain uninvested. The final result of the devaluation of the dollar, the fear of inflation, fiat currency, and the unusual economic conditions abroad are a few of the factors which are so confusing at the present time.

"It is probably a fair statement to say that with the billions of dollars being appropriated and spent by congress, with bank reserves the largest in history, with real estate paying a sound return on today's investment, and an acute shortage in housing a foundation has been laid for one of the greatest real estate booms in our history."

Occupancy Above Normal.

Rice said a study of figures compiled on a large number of properties indicates that at the beginning of this year there was an occupancy of 94.1 per cent on properties used for housing of all kinds and 87.7 per cent on commercial or business properties.

"It has been said that a vacancy in housing of 10 per cent is normal," said Rice, "and if this is a fact, it is true that at the present time there is a serious shortage of housing in our community, which, referring to the inexorable law of supply and demand, must make itself felt by increased rentals for existing properties and a substantial increase in new construction.

Predicts Much Building.

"Regardless of how sentimental we may feel toward the construction industry, a substantial increase cannot and will not come until it becomes profitable to build. From all these considerations one should be able to see that within the next year or eighteen months we shall enter the next phase of the real estate cycle, wherein building will reach large proportions and tens of thousands of artisans will become employed, all of which will make itself definitly felt upon general business conditions.

"Large building operations naturally require new land; therefore, higher land values and subdivision activity."

Pointing out that rents are now on the upward trend, Rice said: "For several years prior to the spring of 1934 tenants required and were given concessions of one or two months' free rent. During 1934 this practice was eliminated. In May of 1935 residential rentals had increased between 5 and 10 per cent, and we shall no doubt see a further increase this spring."

PLAN BUSINESS BLOCK AT MAJOR BELMONT CORNER

Plans are being completed by Pereira & Pereira for a one story business block to be erected by the Continental Properties, Inc., of which Harry Balaban is president, at the southeast corner of Belmont and Major avenues. Costing a reported $30,000, the 82x126 building will contain seven stores and will be completed about June 1. Work is expected to start within the next thirty days. Philip M. Levit, of 105 West Monroe street, is renting agent.

The new building will be of modern design with exterior walls of red and black structural glass and white metal. It is fifty feet west of the new Will Rogers theater, now being erected.

WEST CHICAGO AVENUE LEASE.

The Wagner-Fagan company, wholesale distributor of yeast and flour, in order to care for expanding business, have leased the building at 1039 West Chicago avenue from the Firestone Tire and Rubber company for a term of years, through Frank C. Wells of L. J. Sheridan & Co. The property is to be remodeled.

WORK UNDER WAY ON $600,000 BUSINESS BUILDING

The above six story building is being erected by the trustees of the Central Manufacturing district for the Albert Pick company, Inc., which has leased it for a term of years. A. Epstein, structural engineer, is architect. The reported total investment is $600,000, of which $100,000 is in the site. William N. Alderman made this perspective.

HARDING WILL OPEN 11TH RESTAURANT IN THE MORTON BUILDING

With the signing of a five year lease for ground floor and basement space in the Morton building, at 208 West Washington street, John P. Harding yesterday announced plans for his eleventh Chicago restaurant. Construction and alteration work will start at once and the formal opening of the new Harding unit is scheduled for April 1.

In addition to the first floor restaurant, a downstairs dining room and men's grill with a seating capacity of 200 is planned. Harding stated that with the opening of the new restaurant approximately 100 employés will be added to his present pay roll of 825.

The original Harding restaurant, established in 1901 at La Salle and Van Buren, has grown to a chain operation now serving approximately 20,000 people daily, it was stated. The company also operates the Harding hotel at 19 North Clark and the Harding Market company. Howard L. Storch, of Ross & Browne, represented all parties in yesterday's lease negotiations.

FHA PLANS SIX BRANCH OFFICES ABOUT CHICAGO

These so-called "insured mortgage clinics" will be on the north, south, west, northwest, and southwest sides, and in the loop. Definite locations have not yet been selected. Each office will be manned by a staf of FHA representatives from March 19 to 28. The offices will be open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Air Conditioning Planned for Entire O-G Stores Chain

Expansion of an air conditioning program, which now includes three units, to all of the fourteen stores of O'Connor & Goldberg, was announced yesterday by John O'Connor, president of the 33 year old shoe concern. The newest O-G establishment, to be opened at 57 West Madison street next Saturday, will have a complete all year temperature control system. This unit will replace the store at 159 West Madison street, which was the company's first store.

[Sketch by John Doctoroff.]

According to O'Connor, this will be one of the best lighted shops in the country, especial attention being paid to illumination both inside and in the shop windows and store front. Unusually elaborate neon lighting is contemplated for both the store signs and general illumination of the shopping display lobby.

Rose Colored Lobby.

This lobby entrance will be 26 feet deep and will have rose colored glass trim. The firm name will be etched into the glass covered pillars. The neon sign will be in white and blue with streamers of blue leading from it along the ceiling of the display lobby into the store.

The 30x100 store space is being remodeled from plans by Taussig-Flesch & Associates. The color motif of the store interior will be pink coral with all carpets and furniture upholstery in similar shades.

Air conditioning now is being installed in the O-G store at 23 East Madison street. The three units where temperature control already is in operation are: Sheridan road and Wilson avenue, Logan square, and 2748 Milwaukee avenue.

Called a Success.

"We intend eventually to have all of our stores air conditioned both for summer and winter use," said O'Connor. "It has been so successful in three stores that we believe it is an essential to good merchandising. It has proven an aid to comfortable buying for our customers and comfortable selling for our employés."

O'Connor & Goldberg was founded by Julius A. Goldberg, who is treasurer of the concern, and O'Connor, president, on Feb. 28, 1903. It has both loop and outlying stores, but none in the suburbs at present.

Details of the layout and construction of the $600,000 plant of the Albert Pick Co., Inc., now being erected at the southeast corner of Pershing road and Leavitt street, in the Central Manufacturing district, were made public yesterday by Maurice Rothschild, chairman of the board of directors, and I. S. Anoff, president. When completed on July 1 it will be one of the most modern structures of its kind in the world it was asserted.

This concern, which celebrated its 75th anniversary three years ago, for nearly two generations has been one of the nation's leading concerns in the manufacture and distribution of equipment and supplies for hotels, restaurants, clubs, and institutions.

The six story Pershing road plant will stand on 87 concrete caissons and will be of reinforced concrete construction with exterior of face brick and terra cotta trim.

The first floor will be devoted almost exclusively to shipping and receiving departments. At the front of the building will be a marble trimmed vestibule and lobby, customers' waiting room and information office.

The second floor will be used for manufacturing, and the third and fourth for warehouse purposes. The fifth will be entirely for display, and the sixth for executive and general offices. A portion of the top floor will be used for a carpet sewing workroom.

A. Epstein, structural engineer, designed the new plant. The E. W. Sproul Construction company has the general contract. The building will have 200,000 square feet of floor space. Additional ground at the rear will afford 40,000 square feet for plant expansion.

Build $25,000 Addition to Imperial Baking Co.

A $25,000 addition to the plant of the Imperial Baking company at 1015-25 North Damen avenue is being erected from plans by Richard Griesser & Son, architects. The new unit will house a modern and complete cake department, new company offices and enlarged shipping room and garage.

CUTS MORTGAGE RATES TO 4½% IN WEST SUBURBS

Bankers' Life to Extend Cheap Money Area.

Another big life insurance company yesterday announced 4½ per cent mortgage money for building and refinancing, this time for borrowers in the western suburbs. Dovenmuehle, Inc., acting as the sole loan correspondent in this area for the Bankers' Life company of Iowa, said that the same low rates of interest which have been prevalent in Evanston and and the north shore towns, as well as in the choicer residential and business districts of Chicago, will be made available for suburbs to the west, beginning tomorrow.

GEORGE DOVENMUEHLE.
[Moffett Photo.]

"The Bankers' Life loans will be made up to 50 per cent of the appraised value, at 4½ per cent interest, in Oak Park, River Forest, Elmhurst, Glen Ellyn, Riverside, La Grange, Hinsdale on the west, and Park Ridge to the northwest," said George Dovenmuehle, vice president of Dovenmuehle, Inc.

Five to Fifteen Year Maturities.

"Loans will be made for maturities ranging from five to fifteen years and the buyers will be given the option of making regular reductions of principal on either a quarterly or semi-annual basis, as they prefer.

"The Bankers' Life has for many years been purchasing loans from us in certain western suburbs. The favorable experience that it has had with investments in these towns has led to its decision to make 4½ per cent money available to the owners of good properties located there, in cases where the loans will not exceed 50 per cent of the total appraised value of land and building combined."

Dovenmuehle said that loans also would be made on the same low basis in such sections of Chicago as Sauganash, Beverly Hills, South Shore, and Devon-Western, and apartment house loans in all good residential neighborhoods. The outlying retail centers will include those in the vicinities of 63d and Halsted, Belmont and Lincoln, 71st and Jeffery, Logan square, and Lake and Harlem in Oak Park.

Lowest Rates for Choicer Property.

It was pointed out that mere residence within communities or neighborhoods where the 4½ per cent rate is available does not constitute the only qualification necessary. Dovenmuehle said that bottom rates apply always only to the choicer residential and business properties and only in cases where the financial status of the owner is beyond question.

"We find that the lowering of interest rates has proved a great stimulus to mortgage borrowing," said Dovenmuehle. "Our own business showed an increase of more than 1,100 per cent in February over the same month last year. Many new homes are being built today in the suburbs to the north, south, and west.

"Many persons are starting to make mortgage loans to provide capital for expansion of their business. All this renewed activity has, of course, been a boon to the entire mortgage business."

Lease Half of Remodeled Floor; 700 North Michigan

More than half of the recently remodeled fifth floor of the 700 North Michigan Avenue building, owned by the estate of Marshall Field, has been leased during the last month, according to Fred B. Wolff, manager. Among the new lessees are John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance company, Louise Madeleine, milliner; Katzenbach & Warren, wall papers, and D. Lorraine Yerkes, Ethel R. Brookfield, and Helen Farnham, interior decorators. All will move in prior to May 1. The fifth floor was made over during January to duplicate the second floor, with a butternut paneled arcade.

Tokio Crisis.

Japan's national election two weeks ago was to decide whether [A] military conquest or [B] industrial expansion should dominate. The government party headed by Premier Admiral Keisuke Okada, who opposed rabid militarism, won the election.

Last Wednesday war minded young army officers and their troops, numbering 900 to 1,000, attempted to wipe out election returns. They assassinated three elder statesmen of Okada's so-called liberal cabinet and thought they killed Premier Okada. Then they barricaded themselves in government buildings across the park from Emperor Hirohito's palace in Tokio. Twelve thousand of the imperial guard and other loyal troops laid siege.

News of Okada's death, accepted as authentic, left Japan fearing the rise of a military dictatorship and the world fearing a bigger war crisis in the far east.

China feared new Japanese invasions. Russia feared greater hostility on the Outer Mongolia-Manchukuo border. Great Britain feared further inroads in her far eastern trade. France feared entanglement through the new French-Russian pact. [See Diplomacy.] Nationalistic Germany expressed admiration for "super-nationalism." The United States looked on in horrified wonder.

But yesterday the rebels ended the three day siege by surrendering and Premier Okada, in effect, rose from the dead. Reports declared that the rebellion was over and the government would be reorganized. [See main news section.]

The strange story of the revolt was pieced together from reports which pierced rigid censorship. The rebels were members of the First division mobilized for Manchukuan service and were on their way to entrain Wednesday at dawn. Under the suspected leadership of Capt. Teruzo Ando or Capt. Nonaka, they seized the war office, cabinet office, home office, and police headquarters, all in the vicinity of the imperial palace.

They split into groups and went to the homes of the elder statesmen whom they felt were enemies of state.

One party demanded that Premier Okada, 66 years old, appear in his garden. But according to yesterday's reports it was not Premier Okada but his brother-in-law, and secretary, Col. Denzo Matsuo, who stepped forth to face the rebels' guns. Members of his family apparently forced Okada to flee while while Matsuo, who resembled him, died heroically. The rebels occupied the premier's home and allowed funeral preparations to be made.

Korekiyo Takahashi, 82, finance minister, was shot while in his bedroom. With three bullets in him the aged financial genius demanded, "What are you trying to do?" An officer almost severed his arm with a saber.

Viscount Makoto Saito, 78, retired admiral, premier before Okada and lord keeper of the privy seal, fell before machine gun fire. His wife held her hand over the muzzle and was shot through the hand.

The third cabinet victim of the "blood purge" was Gen. Jotaro Watanabe, 65, inspector general of military education. Admiral Kantaro Suzuki, lord chamberlain of the imperial court, was seriously wounded. Count Nobuaki Makino, former lord of privy seal, apparently escaped when his wife delayed the attackers while he fled. Prince Kimmochi Saionji, who completed the group of elder statesmen, also escaped. Servants and others were said to have been killed. One report set the toll at 80.

Commentators saw the growing ire of the war lords as the reason for the uprising. Premier Okada, praised as a hard drinker of rice beer, became premier in July, 1934. He formed a cabinet of fellow elder statesmen to serve as buffer between emperor and army. Liberal Watanabe was the successor of Gen. Jinzaburo Mazakai, a militarist.

Takahashi, seven time finance minister, was credited with keeping industries reassured and the government financially sound, since the Manchurian conquest in 1931. Stock markets fell when he resigned in 1934 and rose when he returned to office the same year. The Bank of Japan loaned $54,000,000 last week to bolster private banks. He was opposed to increase in the military budget. He warned the army that the people would lose confidence in it because of mounting debts and heavy taxation.

The army had no cabinet leader and its Fascist elements wanted to be free of cabinet control and directly responsible to the emperor. The militarists resented government friendliness to big business.

Chinese observers said it was a case of the Japanese war lords knuckling down to a more conservative policy or precipitating a war before the country was bankrupt.

The Japanese government compared the "direct action" to that of fanatically patriotic officers who in May, 1932, killed Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai.

Of thirteen presidents, kings, and premiers assassinated since 1920, two were Japanese. The other was Premier Yuko Hamaguchi, in 1930.

The uprising was confined to a faction in the army. All the leading generals, including the commander of the rebellious infantry, were reported to be coöperating with the government. The First and Second fleets were called in to guard the harbors of Tokio and Osaka.

Emperor Hirohito had called on Home Minister Fumio Goto to form a new cabinet and made Lieut. Gen. Kohei Kashii military governor of the capital area under martial law.

Yesterday Okada returned to his premiership. It was said that Okada had chosen to lie low as long as the rebels defied the army. It was indicated that the emperor had been in conference with Okada during the time he was officially "dead."

The naval officers are hostile to the army war lords and some declared their "fanatical patriotism" was costing Japan world prestige. They desired to use force against the rebels, but Kashii preferred peaceful action.

It took the emperor's demand to effect the surrender. Little loss of life was reported. The rebel soldiers were promised leniency, but the fate of the estimated five officers who led them was uncertain.

The young leaders apparently had the alternative of facing trial or committing hari-kiri [suicide by disembowelment with a sword]. Their uprising resembled other coups d'état [strokes of state] which were considered praiseworthy patriotism in the oriental way of thinking. It was said that their goal of strengthening military power may be achieved.

Diplomacy.

Adolf Hitler last Wednesday refused Benito Mussolini's proposals of an alliance between Italy, Germany, Poland, Austria and Hungary to offset British and French alliances with other European nations. But the German realm leader expressed sympathy for Italy and left the way open for future diplomacy.

The French chamber of deputies on Thursday voted 353-164 approval of the long pending French-Russian mutual assistance pact. The bedlam raised by the right and left wings in the chamber excited Premier Albert Sarraut so that he forgot to make the issue a vote of confidence. The pact now must be approved by the senate.

Since the pact was directed against Germany, an offer of friendship from Hitler agitated French pro and anti-soviet factions Friday. The offer was conveyed through an interview published in the Paris Midi. "You will do well seriously to consider my offer of an understanding," Hitler was quoted. "Never did a reich leader make such proposals. Let us be friends."

To French opponents of the pact this was an argument against a "dangerous commitment." Proponents of the pact replied, "Don't pay any attention to what Hitler says. It's a trap."

Hitler confined himself to "benevolent neutrality" with Italy. He pleaded that Germany was now economically and militarily weak, it was reported. [See Business Review.]

With the league of nations committee of eighteen scheduled to meet tomorrow at Geneva the question of an oil embargo against Italy occupied attention in London and Rome.

Handsome Capt. Anthony Eden made his first speech Monday before parliament as British foreign secretary. But it was mild and he dodged any forthright stand on league extension of trade penalties against Italy to include oil imports. He said Britain would have no part in forging rings of steel around any nation.

The next day the cabinet was reported to have told Eden not to advocate an oil embargo. Three objections were set forth: That the French-Russian pact might unite Hitler and Mussolini; that Mussolini might leave the league of nations, and that Italy refuses to join in a naval conference agreement as long as sanctions exist. [See Main News section.]

Meanwhile rumors were heard in London and Rome that Ethiopian-Italian peace negotiations were under way. [See War Map.]

BAR BUFFALO BILL.

Citizens of Cody, Wyo., on Wednesday commemorated the 90th anniversary of the birth of Col. William F. [Buffalo Bill] Cody. But down in Texas the United Daughters of the Confederacy protested against proposals to erect a statue of Buffalo Bill at the Texas Centennial exposition. "He was a Union spy," they asserted. To this Cody's relatives, through Mrs. H. W. Thurston, a niece, replied: "He did his duty." Biographers say that Cody's spying activities for the Union army were limited to mounted scout duty but that he wore no uniform.

Taxes.

President Roosevelt on Friday informed a nation already overloaded with New Deal taxes that this week he would ask congress to find $1,137,000,000 in new and replacement revenues. He will make no recommendations as to how the bulk of them shall be collected; that will be the job of congress, he said. Republican leaders immediately accused him of passing the buck. [See Business Review.]

The new taxes are needed, the President said, to pay the bonus and to finance the soil conservation substitute for the outlawed Agricultural Adjustment act. As he outlined it, $493,000,000 is needed to make up for the loss of the AAA processing taxes to July 1; $524,000,000 is needed to carry on soil conservation in the next fiscal year beginning July 1, and $120,000,000 is needed for the bonus.

The President said he hoped to get $150,000,000 of the estimated needs by a special tax against those processors who received refunds of almost $300,000,000 in AAA taxes. He described this as a "windfall" tax. He apparently meant by this that the processers had gotten something for nothing. Fruit blown off trees by a high wind—and often picked up at no expense of money or labor—is a windfall.

The requested half billion tax up to July 1 would end there, although it might be paid over a period of three years. The more than half billion tax after July 1 would be a permanent annual tax. The $120,000,000 bonus tax would be an annual tax for nine years.

Congressional leaders said they would begin work on the new taxes the minute they receive the President's report. Some fear was expressed that the task will delay adjournment tentatively scheduled for May 1.

Reprisal.

When Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, holder of three foreign decorations for meritorious service in the world war, appeared before a house committee last December, he felt free to talk. A letter to the committee from Gen. Malin Craig, chief of army staf and Gen. Hagood's superior officer, stated that all officers called before the committee had been personally instructed to answer questions "fully, freely, and frankly, with no restrictions whatever."

Thus, in referring to Works Progress administration funds in relation to the army, Gen. Hagood minced no words. WPA money, he said, was "stage money, for you can pass it around, but can't get anything out of it in the end." He said it was like pouring money down a hole, that it was harder for him to get 5 cents to buy a pencil then to get $1,000 to teach hobbies to the CCC boys. [See Works.] Hagood understood that his remarks would be kept confidential. He later protested strongly against plans to make them public.

In these statements Gen. Hagood stepped on New Deal toes, and the New Deal cracked down. On Monday it was announced that "By direction of the President," he had been relieved of his command of the 8th corps army area at San Antonio, Tex., and ordered home.

Republican and even Democratic congressmen protested Gen. Hagood's removal. Representative Thomas L. Blanton, Texas Democrat, called it "an infamous, dirty, damnable and inexcusable outrage." Senator Daniel O. Hastings, Delaware Republican, said it was the kind of terrorism that precedes dictatorship.

Works.

West Virginia's two Democratic senators, Rush Holt and Matthew Neely, washed their state's dirty WPA linen in the senate last week, much to the chagrin of their fellow New Dealers.

Holt started the rumpus two weeks ago with an attack on the WPA administration in West Virginia. After his speech his brother, Matthew Holt, a WPA engineer, was fired. On Monday Senator Holt was at it again. WPA administration in the state was a disgrace, he said; no man could get a WPA job without a political O. K. This remark was recalled next day by Senator Hastings. Up jumped Senator Neely. Holt's charges were untrue, he said. Up jumped Holt. They were true, he insisted.

The two men quarreled again Wednesday. This time Holt carried papers proving, he said, that political indorsements were necessary for jobs, and showing, he said, that Senator Neely had a hand in many appointments. He declared that out of 127 administrative appointments, only four job getters really needed employment. He then charged that wage increases given to 27 favored men would put 828 men to work at smaller wages.

Other Works news: The WPA at Menominee, Wis., put men to work building backhouses. The cost of each will be about $22. . . . WPA workers in Illinois received pay for 6,559,950 hours in which they were idle due to cold weather. The cost for these workless hours was put at more than $3,000,000. . . . The national unemployment council charged Wednesday that 40,000 persons in New York City have been on WPA pay rolls fraudulently.

Farm.

The senate and house on Thursday accepted a conference report on the New Deal's farm plan substitute for the defunct AAA. The measure then went to the White House, where approval was expected.

Senator William E. Borah criticized the so-called consumers' amendment which authorizes the secretary of agriculture to estimate the difference between farm and city purchasing powers and to fix a ratio equalizing those powers. The New Deal plan is to equalize the difference—to the farmer, of course—by payment of federal easy money. No man could fix such a ratio, even with divine power, said Borah.

On Friday the house passed an agriculture department appropriation bill in the amount of $161,863,000 for the fiscal year of 1937. This is more than $14,000,000 higher than the 1936 appropriation. At the same time the President released $7,000,000 from a sum "not to exceed $30,000,000," to be used for crop production or seed loans. On Wednesday he had vetoed the $50,000,000 crop production loan bill. He said $50,000,000 was too much, and the loans could be made from existing relief funds. Rising resentment against the veto hurried him into releasing the $7,000,000 item. Loans up to $200 may be obtained by individual farmers.

Neutrality.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the revised neutrality bill, extending the present act, which was to have lapsed at midnight, until May 1, 1937. At the same time he issued a new embargo proclamation against Italy and Ethiopia. One change in the revised act is the provision making unlawful the sale of securities of a belligerent nation. Another provides that the act shall not apply to any North or South American republic at war against a non-American state. [See main news section.]

Capital Notes.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. announced on Monday that $1,009,000,000 in government obligations would be refunded on March 16. He said new borrowings would be sought at the same time. Details of the offerings will be made tomorrow. The new borrowings will boost the public debt to $31,300,000,000 by the middle of the month. [See Taxes and Business Review.]

Child Custody.

Miss Margaret Mann of Evanston last week produced new evidence that she and not the late Mrs. Madge Mordoff is the mother of 3 year old "Sonny Boy." Miss Mann claims that the child is Reginald Arthur Mann, born to her in a Chicago orphanage in 1932 and placed in the home of Dr. Gordon Mordoff as an infant boarder. The latter, a Wilmette physician, claims that the boy is Gordon Mordoff III., born to his wife in Minneapolis.

The three weeks' fight for "Sonny Boy" continued Thursday when Judge Rudolph F. Desort of the Superior court heard two affidavits in support of Miss Mann's claim. One was filed in the court by Attorney Louis Schnedler of Minneapolis. Schnedler declared that Mrs. Mordoff came to him in September, 1932, seeking to adopt a child. She intended, he said, to make her husband, in Chicago, believe the child was his own. She was having domestic difficulties, he related. [A separation suit was pending when Mrs. Mordoff died last Feb. 10.]

Mrs. Rosalie Hose, Mrs. Mordoff's sister and Schnedler's former secretary, substantiated his story in a second affidavit.

The hearing, which grew out of a kidnaping charge placed against Dr. Mordoff, will be continued next Thursday.

Judge Michael Feinberg of the Circuit court on Friday ended the five year visit of Joan Purdy, 7, with her maternal grandparents. Judge Feinberg ordered that the child be returned to custody of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert McLean Purdy of New York. Purdy, a real estate broker, testified he had left the little girl with Mr. and Mrs. John Miller of Chicago when he was financially strapped by the depression. Purdy declared his temporary separation from his wife had been merely "a lever" to get his daughter back. The court action began when Purdy obtained a writ of habeas corpus and a deputy sherif took the child from the grandparents' home. Mrs. Purdy sided with her husband. After the judge's decision they announced they would take Joan on a trip to Bermuda. Joan appeared happy.

Judge Rudolph F. Desort of Superior court ruled that George Hansen, 45, an electrical engineer, is the father of the 7 year old boy born to his wife, Esther. Hansen was then awarded a divorce on the ground of desertion. Mr. and Mrs. Hansen lived together only a month and Hansen doubted that the boy, Cliff, was his. He said he wanted to be convinced. Blood tests merely indicated that Hansen might be the father. The judge based his ruling on the fact that neither man nor wife charged infidelity. Mrs. Hansen will have custody of the boy.

New Trolleys.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, receivership administrator of the Chicago Surface Lines, last week approved the purchase of 83 modern streamlined street cars. Judge Wilkerson signed an order permitting Guy A. Richardson, co-receiver, to spend $1,292,119 of the lines' 19 million dollar renewal and depreciation fund.

Present and future objections of a subcommittee of the city council transportation committee were overruled. The committee had asked for a delay of the court order. Mayor Kelly had opposed the modernization of a single company when there was pending an ordinance to unify all traction companies. James M. Sheean, receivers' counsel, said that if the Chicago Motor Coach company could add 100 new buses without objections being filed by the city the surface lines should be accorded equal privileges. William H. Sexton, city traction committee attorney, said the replacing of 156 old cars with 83 new ones would comprise an improper use of the renewal fund. Judge Wilkerson replied that he could see nothing wrong with replacing "two short cars with one long car."

The new cars will cost about $15,500 each. Rubber mountings will reduce noise. Each car will weigh 10,000 pounds less than the present front entrance cars, and will seat 59 passengers more comfortably. They are said to be faster and safer. Deliveries are expected to begin in July. They will be used on the Madison street line.

City Notes.

The National Safety council reported that automobile accident deaths in January totaled 2,570, an increase of 100 over January, 1935. The all-time high record for the month was 2,808 in 1934.

The Chicago Exposition ... last week approved final plans for landscaping the permanent exposition in Burnham park. The commissioners discussed the proposals of Alfred Shaw, supervisory architect, for 15 exposition buildings. The construction project calls for an exposition hall "nearly two block long," at 23d street; an outdoor amphitheater seating 20,000 persons, a children's building with a garden, a dance pavilion, ice and roller skating rinks, restaurants, picnic shelters, bath houses and two quarter-mile beaches. An accurate estimate of the cost awaits detailed drawings.

The school board, sitting as a civil service trial committee, discharged Charles Winslow as principal of the Gregory Elementary school and Lake View Evening High school. Winslow was convicted two weeks ago of embezzling $9,954 in tuition funds. Winslow, however, will be eligible for the maximum $1,200 year teachers' pension since he is 60 years old, according to Miss Catherine J. Trout, assistant secretary of the fund. Winslow returned the money embezzled, which was raised for him by teachers. His sentencing awaits hearing of a motion for a new trial.

Dismissal ended a suit brought by the City Club of Chicago seeking penalties of $1,646,200 from 58 men and women [several of them dead] who were members of the country board since 1910. Judge John W. Preihs of Pana, sitting in Superior court, ruled there was no legal cause for action. The suit was similar to the one filed last June against Robert M. Sweitzer, former county clerk, who was ousted as treasurer for a shortage during the same period. The suit alleged that the defendants failed to require proper auditing of county funds. It asked that they be assessed $200 for each of 8,231 such "offenses."

FINANCE-SPORTS

Politics

The fight for Ohio's 52 delegates to the Republican national convention in Cleveland took definite shape last week. On one side is Senator William E. Borah, liberal presidential candidate; on the other side is the regular Ohio Republican organization.

Matters came to a head when Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Senator L. J. Dickinson, and Frank Knox, rivals of Borah, informed the Ohio state central committee that they would not enter the primary. Borah early had said he would do so.

Majority favor in the regular G. O. P. ranks apparently is with Gov. Landon. Therefore, the organization had to take action, in the absence of opposition from the other candidates, to prevent Borah's running alone and winning the slate. Accordingly, the committee met in Columbus on Thursday.

That evening they announced that Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, son of William Howard Taft, former President and late chief justice, would enter the primary as a "favorite son." His running mate will be Charles R. Fredrickson. Borah's running mate will be Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher.

The "favorite son" system in primaries is an old political trick to win unpledged delegates. The delegates elected for Taft will be his in name only; actually they will be able to vote for any candidate. Obviously, delegates elected for Taft will mean fewer delegates for Borah.

Borah has steadily fought the system. He called it a fraud in a reply Wednesday to former Senator Walter Edge of New Jersey. Edge has mentioned that New Jersey favored Gov. Landon. Edge said Borah's fight on the "favorite son" system might be good for the party. Borah will begin his Ohio campaign on March 19.

In his first press interview in nine months, Postmaster General James A. Farley predicted Thursday that President Roosevelt would receive more electoral votes in 1936 than in 1932. He said he wasn't worrying.

Farley refused to admit his chief would lose a single state. He said he didn't know how campaign funds were coming in. The Democratic party expects $200,000 from Philadelphia for the national convention; that will put the party out of debt for the first time in many years, he said.

Democratic affairs became tangled in Georgia during the week, and Gov. Eugene Talmadge, fiery foe of President Roosevelt, blamed it all on the New Deal. The story goes back to last year when the state legislature failed to pass a special appropriation. On Jan. 1 Talmadge assumed the rôle of financial dictator.

Needing funds for the board of control, Talmadge asked indorsement of a warrant for $139,000 for that department from Controler General William R. Harrison and Treasurer George B. Hamilton. They refused. Talmadge sent over a detachment of National Guardsmen and ousted them. He appointed C. B. Carrecker as controler general and J. B. Daniel, treasurer. Two days later the Atlanta postoffice, several banks, and various officials refused to recognize the new officers until a court had approved their appointments. For a day Talmadge could not get funds. But by Thursday funds flowed in from banks which were willing to recognize them. Then Talmadge blamed the New Deal for his troubles.

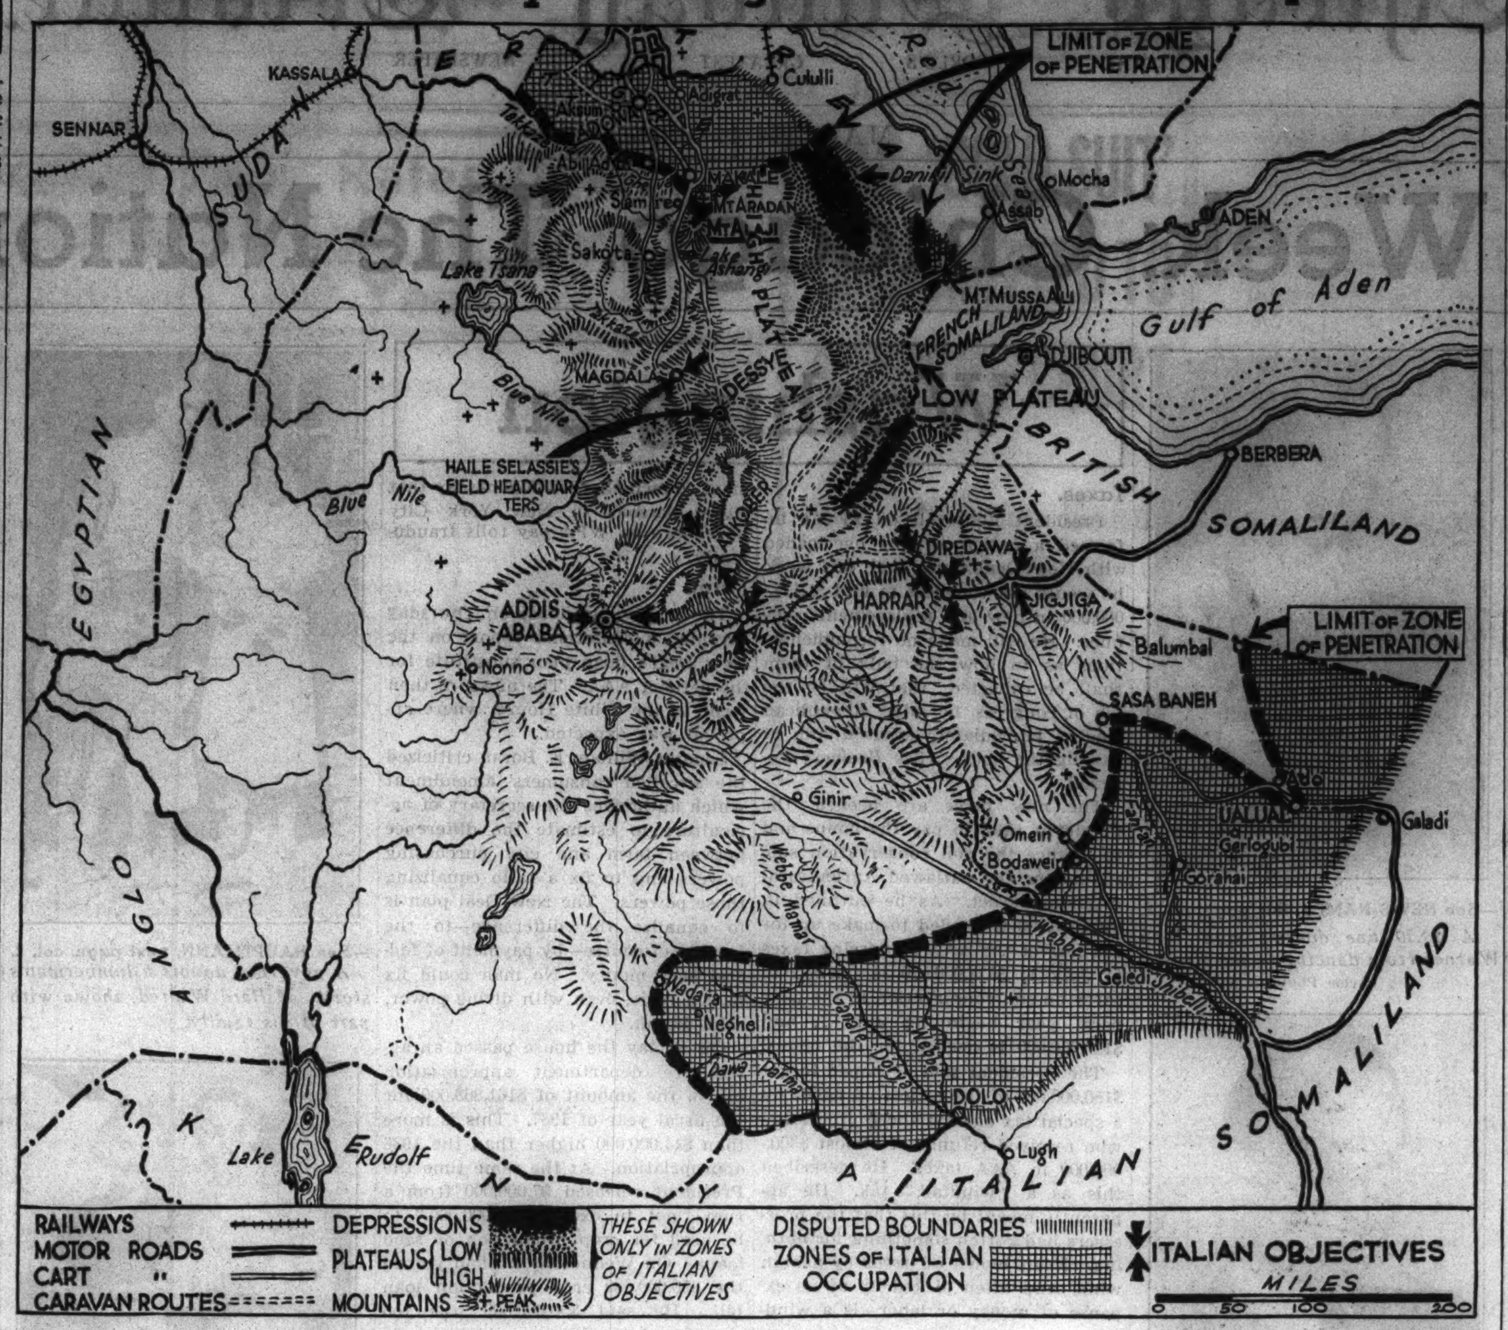
"This situation," he said, "was deliberately brought on by the New Deal to stop me from campaigning against Roosevelt."

The deadline for filings in Illinois ended Monday. There were nine candidates for the Republican nomination for governor, a record number. Wayland Brooks headed the list. Eighth down was H. Wallace Caldwell. Caldwell's name, however, probably will not go on the ballot, since his signature on his petition was not notarized. The law requires a sworn signature. Brooks is far in the lead so far.

Harrison E. Spangler, western director for the Republican national committee, said on Sunday that President Roosevelt's declaration in favor of a bill to give civil service protection to all present holders of first, second, and third class postmasterships was "another brazen attempt to debauch the public service." Most of the postmasters are Democrats. Such a bill would insure Democratic control of those jobs for many years.

Howard M. Overstreet last week quit his job as a policeman in Washington, D. C., to campaign for the Democratic nomination for President. He says he has hopes.

Italian Army's "Big Push" in Ethiopia



"Mount Alaji has been revenged." That was the cry in Rome Friday when Marshal Pietro Badoglio reported the capture of the historic mountain stronghold where Ethiopian warriors turned back the Italians in 1895-'96.

The taking of Mount Alaji, about 125 miles south of Italian Eritrea and 290 miles from Addis Ababa, emphasized the recent success of the Italian army on the northern front.

In the last month the Italians apparently have driven a great wedge south along the mountain chain which parallels the cart road and caravan route to the Ethiopian capital. Mount Aradam, about 20 miles north of Alaji, was taken Feb. 15 after a hard five day battle with the 80,000 defending Ethiopians. This marked the beginning of a "big push" of Italian regulars after the heavy losses on both sides in the Timbien mountain valley battle west of Makale on Jan. 20-24. An unbiased war correspondent reported that the Kassa-Seyoum troops were so crippled in that battle that they were unable to help Ras Muluegheta defend Mount Aradam. He reported that Ethiopian rebel tribes were helping the Italians.

The Italians invaded Ethiopia on Oct. 3 on north and southern fronts. Adowa [see map] was taken Oct. 6 and Makale on Nov. 8. Marshal Badaglio replaced Marshal de Bono in command in November. But it was not until a month ago that the Italians were able to overcome fierce Ethiopian resistance combined with mountains and rain. The Italian invasion at Mount Mussa Ali was stopped on Oct. 31.

On the southern front Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's motor troops, meanwhile, have penetrated over 100 miles inward in the last two months. Wadara, about 300 miles from Addis Ababa, was reached on Jan. 18. Earlier advances took the Italians to Ualual on Oct. 10, Geledi on Oct. 21, Gorahia on Nov. 7, and Sasa Baneh on Nov. 10. Much of this territory is disputed.

The main objective of the Italian campaign is the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railway. Lying in the route of the northern army is Dessye, Emperor Haile Selassie's field headquarters, which were bombed for the second time Feb. 9. While Mount Alaji opens the way into the interior, to some extent, the Italians are not expected to make any extensive drives immediately. They have always to guard against flanking attacks and the little rainy season is anticipated soon. Rain has bogged Graziani's tanks down. The big rainy season begins in June.

The Italians' arrival at Mount Alaji was far different than the expedition of 1895. The Ethiopians then slew 2,000 Italians and drove them back to Adowa. This time, however, the Italians occupied the natural fortress with little action. The Ethiopians were reported in full flight.

Reports from Rome yesterday told of a new battle under way in the mountainous Timbien section of the northern front, with Ethiopian warriors of Ras Kassa engaged with Italian regular and native troops since dawn Friday.

Reports from Addis Ababa earlier in the week told of a victorious Ethiopian raid on an Italian fort near the holy city of Aksum. Another report told of a daring raid into Eritrea at the northwest corner of Ethiopia.

Crime

Juveniles in crime: Emma Willis, 18 year old farm girl, was found not guilty of the murder of her father, Iddis H. Willis, 51, by a jury at Anadarko, Okla., Wednesday. The jury accepted her plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. She shot her father last Dec. 21 because, she said, he beat her and made improper advances. . . . Louis Dibenga, 15 years old, was found guilty in Montreal of manslaughter in the slaying of his stepmother last October. The jury recommended mercy. The boy and his five brothers and sisters testified they had been mistreated. . . . Gladys Dillon, 14 years old, was held by authorities at Hamlin, W. Va., on a charge of poisoning eight members of her family. They will recover. Police quoted her as saying she mixed poison in flour "to get even" with her family for refusing her permission to visit her sweetheart.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Chicago, on Wednesday denied Louis P. Piquett a rehearing on his Dillinger case conviction. Piquett, a lawyer and former city prosecutor, is under sentence of two years in prison for harboring the late Homer Van Meter, Dillinger gunman. A $10,000 fine also stands against him.

A ninety day reprieve was granted on Monday to Alexander Mackay by Gov. Frank Merriam of California. Mackay, a British subject, was to have been hanged two days ago for kidnaping guards in an escape from San Quentin prison. The British government intervened, asking clemency. . . . Death sentences of Mrs. Mary Cowan and her young brother-in-law, Allan Cowan, were commuted to life imprisonment by Minister of Justice La Pointe, at Ottawa, Ontario, Monday. They, too, were to have been hanged two days ago. The two killed Albert Cowan, husband of Mrs. Cowan and brother of Allan.

The conviction of Elmer B. O'Hara, chairman of the Democratic state central committee of Michigan, on a charge of bribing a Macomb county commissioner to influence a condemnation award, was set aside by Judge P. C. Gilbert at Mount Clemens, Mich., on Monday. O'Hara was granted a new trial. Meanwhile he is appealing another conviction involving a charge of vote stealing. He is under a four to five year sentence in this case.

Murder stalked the Mardi Gras in New Orleans Tuesday. The body of Mrs. Estelle Hughes, 29 years old, was found in a remote spot near the Louisiana and Arkansas railroad station. She had been shot in the temple. Police arrested Jack O'Day, 26, a jockey. He was in a stupor and bleeding from a head wound. "I might have shot the woman," he admitted. "I was too drunk to know anything. I do know I was slugged by some one and robbed." Police said Mrs. Hughes, whose home is in Panama City, Fla., had gone out on a party with friends. She had visited New Orleans with her daughter, Janelle, 9 years old. [See Religion.]

Robert Mahan, Kentucky mountain man, went on another shooting rampage last week. Mahan recently was freed by a Letcher county jury of killing his infant son. Friends compelled him to leave the district because of high feeling against him. Two weeks ago he returned and shot up a church gathering. No one was hurt. On Sunday he reappeared and shot at several homes, among them that of his father-in-law, Henderson Bentley. No one was hurt. Posses are looking for Mahan.

James Day, 21 years old, a convict in Stateville, Ill., penitentiary, pleaded not guilty in Joliet court Tuesday to an indictment charging him with the murder of Richard Loeb, a fellow convict. Loeb, serving life and 99 year terms for the Bobby Franks murder, was stabbed to death on Jan. 28. Judge Claude N. Saum set Day's trial for March 9. Day's plea will be self-defense. Meanwhile the governor's commission investigating charges of laxity and favoritism in the prison, questioned several guards during the week. They also made a tour of the prison and then adjourned until tomorrow.

George Blank, 24 years old, a Sunday school superintendent, was sentenced to life imprisonment at Ithaca, Mich., Thursday, three hours after he had confessed killing his wife, Beatrice. He chloroformed her, then ignited her oil soaked clothing. She was an expectant mother.

Francis Flynn, 40 years old, died in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison Thursday night for the murder of Margaret Parlatta, 6 years old. But Dominic Parlatta, the girl's father, not only did not see Flynn die but was not allowed to throw the switch. He had asked that privilege. Warden Lewis Lawes refused.

Bandits held up Max Hauser, a New York gem salesman, in front of the Allerton hotel, Chicago, Friday, kidnaped him, and robbed him of unset diamonds he said were worth $34,000. The diamonds were insured for $25,000.

Religion

Churches throughout the world opened the Lenten season on Wednesday. On that day millions of Catholics—almost 1,000,000 in the Chicago archdiocese alone—had ashes imprinted upon their foreheads. Lutherans, Episcopalians, Methodists and others held their devotional services.

In New Orleans the colorful Mardi gras came to a close at midnight Tuesday as Lent began. This traditional carnival—brought from the old world—began on Jan. 6 and, with its series of gay balls and parades, worked gradually to the dramatic climax of Shrove Tuesday, Mardi Gras day, and its spectacular finale of parades and mummery joined in by the city's thousands. The carnival was marred by a murder. [See Crime.] The origin of the word carnival, by the way, is traceable to the pre-Lenten festivals traditional in Catholic countries; it means, literally, "meat farewell"—denoting the period of abstinence from meat. The original Latin words were "carne vale."

The Evangelical center in the church portion of the Manhattan Towers hotel, New York, was dispossessed. The space was leased to the Mormon church. The latter church will pay $500 monthly rental. The Evangelical center paid $125.

A special judicial commission of the Chicago presbytery found the Rev. Dr. J. Oliver Buswell, president of Wheaton college, guilty of violating church discipline and conspiracy to undermine the work of the church. The penalty imposed by the commission was a warning to Dr. Buswell "to desist from his course." This penalty did not suit Dr. Buswell. The commission should have deposed him, he said. "I prepared for a fight and received a slap on the wrist," he complained. The charges against him grew out of his work in organizing and supporting the Independent Board for Presbyterian Foreign Missions in opposition to the regular board.

Mae West

Mae West, curvacious blonde of the screen, and James Timony, her business manager, came to Chicago last week, then took the next train back to Hollywood. The trip brought revelation of a studio fight between Mae and Ernst Lubitsch, Paramount production chief.

The full story was disclosed piecemeal in Chicago, Albuquerque, N. M., and Hollywood. At Albuquerque, en route home, Timony said that Lubitsch had "tried to push Mae around, but that in the end she pushed him around." He asserted Lubitsch, trying to be a Hitler, wouldn't even give her the cameraman she wanted. "After all, she was in the show business long before he was," Timony concluded.

In Chicago, Tuesday, Lubitsch said the row was caused by Mae's refusal to give Victor MacLaglen a decent rôle in their latest picture. He denied he had tried to push her around. "She's too heavy," he said. He admitted she had been in the show business before he was, adding that he was only 44 years old.

On Thursday Frank Wallace, an actor, added to Mae's woes by getting a court order in New York furthering his suit to prove that she is his wife. Mae retorted this was "another of his publicity stunts." Court records in Milwaukee show that a marriage license was issued to a Frank Wallace and a Mae West in 1911. Wallace says she's his wife; she says she "never heard of the guy."

Education

Stanley C. Ross, principal of Wayland academy, Beaver Dam, Wis., startled members of a women's club by his statement that "perhaps humanity would be better off uneducated." What good is education, he asked, when insanity is increasing, divorces are increasing, more people are being slaughtered by automobiles, and present day children are becoming softies?

St. Louis was host to some 10,000 educators last week and heard some new viewpoints expressed during sessions of the annual convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education society.

The John Dewey society named Alfred E. Smith, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, William Randolph Hearst, Frank Belgrano, the American Liberty league, and the Daughters of the American Revolution as the most potent enemies of American democracy and academic freedom in public schools. Dr. George S. Counts of teachers' college, Columbia university, read the society's indictment. About one-half his audience applauded.

Charles A. Beard, author and historian, asserted that efforts to bar the study of controversial subjects such as communism represented attempts by "selfish and narrow interests to conquer the schools." He added: "Surely no intelligent American believes that European history should be deliberately falsified by omitting all references to communism."

Many resolutions were considered; some passed. Many of these demanded academic freedom. Some opposed political control of schools. Others condemned legislation that requires teachers to swear allegiance to the nation or flag.

Hauptmann

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey continued his one man battle to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann from the electric chair the week of March 30.

He attacked the testimony of Millard Whited, Amandus Hochmuth and Joseph Perrone, three important prosecution witnesses. Both Whited and Hochmuth testified that they saw Hauptmann near the home of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh about the time the flyer's son was kidnaped on March 1, 1932. Perrone testified that Hauptmann handed him a note to deliver to Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon, go-between, a month later.

Gov. Hoffman charged Monday that Whited in April, 1932, had denied to police that he saw any suspicious persons near the Lindbergh home; that two and a half years later he changed his story and identified Hauptmann. Hoffman expressed belief that Hochmuth, 88 years old, was too old to be able to identify anybody accurately. And Perrone, he asserted, had hazily identified several other persons as the note giver before he identified Hauptmann.

Attorney General David Wilentz and County Prosecutor Anthony Hauck Jr. criticized Hoffman's activities. Wilentz charged him with persecuting witnesses; Hauck called his treatment of them unfair.

Meanwhile interest centered on reports of an ultra violet ray test indicating that the kidnap ladder used to convict Hauptmann may have been deliberately put together for that purpose. This test may influence Gov. Hoffman's attitude toward a second reprieve. He has said he will not grant another. Belief is he will grant one at the last minute, hoping that Hauptmann, if guilty, will break down as the apparent end nears.

Medicine

Death and Dinner Bells.

Dr. Ivan Petrovich Pavlov died last week in Moscow at the age of 87. The great physiologist's death was caused by a type of grippe.

The fact that soviet Russia put white bearded Dr. Pavlov on a figurative pedestal as Exhibit A of the country's scientific trail blazers did not detract from his preëminence in the field of behaviorist physiology and psychology. In 1904 Dr. Pavlov won the Nobel prize for his long research in the functions of digestion.

It was Dr. Pavlov who found that when a dog smelled, saw, or tasted food nerve signals to the stomach started a flow of digestive juices there. He proved this by disconnecting throat and stomach to prevent the food from reaching the stomach.

By ringing a bell while a dog was eating he induced the dog to water at the mouth whenever a bell was heard. All this demonstrated that nervous or mental processes control body functions.

These habit patterns were "conditioned reflexes." Dr. Pavlov's discoveries showed psychologists that babies acquired their instinctive knowledge by association of events—such as hunger and a bell's ring. The theory that all human behavior was the result of the influence of environment grew out of the conditioned reflex experiments.

A translation of one of Dr. Pavlov's scientific publications, "Conditioned Reflexes," is widely used in American colleges.

The Diagnosis: Bunk.

Dr. Hugh Cabot, surgical consultant at Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., told Northwestern university medical students that 150,000 physicians in this country are not too many but too few for adequate medical care. Many medical authorities contend that there are so many physicians that all cannot hope to earn "a good livelihood." These same authorities also contend that the newly graduated medicoes lack sufficient training.

Dr. Cabot defended health insurance, either voluntary or compulsory. "We hear protests," said Dr. Cabot, "that if the physician is put on a salary he will lose his idealism and be reduced to the status of a craftsman. I say without hesitation that that is unmitigated bunk."

Deadly Thaw

Sudden thaws caused by the breaking of the cold wave brought floods to many sections of the country last week. Rain, blizzards and avalanches also added to the misery.

Nearly 10,000 persons hurriedly fled from the Ohio river lowlands between Newburg, Ind., and Uniontown, Ky., as an ice gorge in the river, 70 miles long, began to break up. At one time the river stood 3.8 feet above flood level. Ice was packed 20 feet high at dam No. 48. Breaking of ice gorges in the White and Wabash rivers also caused alarm. At Logansport Mrs. Tom Penn died in the surging Eel river.

Rampaging streams imperiled hundreds of residents in eastern Ohio. Toledo worked frantically to stave off threatened floods from the ice choked Maumee river and bay. There the 24 inch thick ice jammed and shot huge blocks high in the air.

Pennsylvanians had to flee from the rising waters of the tributaries of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers. Downtown Pittsburgh was damaged by the high Ohio river. An ice gorge in the Illinois river near Marseilles, Ill., rose 30 feet and smashed three boats. People around Annawan, Ill., had to vacate their homes for several days because of floods. Beardstown and Peoria residents were also menaced.

Rains and blizzards caused floods in northern and central California, with a death toll of at least seven.

Avalanches, loosened by the thaw, killed two men and a woman at the Camp Bird mine camp near Ouray, Colo., killed three men east of Wallace, Idaho, and killed three more in the Cascades, 65 miles west of Seattle.

Foreign Notes

The "inside story" of "Hitler's Secret Love," published last Sunday by Le Journal in Paris, caused a to-do in Paris and Berlin. The article said that one of the German realm leader's loves ended in the official suicide of his niece. It hinted she was murdered. Le Journal said Hitler refused to give up this affair on the advice of aids, and that he got revenge for her death in the Nazi "blood purge." Five other reported recipients of Hitler's "love," ranging from an Austrian Jewess to the sister of Ernst Hanfstaengl, Harvard graduate and Hitler's foreign press chief, were named. The German embassy protested the publication and the Paris police confiscated all copies they could find. The newspaper federation protested and three chamber of deputies members demanded that the government explain the suppression. The German government filed a criminal suit against Le Journal. The suit, brought through the French foreign office, was based on an 1883 law against insults to foreign leaders.

Two nationalists shot and killed Col. E. Francis Riggs, insular chief of police, last Sunday in San Juan, Porto Rico, as he was riding home from Catholic mass. Young Elias Beauchamp and Hiram Rosado admitted killing Riggs to avenge the slaying of four nationalists last November when police tried to prevent a nationalist attack on university students. Both Beauchamp and Rosado were shot when they tried to seize rifles at police headquarters, the police said. Two hours after Riggs died, District Police Chief Francisco Velez Ortiz was killed at Utuado while attempting to stop a nationalist riot in a café.

Two agents investigated the slayings for the department of justice at Washington, D. C. Nationalists, seeking independence from the United States, have hindered election registrations. Riggs a former army colonel sent to Porto Rico in 1933, had favored deliberate action in suppressing the nationalist terrorism.

Col. Luis R. Esteves, a West Point graduate, was named Riggs' successor.

Great Britain last week prepared for war. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin announced that the government will issue a "white paper" on Tuesday explaining its billion and a half dollar defense plans. He said he soon would add to his cabinet a new post of ministry of defense. The house of commons approved a $39,055,000 estimate for military purposes. This was opposed by Labor leaders. The building of seven 1,850 ton destroyers was announced. The house discussed means of protecting civilians from gas attacks. Plans for a chain of air defense stations across southern England were announced. With these will be coördinated an elaborate alarm system. The government is planning to ask trade unions for a three year industrial truce so that all heavy industries can concentrate on rushing war machine orders.

The fourth case of suspected sabotage [malicious destruction] aboard British fighting vessels was reported by the admiralty at London. The destroyer Velox at the Chatham dockyard was the fourth reported damaged. Mine releasing apparatus was said to have been put out of order. Other ships involved were the cruiser Cumberland at Chatham, and the battleship Royal Oak and the submarine Oberon at the Devonport dockyard.

The new leftist government in Spain last week followed up its release of 30,000 political prisoners by ordering private employers to rehire all workers discharged after the insurrection of October, 1934. Including the prisoners, this meant rehiring of some 100,000 who lost their jobs by participating in general strikes. Although the action threatened the economic structure of Spain's industries, Manuel Azana, again premier, was required to carry out his electoral promises to Socialists and communists. Industrialists, fearing a revolution, were complying. Meanwhile the toll of riot deaths rose from 27 during election week to 33.

The Syrian cabinet resigned last week and sympathizers of the nationalists' revolt against French domination immediately formed a new ministry. Count Damien de Martel, French commissioner, appointed Attal Ayoubi as premier. A general strike and continuous clashes of police and nationalists have caused five weeks of chaos. De Martel promised leniency for the hundreds of imprisoned rioters and assured Syrians that a new treaty would be negotiated to give the little country in southwestern Asia an independent government.

Science

Human Animals.

The human mind approaches the animal level during times of fatigue and strong emotional stress. This was the conclusion last week of Dr. Gregory S. Razran of New York after conducting 16,000 experiments on 37 students of Seth Low Junior college who were employed by the National Youth administration, a federal project. To stimulate his subjects in the experiments Dr. Razran used pretzels, mint candies, imaginary steak and mechanical noises. He found that human thinking was unpredictable but that it falls into three levels, animal, child and adult. Dr. Razran said: "The nearest thing to automatic action . . . occurs during fatigue and strong emotional stress when a person neither thinks nor reasons."

White Man's Cousin.

Dr. Alex Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian institution, Washington, D. C., reported in the American Journal of Physical Anthropology that his studies indicate the American Indian is more closely related to the white man than to the Asiatic or yellow man. Dr. Hrdlicka found more similarities than differences between the red man and the white, and judged the separation of races was "not too far back." Anthropology is the science of mankind.

Wirephoto Expansion.

The Associated Press research laboratory at New York demonstrated a portable transmitter of wirephotos last week. The machine, small enough to fit in a suitcase, now makes it possible to relay pictures over any telephone wire for reproduction on the regular Wirephoto network machine. The small transmitter's 4x5 inch picture is reproduced automatically as an 8x10 picture at Wirephoto stations. These new machines will be placed in service at approximately 25 cities not included in the present Wirephoto network. Their easy transportation will permit pictures being sent immediately from any news scene which is near a telephone line.

Navy Shock Proofing.

Lester P. Barlow, Stamford, Conn., inventor, reported the discovery of a material adopted for the construction of battleships that would make the war craft virtually immune to the explosive shock of bigger guns than they now can use with safety. Barlow believed the secret material's shock absorbing quality would permit the increase of battleship lengths from 600 to 1,500 feet and enable the vessels to be fitted with bigger guns which would increase their firing range by 10 miles. Data for naval construction has been submitted to congress. Barlow invented a depth bomb used in the world war.

Legislature

The cause of honest elections in Illinois moved nearer attainment last week when the house, on Tuesday, passed the Schnackenberg-Hubbard-Brands permanent registration bill, and the senate, on Wednesday, advanced it for a possible vote next Wednesday.

Under the permanent registration system, a voter on registering would have to sign a card and give certain specific information about himself. Later, before voting, he would be required to sign another card, and his signature would have to agree with that on the original card. Election experts say that the system would eliminate the voting of "floaters," encourage more citizens to vote, and save nearly $1,000,000 in election expenses.

The Schnackenberg bill would apply to nine Illinois cities, including Chicago. Two other pending bills, sponsored by the Nash Democratic organization in Chicago, would apply the registration to the entire state. A hot fight over the three bills is expected in the senate.

Labor

Officials of the Strutwear Knitting company filed suit in Minneapolis on Monday for $101,500 damages against Gov. Olson, Adjt. Gen. Walsh, and Mayor Latimer as a result of labor troubles which have kept the company's plant closed since last August. The company officials charged that they were deprived of the use of their property by the failure of the defendants to provide adequate protection for plant employés who were willing to work. A strike at the plant has been in effect since August. On Wednesday Mayor Latimer and Sherif Wall engaged in a wordy dispute over responsibility for keeping order at the plant.

The American Federation of Labor refrained last week from accepting or rejecting an offered contribution of $500,000 from eight unions for financing a campaign to organize steel workers. Acceptance will be considered at the May meeting of the federation's executive council. Failure to accept the offer last week was ascribed to a feeling of the federation's high command that there were "strings attached." The offer was made by a group of unions fighting for industrial unionization, which is opposed by the federation executives.

Edward F. McGrady, undersecretary of labor, was in Akron, O., yesterday trying to settle the strike of 14,000 employés at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber plants. The situation has been somewhat tense, with strikers picketing in defiance of a recent court order banning such mass action. At the end of the week it was noted that the number of the picket lines had dwindled. Union and police officials expressed fear that an extreme move on either side might precipitate disastrous trouble.

Flying

More than 6,000 pieces of mail were carried across the New York-New Jersey state line near Greenwood Lake, N. Y., on Sunday by two rocket propelled planes. The aircraft were made of light metal; their wingspread was 15 feet. They rose to a height of 40 feet and were shot forward by successive rocket propulsions for a distance of nearly 250 feet, after which they crashed.

Three Danish flyers were killed near Copenhagen on Monday attempting to rescue a nonexistent flyer. The airmen had heard what they believed to be an airplane in distress. They believed the pilot to be trying to find a landing place. It was snowing. They got into their own plane to escort the supposed lost plane to safety. They crashed. Investigation later showed no other plane had been near.

Miss Jane Ray, president of the Chicago Girls' Flying club, is now an inspector for the Illinois aeronautics commission. She was appointed several days ago. She has been flying more than five years and holds a pilot's license.

It was learned Thursday that Dutch authorities at Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, had arrested Alfred Harred, a reporter, for publishing a story that he had found Paul Redfern, American flyer, lost in the jungles. Redfern disappeared in 1927 on a projected South American flight and is believed to have crashed in Guiana. Earlier in the week Harred reputedly admitted his story was false.

RESERVE BANK HERE MAY HAVE NEW CHAIRMAN

No Action Taken on Stevens' Post.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Rumors of a change in the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago were again current yesterday following the failure of the federal reserve board in Washington to act on the reappointment of Eugene M. Stevens.

Late yesterday official notification was received by the Chicago bank of the reserve board's approval of the election of George J. Schaller as president a d Howard P. Preston as first vice president. Directors had named Schaller and Preston at their regular meeting on Friday, but the election was subject to the approval of the board in Washington.

Appointed by Board.

The chairman, who is also federal reserve agent for the seventh reserve district, is appointed directly by the board. For two years it has been known that the reserve board did not see eye to eye with Stevens and that members of the board were thinking of replacing him. During the last few weeks it has been reported on good authority that the change was contemplated in the near future.

Stevens, who left the presidency of the Continental Illinois bank to become chairman of the reserve bank on the opposite side of La Salle street, is a Republican. The reserve board, which has been predominantly Democratic under the present administration, has just been revamped under the terms of the banking act of 1935 with all members newly appointed by President Roosevelt. In banking circles, however, it is reported that there were other issues than politics on which Chairman Stevens and the reserve board have not been in agreement.

Two Plans Reported.

According to information obtained from usually well informed sources yesterday, the reserve board is considering a temporary appointment of 60 to 90 days for Stevens, whose term expired yesterday, and his replacement within that time by an unnamed banker to whom the board is anxious to give the job. An alternative plan, it is reported, is to retain Stevens in a subordinate advisory position.

Some members of the reserve board are understood to favor the election as chairman of James Simpson, chairman of the board of Commonwealth Edison company. Simpson recently retired from the directorate of the Chicago reserve bank after serving for twelve years. If Simpson should be chosen his salary would be placed at a nominal figure, according to this information.

Schaller and Preston yesterday were approved for five year terms. The bank's other officers were named for one year terms and their election is not subject to reserve board approval.

Satisfied with Schaller.

As president, Schaller will be the chief executive officer of the bank. Chicago bankers yesterday expressed satisfaction with the selection of Schaller and Preston for the two top jobs in the nation's second largest "bankers' bank." Both are regarded as conservative. Schaller came to head the Chicago reserve bank two years ago from Storm Lake, Ia., where he controls the Citizens First National bank. He is a Republican. Preston, a Jeffersonian Democratic from Tennessee, left the Giannini Bank of America in San Francisco in 1932 to head the Chicago office of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, becoming deputy governor of the Chicago reserve bank a year later.

REPUBLIC STEEL PLANT EXPANSION TO COST $3,000,000

A $3,000,000 plant improvement program was announced yesterday by the Republic Steel corporation. Expenditures will be made on 11 plants.

The largest single expenditure will be $1,300,000 for the rebuilding and enlarging of a blast furnace and improving the dock facilities at the company's Corrigan-McKinney plant in Cleveland. The company will spend $1,000,000 for a wire mill at the South Chicago plant, $200,000 for improvements in the properties at Youngstown, O., and $300,000 at Warren, O. Earlier this year the company authorized the expenditure of $1,200,000 for capital improvements.

DOLLAR GAINS ON FRANC, BUT LOSES TO POUND

New York, Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Foreign exchange moved irregularly in terms of the dollar today. The pound sterling rose ⅛ cent to $4.99½, while the franc sagged ⅛ point to 6.68⅝ cents. Guilders rose 2 points to 68.76 cents, but the belga declined 2 points to 17.05 cents, and the Swiss franc dipped the same amount to 33.06 cents. Scandinavian exchanges were steady to lower and the Canadian dollar rose 6¼ points to a premium of ⅛ cent. The Japanese yen dropped 4 points to 28.92 cents.

Belden Urges United Fight on Unfair Laws

Stockholders and employés must join with managements in fighting legislation which would confiscate their property, Joseph C. Belden, president of the Belden Manufacturing company, declared yesterday in issuing the annual report to stockholders. Earnings last year were $368,169, or $19.71 a share, more than double the 1934 figure of $180,835, or $9.68 a share. They were the highest since 1929.

The company is one of the nation's smaller industrial concerns manufacing electric wires, cables, and cords. Sales last year were $4,177,821, compared with $3,592,024 in 1934 and $2,956,922 in 1933.

"The investors of this country would receive a shock if they could realize the money costs of some of this legislation which confers doubtful benefits on minority groups, and the proportion of management's time spent to forfend the detrimental effect of such legislation or to prevent passage of more ill advised laws," Belden said.

Employers Are Harassed.

"To find employment for the nation's ten million unemployed is our vital problem today. Only employers can give employment. It is incredible that employers should be harassed and their time uselessly diverted from efforts to increase sales and employment.

"This problem concerns both stockholders and employés whose income and welfare depend on successful operation of business. They must express themselves on legislation which is against their interests, either by writing directly to representatives in congress or through the national organizations formed to protect them, or they will see their rights whittled away and their property diverted to others.

Political developments are the key to the future. A natural recovery, which has always followed depression, will surely be interrupted by continuation of impossible so-called reform policies and an unbalanced national budget. Only a resumption of sound, common sense national administration will bring complete recovery.

Target for Exploitation.

"Stockholders and investors are probably the largest group with identical interests, and being the least articulate are a natural target for exploitation. Until expenses of government are brought into balance with income, the threat of monetary inflation is very real. In this situation a large inventory of staple raw materials afford some protection. In addition, a contingency reserve of $35,461 has been deducted from this year's earnings."

Current assets last Dec. 31, including $108,743 cash, were $1,777,316, compared with $1,618,365, including $112,275 cash, at the end of 1934. Current liabilities were $333,362, compared with $327,813.

TRADE ACTIVITY CUT BY HOLIDAY; ABOVE YEAR AGO

Business activity in the United States declined in the week ended last Wednesday from the preceding week, due in part to the Washington's birthday holiday, but maintained a substantial margin of gain over last year, banking statistics indicated yesterday.

Debits to individual deposit account in the 12 federal reserve districts amounted to $7,667,402,000, compared with $8,582,629,000 a week earlier and $6,623,967,000 in the same 1935 period.

In the Chicago area—the Seventh district—the total amounted to $1,001,127,000, compared with $1,140,028,000, a drop of 12.2 per cent for the week but a gain of 13.1 per cent over last year's total of $885,300,000. In the city of Chicago debits aggregated $580,940,000, against $480,738,000.

Chicago bank clearings in the week ended yesterday amounted to $343,700,000, against $227,800,000 in the preceding week and $258,700,000 in the 1935 week. For February Chicago clearings totaled $1,139,400,000, compared with $887,300,000 a year ago.

COMMODITY PRICES MOVE IRREGULARLY DURING LAST WEEK

Commodity markets were irregular during the last week. Sugar advanced to a new high for the season. Wheat reached the highest level in nearly two months. Oats sold the highest since late in December, but closed fractionally lower for the week.

A number of other principal commodities sold lower, but price changes were generally small. Cotton seed oil dropped to a new low for the season, but the loss was largely recovered later.

ILLINOIS TRUST ACT ATTACKED BY CHICAGO FIRM

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The Trust Company of Chicago today filed a suit in the Sangamon county Circuit court attacking the validity of certain sections of the Illinois trust act. The company protested a demand that it increase its deposit with the state auditor from $200,000 to $500,000, alleging that the statute fixing the amount of surety company deposits on the basis of population is discriminatory and unconstitutional.

Announcing the suit was a test case, attorneys named the attorney general and auditor defendants. They said a temporary injunction would be asked Monday.

The petition said trust companies in cities under 100,000 are required to deposit only $125,000 and can do an unlimited business, but that in cities over 100,000 surety firms are required to increase their deposit to $500,000 if assets exceed $2,000,000.

The company also asserted the trust act authorized an unconstitutional delegation of power in permitting the auditor to make valuations of assets without hearings.

WESTERN UNITED GAS EARNS LESS; GROSS HIGHER

Net income of Western United Gas and Electric company last year declined to $926,402 from $995,219 in 1934, the annual report disclosed yesterday, despite a rise of 4.8 per cent in gross earnings from $7,223,291 to $7,567,424.

The principal factors in the decreased net were increased gas purchases, operation costs, and taxes. Taxes amounted to $713,549, an increase of $170,492 from 1934. Of the heavier taxes, $77,729 increase was caused by imposition of the state 3 per cent utility tax last July 1.

Electric service increased 7.8 per cent to an all time high mark of 78,084,903 kilowatt hours, sales to residential and rural customers amounted to $1,180,799 or 2.4 per cent less than in 1934 because of rate reductions in August, 1934, although 12.6 per cent more electricity was sold. Total electric sales of $2,714,653 were 0.4 more than in 1934.

Fifteen Bills Termed Blow to Recovery

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—(AP)—The National Association of Manufacturers today contended 15 bills in congress were upsetting the President's promised "breathing spell" and constituted a threat to further business recovery.

In a special survey for its members, the association especially attacked the Walsh bill to require firms contracting with the government to observe NRA wage and hour provisions; the O'Mahoney bill to license all producers shipping goods in interstate commerce; the Ellenbogen bill to set up a "little NRA" in the textile industry; the Black-Connery bill to limit industry to a 30 hour work week; and the Robinson-Patman bills to restrict price discriminations in quantity purchases, such as those by chain stores.

Senator Criticizes Bill.

Coincidentally there came from Senator Hastings [Rep., Del.] an assertion that he also believed these and other measures constituted a threat to business and made business men uncertain whether to proceed with production plans. He said, however, he did not believe they would go through congress unless President Roosevelt gave the word. That, he said, was unlikely.

"I think," Hastings explained, "that the President will get his tax bill and then quit. And I don't intend to vote a cent in taxes until common sense comes back to Washington."

Business, Hastings said, will not know for sure that these bills will not pass until after congress goes home.

"That is what disturbs business," he said. "I am doing all I can to assure business that they will not be enacted."

Tax and Court Plans Assailed.

James A. Emery, general counsel for the Association of Manufacturers, also assailed the administration's tax plans and congressional proposals to curb the powers of the Supreme court and lower federal courts.

He asserted industry and business were willing to assume their share of taxes in trying to balance the budget, but "the difficulty is that there is no corresponding decrease in spending. Removal of doubt and uncertainty about the future," Emery said, "is essential to business improvement. Business itself is ready to go forward if it can be assured of a reasonably safe future."

WEEK'S OUTPUT OF AUTOS RISES TO 70,516 UNITS

Automobile production in the United States and Canada last week recorded its first increase since the advent of abnormally cold weather, according to Ward's Reports, Inc. Output totaled 70,516 units, against 66,547 a week earlier. The total for February was estimated by the agency at 295,000 cars and trucks.

Ward's attributed the fact that February production fell below expectations to zero weather "which not only demoralized sales but made transportation nearly impossible." With limited storage space, plants shut down after producing more cars than they could move. The March outlook, the agency says, is exceptionally favorable.

RAIL 'GOLD SUIT' IS SUBMITTED TO SUPREME COURT

980 Millions Bonds Are Involved.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—A new question concerning the congressional resolution which barred payments in gold was put before the Supreme court today in a brief which stated that bonds totaling $980,000,000 were affected by the issue.

Berryman Henwood, trustee for the St. Louis Southwestern Railway company, inquired through the brief whether, despite adoption of the resolution, interest coupons must be paid in standard Netherlands guilders if such payment was promised as an alternative to payment in undevalued American gold.

Could Collect $42 for $25.

Henwood is asking a review of a ruling by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, which held that the Anglo-Continentale Treuhand A. G., a Leichtenstein corporation, could recover judgment against the railway company for the value of the guilders specified in the coupons, collecting $42 in guilders for each $25 promised in American money. Previously Judge John C. Knox, sitting in the New York Federal court, had also ruled against the railroad.

The question, the brief contends, is of vital importance to American debtors who have issued bonds with interest and principal payable in United States gold coin or foreign moneys in specified amounts or at fixed rates of exchange.

980 Millions Involved.

"Approximately $980,000,000 of bonds have been issued by American debtors with such provisions," Henwood said through his counsel.

"If the decision is correct and is applicable to these issues the cost of servicing the said bonds will be increased in proportion to the devaluation of the United States dollar—viz: by 69.3 per cent.

"It is of vital importance to these large American companies, and of consequence to their bondholders, to have the question at issue determined by final authority."

The bonds in question, issued in 1912, provided coupon payment either in $25 of American gold or the equivalent in Netherlands, British, German, or French money. The coupons, says the brief, were acquired by the Liechtenstein corporation after June 5, 1933, "with knowledge of the joint resolution." When the foreign concern sought to collect in guilders in Amsterdam, no payment was made, and the case was taken to the federal District court, which held against the railway company and was afterward sustained by the Circuit court.

Other Decisions Expected.

The Supreme court will assemble Monday after a two week recess to hand down opinions in a maximum of 28 cases and to say whether it will review 35 controversies appealed from lower courts. Arguments then will be heard for two weeks on a variety of litigation, including challenges of the government's attempt to condemn land for PWA slum clearance and low cost housing projects, the Guffey act to regulate the soft coal industry, and the 1933 securities act.

Decisions in these cases are expected in April or May. In the meantime the court may receive two other New Deal disputes. These involve the constitutionality of the utility holding company act and the right of the government to provide PWA funds for construction of publicly owned and operated hydro-electric projects.

One Petition Withdrawn.

The Public Utility Investing corporation and the Associated Utilities corporation, both of Delaware, today withdrew a petition for a temporary injunction to restrain the Utilities Power and Light Corporation of Virginia from complying with the utility act. As the company had registered with the Securities and Exchange commission late yesterday afternoon, it was explained there was no longer any point in seeking an injunction. The petition did not involve constitutionality of the act.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Inflation Fears Increase—Reserve Board Urged to "Sponge" Up Potential Excess Credit—Stocks Turn Downward—Business Fairly Steady—Dividend Actions Favorable.

Inflation fears were again strongly voiced last week. The nation's important banking interests, through their official mouthpiece, the federal advisory council, felt called upon to warn the board of governors of the federal reserve board in Washington to do something about the tremendous volume of idle but potentially usable bank reserves, amounting to 3 billion 60 million dollars.

"Reserves" is a technical name for the amount of money a commercial bank is required to pledge with its federal reserve bank as security for its depositors' money. Each commercial bank must, under present regulations, carry in its federal reserve bank an amount equal to 3 per cent of its time deposits plus 7 to 10 per cent of its demand deposits.

Excess.

But the commercial banks are now so jammed with idle funds, due to lack of borrowing demand, that their reserves are about double the amount they are legally required to carry. This three billion dollar "excess" is what bothers conservative bankers. Never before has there been such a vast accumulation of "loose" money. It is ready to be tapped by any borrowers who can demonstrate their ability to repay it.

What worries the bankers is that a sudden burst of speculative "inflation" buying in the stock market may make the three billions the basis for an abortive stock "boom." No banker as an individual would be able to do much about such a "boom." He could not well resist demands for loans on security collateral that appeared to be amply margined. The general advance in stocks in 1928-'29 proved that. In a big upward push in stocks each individual collateral loan may look sound, but all of them may be forcing prices up to unwarranted levels, leading to a crash.

Conservative bankers don't want a repetition of 1929, and while realizing their helplessness as individuals to prevent it, they believe that acting as a group—if they can get the necessary coöperation from the federal reserve board—they may be able to keep idle bank funds from forming the basis for the kind of boom that leads to a bump.

Plea.

With this in mind the federal advisory council, a statutory body composed of one leading banker from each of the twelve federal reserve districts, again urged the federal reserve board to do something to forestall speculative employment of the 3 billions of idle reserves.

Dr. Walter Lichtenstein, secretary of the council, released, with the permission of the reserve board, copies of a resolution in which the council urged the reserve board to use the power granted it by the banking act of 1935 to sponge up at least part of the three billions by increasing the amount of reserves the banks are required to pledge with the federal reserve system. That would earmark some of the three billions and leave less of it as "excess" reserves, available for speculative use.

Securities.

Security markets moved lower during the week. Stocks were greatly unsettled and moved downward under the leadership of railroad shares. Uncertainties over the government's tax program, the railroad rate decision reducing passenger fares, the Japanese political crisis [See Foreign; Review Section] and predictions of a market recession after weeks of steadily advancing prices, combined to cause a cautious trade.

Market reaction to the Japanese upset was slight, except for weakness in Japanese bonds, raw silk futures, and the yen on foreign exchange markets.

The bond market moved irregularly lower. Foreign exchange showed little change.

Chain Stores.

Decentralization in chain store management found another advocate last week when the James Butler Grocery company, operator of 493 stores in the east, disclosed plans to sell its units to present managers of the stores. At the same time groundwork was laid for the formation of a coöperative organization of 2,000 stores.

Chain store executives saw in the move another effort to combat mounting taxation which ultimately may result in a nation-wide change in retail food distribution systems. If plans evolved more than a year ago are carried through, larger profits for retailers and wholesalers and less taxation may result.

Taxes have become the major problem of chain systems. Many states have levied on them to raise additional revenue and to favor local independents.

Many large organizations are considering the plan of Butler Grocery—becoming independents by either selling or giving retail outlets to present managers and inviting other grocers to join the organization.

Credit for the idea of divorcing retail stores from distributing and coordinating organizations is given to John A. Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company. Butler Grocery is one of the first to adopt it. It is said Safeway Stores, Inc., in the west and Kroger Grocery and Baking company in the midwest have considered the plan for many months. Other smaller organizations are also credited with investigations of the program.

Executives reason that if the chain store tax is upheld in the courts the shift to coöperatives will be forced. Some, however, declare it has been proved that manager-owners produce more retail business than manager-employés.

Business.

The business pace held fairly steady as adverse weather continued to dominate operations. Coal production was given an unseasonal fillip, but cold, dust storms, rains, and floods curtailed retail buying and reacted unfavorably on production and employment. The normal seasonal expansion in spring lines failed to appear.

Electric power output showed a less than seasonal decline. The rate of steel production was well maintained. Auto production recorded its first weekly increase since the cold wave started, rising to 70,516 units, compared with 66,547 a week earlier. Bank clearings topped the corresponding 1935 period and freight trafic, while falling below the preceding week's total, again touched a five year peak for the particular week.

CARRIER STOCKS SLUMP FURTHER ON CUT IN FARES

Rest of List Narrow in Quiet Trading.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 29.—Railroad shares came under further pressure in today's abbreviated dealings on the stock exchange as traders weighed the possibilities of yesterday's fare reduction order of the interstate commerce commission in the light of overnight bearish comment. Leading issues of the group sold a point or so below their previous closing levels.

Shares of eastern roads to show the largest declines were Baltimore and Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Delaware and Hudson, each of which dropped a point or more. Shares of the New Haven, which has been among the stoutest opponents of the fare cut proposal, dropped only a minor fraction on light selling. Only a major fraction was lost by New York Central.

Western Rails Also Drop.

Many of the midwestern and western roads went even lower than the eastern lines. Greatest losses were marked up by Santa Fe, Great Northern preferred, Louisville and Nashville, and Northern Pacific.

Some of the rail equipment makers lost ground, partly in sympathy with the generally downward movement and in part because of the uncertainty on future carrier earnings. Among such stocks were American Car and Foundry, American Locomotive, Baldwin, Lima Locomotive and General Railway Signal. All declined fractions except General Railway Signal, which dropped 1¼.

Comment in responsible quarters yesterday indicated a widely held opinion that the cut might make for increased earnings of some of the roads, as reduced fares have done for roads of the west, but shareholders evidently took the opposite view.

Greyhound Bus Stock Slumps.

Another factor of the situation brought into prominence today was the realization that the lower fares might take away some business from the bus companies, as well as force them to cut their rates to meet the competition. Greyhound sold off more than six points on liquidation induced by speculations along this line.

Outside of the carrier department the session was an unusually calm affair, the turnover slumping to 880,760 shares and price changes as a rule holding within a narrow range.

The closing tables showed considerable irregularity, with the farm implements, automobile accessories and metal shares providing a quiet display of strength to offset the weakness in the rails. In the accessory sector, Borg-Warner rose more than a point, due in part to a little extra help from announcement of its dividend raise to $3 from $2.

Stock exchange share transfers in February totaled 60,989,332, the largest aggregate for this month since 1931, when 64,181,836 shares changed hands, it was revealed today. The month's figure compared with 67,201,745 in December and 14,404,525 in February last year.

Utilities were firm and oils largely steady.

BANK SUIT BRINGS UP QUESTION OF 'WRONGFUL ACTS'

JudgeHints RFC MayHave Cause for Action.

Further attacks on the legality of the final $50,000,000 loan by the Reconstruction Finance corporation to the Central Republic Bank and Trust company by defense attorneys in the RFC's suit to enforce stockholders' liability yesterday brought from Federal Judge James H. Wilkinson the question of whether action might be taken against wrongful acts of obtaining money.

"If your premises are sound," said the court to Attorney Edward R. Johnston, "then there seems to be no doubt but that the Reconstruction Finance corporation is entitled to action against all those who participated in the transactions for wrongful acts in obtaining money."

Right of Action.

In the course of further discussion of the question Judge Wilkerson asked:

"Do you mean to say the Reconstruction Finance corporation has no right of action against those who take money unlawfully? Why should there not be a cause of action against the directors of the bank?"

Johnston and Franklin J. Stransky, counsel for 1,450 of the 4,500 stockholders, replied that the court's line of reasoning would not necessarily follow because of many other phases of the law.

Ralph M. Shaw, attorney for Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Philip R. Clarke, former president of the bank, and Dawes Brothers, Inc., largest stockholder, argued that stock liability was not a part of the contract between the RFC and the bank.

View on Liability.

He pointed out that only part of the states have bank stock liability laws, but that the RFC has lent money all over the country. An attempt to collect in some states when collection in others is impossible is an injustice and violates the due process of law clause of the constitution, he argued.

"Stockholders' liability is not an asset of the bank and could not be pledged," said Shaw. "The RFC is trying to penalize stockholders who remained loyal. It's the old army game—heads I win, tails you lose. Everything in favor of the government, nothing in favor of the citizen.

"If you follow the RFC lawyers' contention, it is doubly vicious because collection of taxes is used to penalize some and relieve others of their burdens."

Plea for Stockholders.

An interruption by O. J. Rogge of RFC counsel that injustice would be done if money of the United States were forfeited, brought a sharp reply by Johnston.

"The government has 78 millions in collateral on the remainder of the debt which is 54 millions, or a ratio of 145 per cent as compared with a ratio of 127 per cent in the beginning. The great bulk of stockholders will be ruined if forced to pay the assessment on stock liability. They are the ones who should have consideration."

The trial was adjourned until Wednesday, when Col. George T. Buckingham and Stransky will continue with final defense arguments. Judge Wilkerson was informed that each side probably will require three more days for its case.

RICHFIELD OIL SALE DELAYED; NO BIDS MADE

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 29.—(AP)—Sale of the properties of the Richfield Oil company and Pan-American Petroleum corporation was continued today until March 31 in a ruling by Special Bankruptcy Master William A. Bowen. No bids were received for the properties, valued at a minimum price of $29,656,510. The companies are in receivership.

It was reported Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was mapping a plan of reorganization, acting for Harry F. Sinclair, petroleum magnate.

Container Corporation Defers Dividend Action

Directors of the Container Corporation of America yesterday deferred dividend action. Audited earnings for 1935, President Walter P. Paepcke said, were $1,238,009, or $1.89 a share, on the outstanding capital stock, as compared with $1,112,711 in 1934.

Germany.

Germany's rearmament drive [See Foreign; Review section] was reflected in the action of the Vereingte Stahlwerke, Germany's steel trust, in declaring a dividend of 3½ per cent, the first disbursement since 1930. Four years ago the trust was piling up deficits and swallowing reproaches for overexpansion and mistaken capital investments until it was reorganized. Then came Chancellor Adolf Hitler and rearmanent.

Private estimates place total net profits of 2,000 German industrial concerns for 1935 at 1,100,000,000 marks [the mark is currently quoted at 40.67 cents] which is still far below the 4,000,000,000 record of 1928, although the industrial production index officially is approximately the same for these same years. However, it compares favorably with losses of 5 billion marks in 1931, 3 billions in 1932, and a profit of only 600,000,000 marks in 1934.

But German recovery has been based on tremendous expansion of governmental expenditures which have strained domestic credit to the danger point. Despite the country's desperate efforts to stimulate exports it is making small headway. In order to discharge its obligations to American creditors the reich needs gold or foreign exchange by increasing its favorable trade balance. The favorable balance in the last few months has resulted largely from reduction of imports. Exports have not risen appreciably although an attempt has been made to expand foreign sales by dumping goods at low prices.

"Murder."

Stockholders of the Bethlehem Steel company, assembled in Newark, N. J. to vote on the merger of four subsidiaries with the parent company, a move designed to reduce taxes, found tedium of formal business broken for a moment when President Eugene G. Grace inadvertently referred to the merger as "the proposed murder." Laughter greeted the remark and one dissenter shouted; "The truth will out." The merger was approved by an overwhelming majority.

Taxes.

The first move to regain many millions of dollars collected in taxes under the Agricultural Adjustment act was taken in New York when three tobacco companies filed suit seeking the return of $29,434 paid prior to Aug. 1, 1935. Although tax money impounded after Aug. 1, has been returned in most instances the action sought recovery of money paid in taxes directly to the treasury department before that date. Some $25,000,000 in taxes are said to be at stake if the recovery action should be successful.

Thrift.

General Motors company distributed more than $11,000,000 in cash and common stock of the company to employés through its savings and investment plan. Each employé, who in 1930 saved $25 monthly toward the plan a total of $300 –received common stock of the company worth $279 as of Dec. 31, last, interest of $112 and his original $300, an aggregate of $691 in cash and stock.

RETAIL SALES IN 1935 PLACED AT 32 BILLIONS

Gain 14 Pct. Over 1934; Best Since 1931.

Total retail sales in the United States during 1935 were estimated at $32,606,000,000 yesterday by Alexander V. Dye, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the department of commerce. This represents a 14 per cent gain from the 1934 figure of $28,649,000,000 and is 66 per cent of the 1929 figure of $49,1150,000,000. The sales were the best since 1931, when the total of $35,414,000,000 was 72 per cent of 1929 levels. The largest retail gains over 1934 were advances of 26 per cent by the mail order houses and 25 per cent by automotive dealers, the latter resulting from a 45 per cent gain in sales of new automobiles. Other sharp increases were 21 per cent by the furniture and household group, 20 per cent by lumber, building and hardware group, 18 per cent by restaurants, and 15 per cent by jewelry stores.

Food Group Shows Increase.

The food group gained 11 per cent, the inclusion of liquor and beer stores adding enough sales to raise the figure from the 6 per cent gain estimated for strictly food stores.

Other gains follow: Farmers' supply and country general stores, 12 per cent; department stores, 7 per cent; apparel, 8 per cent; drug stores, 8 per cent; variety stores, 2 per cent; other retail stores, 6 per cent.

Food stores accounted for $8,069,000,000, or 24.8 per cent, of the total retail sales, and were at 74 per cent of 1929 levels. The automotive group had $6,739,000,000, or 20.7 per cent, of last year's sales and was at 70 per cent of its 1929 figure. Department stores accounted for $3,587,000,000, or 11 per cent, of last year's total, and also were at 70 per cent of 1929 levels.

Variety Stores Near 1929 Peak.

Although showing the smallest gain from 1934 to 1935, variety store sales were nearer to their 1929 levels than any other retail group except restaurants, whose sales were up to 93 per cent of 1929. Variety store sales suffered less than others during the depression, never going below 73 per cent of 1929, and that was in 1932. Restaurants had the next smallest decline, striking a low of 67 per cent in 1933.

Hardest hit were jewelry stores, lumber, building and hardware lines, furniture and household stores, and country stores—all of them dropping to about one-third of 1929 sales. Despite recent substantial recoveries, these lines had 1935 sales of only 43 to 56 per cent of 1929, the lower figure representing jewelry.

PRICES OF ALL MEATS LOWER IN FEBRUARY

Wholesale prices of practically all meats were lower during February than in the preceding month, the Institute of American Meat Packers reported yesterday. Bacon, picnic hams, salt pork, and lard were sold 1 to 5 per cent lower at the close of the month than at the opening. Hams of the lighter average weights also declined, although hams of heavy average weight showed slight advances.

Wholesale fresh pork prices decreased sharply in the last two weeks of February, after the roads were opened and farmers were able to bring to market larger numbers of hogs than during the zero days. Prices of pork loins at some markets were lower at the close of February than at the opening.

Decreases of 5 to 16 per cent in the wholesale prices of dressed beef occurred during the month. Dressed veal declined 12 to 22 per cent and dressed lamb dropped from 7 to 10 per cent.

BANKS' SHARES CLOSE STEADY TO LOWER FOR WEEK

Chicago bank stocks were steady to lower during the last week. Northern Trust showed no net change after the sensational rise of the preceding week. The stock last week staged a comeback after low sales of 775 to close at 830 bid, 850 asked.

Continental Illinois dipped 4 points at 164 bid, 166 asked. High and low sales for the week were made at 169 and 149, respectively. First National dropped 12 points in light trading, closing at 275 bid, 280 asked.

Harris Trust and Savings failed to attract sellers at 355 bid, unchanged for the week. Merchandise Bank and Trust remained firm at 175 bid, 185 asked. Terminal National was unchanged at 24½ bid, 26 asked. Chicago Title and Trust held firm at 195 bid, 198 asked.

41 Favorable Dividend Changes Voted in Week

Prices of Butter and Eggs Extend Recent Advances

Recent price advances in butter and eggs were extended yesterday in the Chicago cash and futures market. Expiration of the February future contract in eggs on the Chicago Mercantile exchange was preceded by a buying rush by speculators who waited until the last minute to cover their short commitments in the market. The price advanced 1¼ cents to 28½ cents a dozen, the highest figure quoted on a comparable delivery in more than six years.

The closing out of trading in the February butter contract was less spectacular. The price rose an eighth of a cent a pound with the future contract finishing at 35⅝ cents a pound.

Cash Eggs Also Higher.

The demand for eggs for delivery against the expiring futures was reflected in the cash market, where prices of fresh eggs in car lots climbed 1½ to 1¾ cents a dozen. Eggs grading extra and fresh firsts closed at 28½ cents a dozen. A decline of 5 cents a dozen in fresh eggs in New York had no effect on the market here.

Trading in butter in the cash market was quiet and prices were unchanged from Friday's quotations.

A total of 914,648 pounds of foreign butter was imported into the United States during February, according to the bureau of agricultural economics. Receipts last week included 28,000 pounds from Argentina and 16,800 pounds from Cuba.

A small amount of New Zealand butter is due to arrive at New York this week from London, with fresh offerings reported at 21 cents per pound delivered at New York, buyer to pay the import duty of 14 cents. Holland butter was offered at 20¼ cents, but no purchases were reported.

Transactions in eggs on the mercantile exchange totaled 121 cars. Butter sales aggregated 145 cars. The range of prices in the futures market follows:

EGGS FALL IN NEW YORK.

New York, Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Eggs fell 1 to 5½ cents a dozen in the market here today. With today's drop the decline for the week was extended to 9 cents a dozen. The break in the market was brought about by the prospect of warmer weather and the increased supplies which have been reaching market. Standards and commercial grades closed at 28 to 28½ cents a dozen.

MANY CLASSES OF LIVE STOCK SET 1936 LOWS

Recover Part of Loss Late in Week.

Many classes of live stock dipped to new 1936 lows last week. Cattle and hogs slumped sharply the first half of the week, but rallied the last three days and closed well above the midweek lows, when supplies fell off abruptly due to snowstorms, muddy roads, and farmer resentment against the new low prices. The bulk of the receipts arrived at the lower prices prevailing the fore part of the week, putting the six day averages for all species under the previous week.

Persistent reports in the trade that a plan to tax all live stock is being seriously considered in Washington are partly to blame for the weak undercurrent in the trade here. A proposed federal tax of 20 cents per hundred pounds on cattle, 75 cents on hogs, and 10 cents on sheep may be the means for providing about a half billion dollars annually, it is said.

Steer Average Falls.

Steers averaged only $7.90 last week, the lowest since December, 1934. This price was 55 cents lower for the week, and was $3.50 under the high spot of last year. Compared with the final quotations of the previous week, yesterday's market was 25 cents lower to 25 cents higher, but 25 cents to 75 cents above the low spot of the week.

Hefers finished 25 to 50 cents above the low spot and steady to 25 cents lower than a week ago. Calves declined $1.50 to $2 more, selling $4 to $5 under the high spot of February.

The week's lamb average of $9.65 was off 20 cents and established a new low since early last November. Volume of receipts increased to 55,000 for the six days, the largest run in four weeks. Final quotations were 50 to 75 cents under a week ago and $1.25 to $1.50 lower than 20 days ago.

Hog Prices Lower.

The average price of hogs for the week, $10.05, equaled the lowest six day price since the AAA's processing tax was declared unconstitutional early in January. It showed 55 cents decline compared with the previous week, despite the later rally which was mostly in lighter weights.

Lights on the final sessions sold 50 cents to $1 above the low time of last Tuesday and Wednesday, but heavy stock was only steady to 25 cents higher than the week's low spot. Lights closed 25 to 35 cents higher than a week ago, while heavy stock was 10 to 40 cents lower, with the spread in prices the widest in almost two months.

Not enough live stock came in yesterday to establish a market.

GRAIN IN OTHER MARKETS

CASH GRAIN

LIVE STOCK STATISTICS

GRAINS STEADY; WHEAT HIGHER THAN WEEK AGO

Fears of Drouth Damage Bolster Prices.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The level of prices in the Chicago grain market yesterday underwent only a trifling change compared with the preceding day. The volume of trading in all grains was light. When the market closed May wheat, the principal future contract, was selling at $1.00⅛ a bushel, unchanged from Friday's last price. May corn was quoted an eighth of a cent lower at 61⅛ cents a bushel.

While the short trading session resulted in no noteworthy price changes, the closing quotations represented a material gain over prices existing a week earlier. During the last week wheat futures based on the 1936 crop have crept up 2 cents a bushel. Recognition by traders that a substantial part of the crop in the winter wheat belt is again menaced by drouth has been the buoying force in the market.

Remember Drouth Effects.

The memory of the crop destruction brought by the drouth conditions of recent years is still fresh, and the possibility of another year of such conditions has been registered by the price movement of the last week.

The area in which severe crop deterioration appears most likely consists of the western third of Kansas and the Texas and Oklahoma panhandle regions. The area includes 10 million acres of an estimated total winter wheat acreage of 47 millions.

The May wheat future, against which deliveries will be made before another harvest, has moved up in price during the last week, but has not shown as great an upturn as the new crop contracts.

Commercial Demand Better.

The closing price of May wheat yesterday was 1⅜ cents a bushel above the quotations prevailing a week before. The changed outlook for the new crop has brought commercial demand into the market.

	Yesterday.	Friday.	*Wk. ago [Feb.21].
Wheat	$1.00⅛	$1.00⅛	$0.98¾
Corn	.61⅛	.60¼	.60⅞
Oats	.29	.29	.29⅛
Rye	.56⅝	.56⅝	.57⅛

*Saturday, Feb. 22, was a market holiday.

Lack of trading interest in the oats and rye markets is emphasized by comparison of yesterday's prices with those of the preceding Saturday. May oats were selling an eighth of a cent lower, while May rye was down a quarter of a cent a bushel. The principal future contract in corn was a quarter of a cent above the final price of the preceding week.

In accordance with the ruling made Friday by exchange directors, trading in grain and provisions will open tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock and close at 2:15 p. m. Trading hours in outside markets will conform as a result of the ruling.

CHRISTIAN ZEISS, BOARD OF TRADE VETERAN, RETIRES

Christian Zeiss, oldest member of the Chicago Board of Trade in point of service, yesterday posted his membership for sale to Franklin Mayo. His retirement ends a career of more than fifty-eight years on the board, which he joined Aug. 14, 1877, when he was 21 years old.

Retirement of the veteran trader results from an accident suffered four weeks ago when Zeiss fell on the ice near his home at 7645 Sheridan road.

"I would prefer to spend the rest of my days at the Board of Trade, but in my present health I cannot do so," he said yesterday. Zeiss was born in Germany and spent three years in the banking business in New York before coming to Chicago.

"I have read THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE every day for nearly sixty years," he told a reporter.

CHICAGO GRAIN RECEIPTS FAR OVER YEAR AGO

Receipts of grain at Chicago during the last two months were more than double those for the same period in 1935, it was announced yesterday by Lyman C. West, statistician for the Chicago Board of Trade. Arrivals of wheat, corn, oats, rye and barley during that period have aggregated 13,815,000 bushels, or 8,442,000 bushels in excess of last year. Receipts of corn at 8,266,000 bushels were the largest since 1932 and compared with 2,456,000 bushels last year.

In the face of reports indicating that the movement of eggs has been unusually small, arrivals at Chicago in the last two months have been 715,417 cases, a gain of more than 150,000 cases compared with the corresponding two months in 1935.

Co-op Complains Against Minneapolis Company

W. C. Engel, general manager of the Farmers National Grain corporation, announced yesterday that the coöperative has filed a complaint with the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce against the Van-Dusen Harrington company of Minneapolis. Engel asserted that the Minneapolis concern has failed to make prompt delivery of grain from its elevator on receipts presented by the co-op.

GRAIN TRADERS

Our bulletin of March 2nd gives many sound reasons why Chicago May wheat should decline to 90c before the 1st of May. Some of these reasons are: A price level above the 1900-1909 average; ample rainfall East of Mississippi with wheat in this area showing the best prospects in several years; a prospective July 1st carry-over of 160,000,000 bushels; large Canadian imports into United States; small feeding demand for wheat; large supply of feeding grains; the season of the year when wheat usually declines in price and last, but not least, a slowing down of business activities. These important price-making factors are discussed in detail in the above bulletin, which will be sent complimentary on request.

FRENCH HOTELS BEMOAN LACK OF TOURIST TRADE

High Taxes, Loan Rates Also Are Handicaps.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 29.—High taxes, exorbitant interest rates, and generally bad tourist business are ruining the French hotel business in both Paris and the Riviera according to a survey just completed by Parisian hotel men. Another handicap is the "expensive" gold standard of France. Countries usually contributing most to the tourist stream have discarded the gold standard.

Unless the coming season is better than recent ones the proprietors of the better class hotels might just as well close their doors the French innkeepers assert. With the franc continuing high and other European countries on their toes to capture the tourist trade — Germany being an outstanding example with the Olympic games — the outlook for French hostelries is dark, they say.

Pay High Rates on Loans.

Exorbitant interest rates of 10 to 12 per cent being paid by Paris hotels on more than $33,000,000 borrowed to tide them over the tourist depression, especially rankles in the minds of the Parisian hotel men. They suggest governmental cheap money, something like the present arrangement for the agricultural industry.

The Paris survey discloses a rather startling condition. Twelve of the city's 80 first class hostelries are closed; 8 more are being liquidated by the courts, and 7 are in bankruptcy.

On the Riviera hardly a week passes without a hotel or casino being offered at a sherif's sale. The prices are ridiculous. One establishment worth $2,500,000 four years ago recently sold for $100,000.

The survey of Paris hotels, dividing them into three categories — de luxe, grand, and medium—shows a heavy loss in all.

Hotels Do Less Business.

The de luxe hotels, although prices were cut 19 per cent in 1935 under the previous year and 52 per cent compared with 1930, had 12 per cent less turnover in 1935 than in the previous year, and 66 per cent less than in 1930.

The grand class reduced prices 11 per cent compared with 1934, and 57 per cent under 1930, but the turnover dropped 12 per cent compared with 1934, and 57 per cent compared with 1930. The medium class hotels cut prices and lost business in about the same proportion as the other two.

Taxation is another bugaboo which brings loud wails from the French hotel keepers. From 3 per cent in 1913 it has jumped to 19 per cent on the turnover in the de luxe class. In the grand class the tax has been boosted from 1⅛ per cent in 1913 to 9½ per cent last year.

In the medium class hotels the tax of 12 per cent in 1935 was a bit lower than 1934, which was 19 per cent, but much higher than the pre-war 3 per cent.

Timothy seed was quoted at $3.15 per 100 lbs for country run and $3.50@3.55 for fancy recleaned.

New York, Feb. 29.—Decision of the interstate commerce commission Friday ordering a reduction in railroad passenger fares to 2 cents a mile resulted in a mild reaction in railroad bonds on the listed market today.

Elsewhere, however, most high priced obligations of all categories moved forward. The loss in medium and low priced rail liens was attributed largely to a sympathetic reaction to the slump in carrier equities.

Western Roads Ease.

St. Paul 5s and North Western 4¾s dipped fractionally although these roads were not vitally affected by the decision. Each has had the two cents a mile rate in effect for more than a year and has enjoyed increased trafic as a result. Baltimore and Ohio 4½s also dipped while Chesapeake and Ohio 4½s and Northern Pacific 4s, both low yield issues, shifted forward a little.

Japanese 6½s advanced more than a point and the 5½s moved up a fraction despite continued uncertainty over the political upset in that country. Other foreign obligations were quiet and little changed.

Federal Issues Steady.

The United States government group was quiet and steady. Treasury 3s of 1946 gained small fractions and the 2⅞s moved lower.

American and Foreign Power 5s lost more than a point and Western Union 5s and Youngstown Sheet and Tube 5s edged ahead somewhat.

Government Bonds.

The United States government is now borrowing money at the lowest interest rates on record because of the great plethora of investment funds seeking employment and the lack of competition from private borrowers.

Money can be hired cheaply. This condition has been brought about in some measure by the easy money policy followed by the federal government. The decline in interest rates, however, over the last few years has followed a definite historical pattern. As the demand for money gradually ebbed after the collapse of the speculative boom of the nineteen twenties, borrowers with satisfactory credit standing were able to obtain funds at steadily declining interest rates. Inevitably, as the cycle unfolds itself and the demand for money revives, interest rates will advance. This certainty, with the time element alone uncertain, creates a problem for the conservative investor who is mapping a long term program.

When the demand for capital improves to a point where interest rates begin to rise again, the price of bonds carrying low coupon rates will decline. This applies to government securities as well as bonds of private enterprises. The price of such securities, where safety of principal is not in question, is determined by prevailing rates of interest.

In periods of high money rates a high grade bond carrying a low coupon rate is likely to sell below par to bring the yield into line with current conditions. We are today witnessing the reverse of this situation. Bonds carrying a high coupon rate are selling above par for the same reason. Big and little borrowers, however, are taking advantage of the situation by refunding their indebtedness at lower rates.

In mapping an investment program an investor must give consideration to the price fluctuations that occur in high grade bonds due to changes in money market conditions. The question is not one of payment of principal and interest, when due, but the price which a low coupon bond will command in the market under conditions other than those now existing.

The problem applies similarly to banks if they have a substantial part of their resources tied up in long term government securities. Many banks have met the situation by concentrating their investments in short term securities.

PLAN TO OFFER STATION BONDS EARLY IN WEEK

Norway's Refunding Issue on Market Tomorrow.

Offering of $44,000,000 of 3¾ per cent refunding bonds of the Chicago Union Station company, due in 1963, is being planned for the early part of this week, with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. expected to head the underwriting group. The new issue will replace $30,850,000 of 4½s and $13,150,000 of 5s, due July 1, 1936. Formality of registration with the SEC is not required, the railroads being subject to regulation of the interstate commerce commission.

A $17,000,000 issue of the Kingdom of Norway, first European government financing in the American market since 1934, is the only large offering of bonds scheduled for this week upon expiration of the necessary 20 day period after registration with the Securities and Exchange commission.

The Norwegian bonds will be offered tomorrow, carrying a 4½ per cent coupon and maturing March 1, 1956. Proceeds will be used in refunding $16,445,000 of 6 per cent sinking fund external loan gold bonds of 1952, called for redemption on April 15.

Ten Firms in Underwriting.

Ten American houses are underwriting the issue, largest participants being Lazard Freres & Co., $5,300,000; Halsey, Stuart & Co., $3,600,000; Kidder, Peabody & Co., $2,700,000, and Field, Glore & Co., $2,700,000.

Also scheduled for tomorrow is an issue of 60,000 voting trust certificates of the Iron Fireman Manufacturing company representing a like number of no par common shares. The certificates are to be offered to stockholders at $15.

The Northern Oklahoma Gas company's issue of $1,000,000 of ten year first mortgage and collateral trust 5 per cent sinking fund bonds, 6,500 shares of $100 par 6 per cent convertible preferred stock, and 32,500 shares of common stock will become eligible tomorrow. The common is reserved for conversion.

Other Issues in Prospect.

Independence Fund of North America, Inc., is seeking to issue $6,400,000 of trust certificates on Tuesday. The Campbell Transportation company of Pittsburgh has an issue of $600,000 serial 4½ per cent equipment trust certificates scheduled for Thursday.

Two telephone issues are listed for Friday offering. The Indiana Associated Telephone corporation has an issue of $3,000,000 of 4½ per cent bonds of 1965, with principal underwriters being Paine, Webber & Co. and Mitchum, Tully & Co. The Citizens Independent Telephone company has $1,450,000 first mortgage 4¼ per cent 25 year sinking fund bonds, with Lawrence Stern & Co. as underwriters.

An issue of 25,945 shares of capital stock of the Sundstrand Machine Tool company of Rockford will be offered publicly tomorrow at the current market price plus exchange commission. McGowen, Cassady & White is sole underwriter. The stock is listed on the Chicago Curb exchange and was purchased from stockholders who acquired 29,145 shares in exchange for all capital stock of the American Broach and Machine company of Ann Arbor, Mich.

CHICAGO STOCK TRADE IN MONTH AT 2½ YEAR PEAK

Turnover Since Jan. 1 Biggest Since 1931.

Prices were irregular in light trading yesterday as the Chicago stock exchange closed its busiest month in two and one-half years. Volume during the 29 day month of February totaled 2,801,000 shares or nearly 100,000 a day, compared with 2,377,000 shares in January and 436,000 last February.

It was the largest February volume in five years, comparing with 4,199,700 in that month of 1931, and was the largest monthly volume since July, 1933, when 3,207,000 shares changed hands.

Two Month Total High.

Turnover to date this year of 5,178,000 shares is the largest for any corresponding period since the 7,576,200 trade in the first two months of 1931. The 1936 trading already is equal to more than 41 per cent of last year's total of 12,483,000 and is five times the 1,029,000 share turnover in the first two months of 1935.

Volume of trading last week was 407,000 shares, compared with 651,000 shares the preceding week and 117,000 a year ago. Prices receded slightly, 53 issues advancing, 95 declining, and 42 remaining unchanged. This compared with 79 advances, 89 declines, and 20 unchanged the previous week. Thirty issues made new highs, compared with 53 the previous week.

Closing Prices Irregular.

Yesterday's trade totaled only 26,000 shares, with 30 issues advancing, 29 declining, and 32 remaining unchanged. New tops for 1936 were made by Berghoff Brewing, Cherry Burrell preferred, Godchaux Sugar A and B, Leath, and National Standard. The price range was narrow, with few issues moving as much as a point.

National Leather was the most active issue, with a 4,000 share turnover and a rise from 2 to 2⅜. Chicago Corporation, Cities Service, and Asbestos Manufacturing company were the only other stocks with as much as 1,000 share trade. All three declined minor fractions.

Dividend payments by Chicago Stock exchange listed corporations in February amounted to $12,776,687, more than double the $6,052,860 last February. For the first two months the dividend total is $25,755,939, compared with $16,745,012 in the same period of 1935.

LATE BREAK IN LARD PRICES DUE TO SCATTERED SELLING

Lard futures broke sharply in the last few minutes of trading yesterday as scattered selling found support lacking. The close was at the bottom with net losses of 7½ to 20 cents, March leading.

Monday will be first delivery day on March contracts and the selling was regarded as due in part to longs who were liquidating rather than pay for the cash lard. A fair increase is expected to be shown in local lard stocks during February in the report to be issued Monday. Clear bellies [salt pork] closed 7½ cents higher.

Cash lard was quoted at $10.65, loose and leaf, $10.25, and clear bellies, $14.95 per 100 pounds. Prices in dollars per 100 pounds:

CATHOLIC LAITY OFFERED STUDY OF SYMBOLISM

Explanatory Talks Open Tomorrow.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

To promote among laymen a wider comprehension of the symbolism involved in the elaborate liturgy of the Catholic church, its adornment of music developed through the centuries, the national Catholic alumni federation is sponsoring a course of three lenten lectures on "Catholic Liturgy," under the patronage of the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, auxiliary bishop of the Catholic diocese of Chicago, to be given on alternate Monday evenings throughout March, at the Eighth Street theater.

THE REV. JAMES A. MAGNER.

The series, which begins tomorrow night and is open to the general public, is arranged by a committee of business and professional men of the Chicago alumni federation chapter, the president of which is Francis A. Naphin. The chairman of the event is the Rev. James A. Magner, professor of languages at Quigley seminary.

Speakers Are Named.

The Rev. Michael J. Chapman, editor of the Acolyte, a national religous journal, will speak tomorrow night on "The Liturgy in Catholic Life"; the Rev. Gerald Ellard, professor of church history and liturgy at St. Mary's college, Kas., will talk on "The Liturgy of the Mass" on March 16, and the Rev. Virgil Michel, dean of the college of liberal arts and sciences at St. John's university, Collegeville, Minn., will speak March 30 on "The Liturgy of Holy Week."

The underlying motive of the Alumni federation in sponsoring these lectures, according to Father Magner, is to stress the fact that in certain portions of the mass, as well as in other services, the congregation, as a body, should coöperate.

Obscured by Latin.

Exactly where these occur is sometimes obscured by the use of Latin, and the studies proposed by the federation aim to overcome this difficulty not only by means of interpretations of liturgical experts but also through encouragement of the laity in the use of parallel English and Latin service books when attending church. Father Magner explained that the church, being world wide, must continue use of the common language of ancient Rome.

Another feature of the series will be musical backgrounds of the liturgy furnished by the noted Paulist choir under the direction of the Rev. Eugene O'Malley.

Dr. Henry M. Edmunds, for the last 17 years pastor of the Independent Presbyterian church, Birmingham, Ala., will speak tonight on "Doing Something About It" before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall.

Morrison, pastor of Holy Name cathedral, has invited the sisters of various religious communities in the archdiocese to the final rehersal of the Cardinal Cathedral choristers' concert program, which is to be given in Orchestra hall on Monday, March 9. This rehersal will take place on Saturday morning and Pietro Yon's oratorio, "The Triumph of St. Patrick," will be sung.

Beginning with a festival service at 8 o'clock tonight and continuing throughout the week the Volunteers of America will celebrate their 40th anniversary at the Ballington Booth community chapel, 2845 West Washington boulevard.

Lieut. Col. Jeanette Spencer and her aide, Adjutant Velma de Puy of Seattle, Wash., who have recently been appointed to command the Volunteers in Nebraska will be the principal platform guests.

Continuing the spirit of Brotherhood days, initiated last Sunday by the Chicago round table of the national conference of Jews and Christians, Dr. Harold Bowman of the First Presbyterian church will exchange pulpits this morning with Rabbi Gerson B. Levi of Temple Isaiah Israel.

St. Paul's Lutheran church, 2215 West North avenue, the Rev. G. A. R. Gullixon, pastor, is holding a series of lenten services on Sunday afternoons at 4 o'clock at which pastors of Lutheran churches in the Chicago area will be visiting preachers. OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

IN case they are not yet privy to the exciting fact, we would like to inform 4 year old Marilyn Mols and Lawrence Rouse that the man responsible for getting their names into Our Town today was assassinated—approximately 2,000 years ago.

His name was Julius G. Caesar and he lived in Rome, and, though we haven't the space here to go into the circumstances of his murder, we will say that they were not directly connected with his considerable abilities as a personal press agent. The important fact is that he and his astronomers, by fixing the calendar so that Feb. 29 comes around but once every four years, deprived Marilyn and Lawrence of an annual birthday and so created the occasion for this news item.

Marilyn, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Mols of 3521 Armitage avenue, and Lawrence, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rouse of Deerfield, were among the "leap year babies" of Chicagoland who had birthday cakes cut in their honor yesterday. Twenty-two young party guests helped Marilyn eat hers. Lawrence, thinking perhaps that 1940 will be a better time to make his debut as a host, shared his only with his parents.

THIS week's golden wedding congratulations go to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Olsem of 2244 Sherman avenue, Evanston, and to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Meyer of 4430 Drake avenue, Chicago. The latter celebrated their 50th anniversary on Feb. 16, the same day that their son, Hymen Meyer, was married to Miss Nessa Witz of Benton Harbor, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Zelens of 4920 North Washtenaw avenue last week announced the engagement of their daughter, Evelyn, to Nathan Hoffberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Hoffberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Hoffberg of 3139 Washington boulevard. Miss Zelens attended De Paul university, where she was a member of Rho Sigma Delta. Mr. Hoffberg is a graduate of De Paul university school of law and is a member of Chi Sigma Delta.

AMONG the who's who of Deerfield, Zdgely Todd may hereafter be identified as an amateur composer. His "A Song of Praise," a hymn composition, was adjudged the best entry in the college song contest conducted recently at Lake Forest college.

THE name of a Chicago boy, Henry C. Clark, son of Mrs. Alice R. Clark of 552 Brompton avenue, has headed the honor roll of the preparatory department of St. John's Military academy, Delafield, Wis., every month this scholastic year. Young Clark has raised his scholastic average each month, starting with an 89.29 for October and working up to a 95.57 for the period just past. Two other Chicagoans are among the high twenty in scholarship in the academy's upper school. They are Adam J. Miller, 2749 Sunnyside avenue, and Stanford L. Optner, 3920 Lake Shore drive.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hanlon of 4444 Whipple street announce the birth of a daughter [Dolores] on Feb. 20 at the American hospital. All three, they carol, are doing well.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis L. Schmal, 1214 North La Salle street, and their daughter, Mrs. A. E. Gundelach, 4709 Beacon street, entrained from Our Town Friday night for a six weeks' sojourn at San Antonio, Fla.

For 936 Weeks Mrs. Cooke Never Missed Sunday School

For the past 936 consecutive Sundays, Mrs. Wilhelmina Cooke, 4919 Wabansia avenue, now almost 70 years old, has attended Sunday school. This 18 year record has entitled her to a pin which she can wear only occasionally because it is almost a foot long.

MRS. WILHELMINA COOKE.

The last occasion was a recent Sunday service at North Austin Methodist church, Weller avenue and Potomac street, when the 18th bar was added to her "cross and crown" pin. The cross was given at the end of her first year record; the second year a gold crown was attached and every year since a bar has been linked to the pin.

Mrs. Cooke has always been a Sunday school member. When she was born she was enrolled on the cradle roll in the Lutheran church back in Ashland, Ky.

Name in Corner Stone.

Since she could not realize her dress making ambitions at home, Mrs. Cooke came to Chicago 49 years ago to learn the trade. On her first Sunday in Chicago after moving in with a sister on the south side she attended a little Presbyterian mission at 67th street and Emerald avenue.

One day she visited with a friend at the Methodist church at Englewood. Francis Cooke, one of the Sunday school officials there, was cordial in his welcome and after the service asked if he could see her home. Shortly afterward they were married.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooke moved to the northwest side and went to the Garfield Park Methodist church. The attendance card that was given her at this church shows the perfect record and the fact that she has visited Sunday schools in seven different states.

Thwarting a Blizzard.

Many times, Mrs. Cooke almost missed. The second Sunday after she started her record one of the city's worst blizzards blocked trafic. The church pastor who had just the Sunday before introduced the attendance contest watched the storm mount. Could any one make it? But when the last bell rang, Mrs. Cooke with her son and daughter stamped into the room in a whirl of snow.

Once on a Friday, Mrs. Cooke received word that her brother had died in Kentucky. She had to leave the next day to get there in time for the funeral. Sunday morning would probably find her on the train. However, she discovered, that she would have an hour and a half Sunday morning wait in Cincinnati, Ohio, for the Ashland train. So, after a hurried breakfast on Sunday, she climbed the hill in the face of a beating wind storm and arrived at Sunday school on time.

On Time Despite Mishap.

When the record was about 16 years old, Mrs. Cooke motored through the eastern states with her daughter. The itinerary was planned to include Sunday school. One Saturday night as they were nearing New Castle, Pa., the right wheel of the car came off and hours were spent in a roadside garage. Later a blinding rainstorm caused them to miss the road and they had to stop in an isolated tourist station somewhere in the Alleghany mountains. The church bells were ringing when they entered New Castle but Mrs. Cooke was on time.

"Complete lack of consciousness is the only thing that could ever make me break my record" explained Mrs. Cooke as she told her story last week. "Otherwise on every Sunday morning I will be in Sunday school"—and the head crowned with primly dressed white hair nodded emphatically.

18 Seek Office in Lake County Political Race

BY JOHN HAYES.

Lake county has 18 aspirants for five elective county offices, 10 Republican and eight Democratic candidates, and at this stage of the race it appears there will be torrid campaigns waged during the next six weeks by candidates of both parties. There is a Republican contest for all but one office, while the competition on the Democratic ticket centers on two offices.

The candidates in the order their names will appear on the primary ballot follow:

Republican.	Democratic.
STATE'S ATTORNEY.
Harry A. Hall	A. C. McHenry
Charles E. Mason	Jack E. Bairstow
	William A. Deane
CIRCUIT CLERK.
Lyman J. Wilmot	Stephen Drury
Edwin Burgess
RECORDER OF DEEDS.
Howard L. Scott	David Van Patten
William D. Whyte	A. J. Sutkus
John J. Hogan
CORONER.
Harold D. Kelsey	Dr. B. D. Lemery
Dr. John L. Taylor
AUDITOR.
Robert J. Pearsall	Edward McDermott

36 Years as Coroner.

Mason, Wilmot, Scott, Dr. Taylor, and Pearsall, now office holders, are candidates for reëlection, Dr. Taylor, the oldest Lake county official, is in his 36th year as coroner. Mason and Pearsall are each completing first terms, having gone into office in December of 1932.

Wilmot has been elected circuit clerk three times and is in his twelfth year in this office. Scott was elected recorder of deeds a year ago to fill a vacancy caused by death. He was elected by a vote of the Lake county board of supervisors. Mason, Wilmot, and Pearsall make their homes in Waukegan, while Scott lives at Fox Lake and Dr. Taylor in Libertyville.

Hogan and Whyte, opponents of Recorder Scott both live in Waukegan. Hogan is town clerk of Waukegan township and Whyte is in the real estate business in Waukegan. Hall, who is seeking to unseat State's Attorney Mason is a Waukegan lawyer.

Defeated for Judgeship.

He was a Republicain candidate two years ago, meeting defeat for the office of county judge by Judge Perry L. Persons. Burgess, candidate for circuit clerk, is police magistrate in Lake Forest. He ran for county treasurer two years ago, losing in the primary to Allen Nelson. Kelsey, who is opposing Dr. Taylor, lives in Barrington. He represents Cuba township on the Lake county board of supervisors and is a former chairman of the board.

The Democrats are battling over two offices, state's attorney and recorder of deeds. Three Waukegan lawyers are in the race for state's attorney and all were in the Republican fold up until four years ago. The Democratic county central committee has indorsed Bairstow, who is affiliated with the Democratic party this year for the first time.

McHenry ran for state's attorney on the Republican ticket four years ago, being defeated for the nomination by State's Attorney Mason. Two years ago he ran for county judge on the Democratic ticket and was defeated. Deane is a former assistant state's attorney of Lake county and has run for state's attorney before on both of the major tickets, but without success. He was the Democratic nominee in 1932 and Mason defeated him by more than 7,000 votes.

Aid to Clerk Wins Party.

Bairstow won the Democratic indorsement due to his legal activity in behalf of Russ Alford, county clerk. Alford, who became county clerk last November after a legal skirmish, which started in the Circuit court and went as far as the State Supreme court, is the only Democrat ever to hold a county office in Lake county. Alford's election is still being contested. A recount proceeding is now being heard in the County court and Bairstow is Alford's counsel.

Van Patten, from the village of Wadsworth, has the Democratic county central committee indorsement for the office of recorder. He is a veteran member of the Lake county board of supervisors, as the representative of Newport township. He is a former chairman of this board.

Last Minute Aspirant.

Sutkus, who is opposing Van Patten lives in Waukegan and is an assistant supervisor. He filed his petition shortly before the closing time last Monday. He has been a state employé for some time, being an oil inspector.

Ed McDermott, the sole Democratic candidate for auditor, is a nephew of Frank McDermott, chairman of the Democratic county central committee, and is now city treasurer of Waukegan. He was defeated for county auditor in 1932 by Pearsall in a close race.

Drury and Dr. Lemery, candidates for circuit clerk and coroner, respectively, are candidates for county offices for the first time. Drury is police magistrate in Zion. Dr. Lemery is a physician and surgeon in Waukegan.

REPORT ASSAILS 6 FACING VOTE; OTHERS PRAISED

Sen. Barbour's Long Service Lauded.

BY PERCY WOOD.

Critical shot and shell from the guns of the Legislative Voters' league rained hard on several north and northwest side members of the general assembly, the league's report on those whose terms expire this year revealed yesterday.

Evaluating the records made by one senator, James J. Barbour [6th], and representatives from the 6th, 7th, 23d, 25th, 27th, 29th and 31st districts, the league found kind words to say for only about half of them. Six representatives were criticized without qualification. Senator Barbour merited extremely high praise, however, as did several of the house members.

Observers Visited Sessions.

Their actions in committee and on the house and senate floors were observed by the league's representatives and this, together with a record of roll calls, was the basis for the opinions of the legislators. Following are pertinent extracts concerning each member:

SIXTH DISTRICT.

Senate.

James J. Barbour, Rep.—Ending his fifth term; continued to be an active and valuable member; exercised a sound restraining influence upon legislation. His courage and fighting ability have often been proved during the twenty years he has served the public at Springfield.

House.

Joseph H. Donohue, Dem.—Has given good service during three terms.

Charles H. Weber, Dem.—His record has been discreditable throughout his five terms.

Drennan J. Slater, Rep.—Ending second term with an excellent record. Is a careful student of pending measures and always knows what is happening in the house. Highly valuable as a legislator.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

House.

Frank G. Ring, Dem.—Colorless first term but may have possibilities for usefulness.

Bernice T. Van der Vries, Rep.—Very good record for a first termer; should become highly valuable.

Frank E. Foster, Rep.—In third term gave more earnest attention to work; creditable record.

TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT.

House.

Arthur M. Kaindl, Dem.—Was rather closely attentive to work during second term and showed more activity, acquitting hismself very creditably.

Stanley A. Halick, Dem.—During first term did not place himself on the legislative map.

Daniel A. Roberts, Rep.—Won recognition not usually accorded to a first termer by level headedness and effective work. Promises to become decidely valuable as a legislator.

TWENTY-FIFTH DISTRICT.

House.

Benjamin S. Adamowski, Dem.—During third term this remarkable young man [he is now only 29 years old] gave further proof of his unusual ability. As majority leader handled a number of important bills with marked success, by reason of his quickness of mind, sound judgment, and readiness in debate. Subjected himself to some criticism by voting for bill to license handbooks; and by offering the motion by which the permanent registration bills were stricken from the calendar, but that motion was offered at the direction of a caucus of house members of his party.

Raymond T. O'Keefe, Dem.—Has served three terms with a poor record.

Elroy C. Sandquist, Rep.—Ending first term; regular in attendance and might do better with more experience.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DISTRICT.

House.

A. L. Auth, Dem.—Ending fifth term; was attentive and did faithful work as chairman of enrolling, transcribing, and typing of bills.

Edward J. Petlak, Dem.—Ending second term with a poor record.

Joseph N. DeGrazio, Rep.—Finishing first term, in which he showed no fitness for legislative work.

TWENTY-NINTH DISTRICT.

House.

Edward P. O'Grady, Dem.—Ending his first term in the house, after one term in the senate, with a fairly creditable record.

Arthur J. Quinn, Dem.—Ending his first term, in which he was rather active along political lines.

Joseph E. Farina, Rep.—In two terms he has shown little fitness for legislative work.

THIRTY-FIRST DISTRICT.

House.

Mason S. Sullivan, Dem.—Ending his first term; did not appear to be very active or effective. In connection with the Ennis-Saltiel contest, in which his seat title was not involved, incurred criticism by obtaining an allowance of $275 for attorney's fees.

Pierce L. Shannon, Dem.—In his third team he was rather active, particularly in behalf of needed revision of the small loan act. Was criticized for accepting $250 for attorney's fees in connection with a house contest which did not involve his title to his seat.

Edward P. Saltiel, Rep.—Unusually active for a first term member, doing creditable work; shows decided legislative capacity.

STUDY TO GAUGE CIVIC NEEDS ON NORTHWEST SIDE

Clubs Launch Campaign for Betterment.

The executive committee of the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs, meeting recently in the fieldhouse of Independence park, 3945 North Springfield avenue, for the first business session of the year, launched an intensive campaign to determine improvements needed throughout the district and steps necessary to obtain them.

Surveys will be conducted by committees—chosen from club representatives—on the major points of the program, which include new transportation needs, trafic hazards, arterial street requirements, street and alley repairs, and the deficiencies of lighting systems.

Trolley Terminal Change.

The committee suggested a campaign for the removal of street car terminals from street intersections and advocated the use of surface lines property for this purpose. The safety committee, headed by E. D. Jackson, former president of the organization, adopted the suggestion for the attention of city authorities in drawing up the proposed new traction ordinance after pointing to trafic hazards developed at these terminal points.

The federation asked for some of the new street car equipment to be purchased by the surface lines, reporting that northwest side communities feel more transportation units are needed and that they would aid business and increase employment.

Committee Members Listed.

Mr. Jackson also is chairman of the executive group. His assistants and committees they head are: R. J. Wuerst, legislative; George J. Trinkaus, transportation; C. W. Kirchner, schools and playgrounds; J. C. Ropp, streets and alleys; Alex Koehn, taxation; E. F. Boyle, arterial highways; W. H. Miller, gas and electricity; O. H. The group will continue its support of the proposed new northwest side elevated highway advocated for the last five years.

The committee on schools and playgrounds is endeavoring to obtain the use of high school assembly halls as meeting places for the community clubs, forced from their usual park district fieldhouse headquarters by recreation activities sponsored by federal agencies.

PLAY PROGRAM WILL BE DRAFTED IN IRVING PARK

A joint meeting of the Irving Park Lions club and the district recreation committee, at a luncheon Thursday noon at the Irving Park Y. M. C. A., 4251 Irving Park boulevard, will mark the beginning of a campaign to coördinate recreation programs of the community. Speakers will be Dr. Philip L. Seman, chairman of the Chicago recreation commission and general director of the Jewish People's institute, and Edward L. Burchard, executive secretary of the commission.

Their discussions will deal with the importance of a local recreation committee to the community.

Guests will be civic leaders and organizations of the district to whom invitations were sent last week. According to Benjamin Brandt, committee chairman, the invitations were made to foster participation in the program.

He said, "To be successful, we must have the coöperation of all churches and civic organizations. This is a community project, which must be met by the district as a whole."

The local committee includes Miss Ruth Peterson, Joseph P. Goldberg, Herman Kloock, Mrs. J. Gould Barker, Miss Nellie W. Marlatt, William J. Wood, William Molenkauer, Eugene Utz, P. K. FIXTURES SPELL SAFE COMFORTS IN MODERN BATH

Mirrors Add to Apparent Size of Room.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

All the cards are on the table as far as modernization opportunities for 1936 are concerned. There is every reason to believe that the year is to be an exciting one.

Both those who argue in favor of new homes and those who argue for the remodeling of old ones have right on their side. In the last analysis it is for the home dweller himself to decide whether he will rejuvenate his old home, buy an existing house and improve it, or build a brand new house.

Meanwhile we are seeing home improvement projects steadily gaining in number. Sometimes these projects are small; again they comprise a complete renovation program, with almost magical transformations achieved.

New Bath Among Features.

Today is shown the newly decorated and fitted bathroom in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bickel of 6269 West 109th street. This is one of the several pieces of modernization in the Bickel home.

The walls in this bath are of porcelain enamel metal tile in soft, velvety toned, bisque finish. There are quite a number of new developments in walls finished with porcelain enamel tile and porcelain enamel panels. We are all familiar with the beauties and assets of porcelain enamel in our plumbing fixtures, but as a wall covering this material is an innovation.

Porcelain enamel in itself is an old and tested material of an origin lost in remote history. We do know that the bygone civilizations of Persia, Assyria, India, and Egypt were among our first "enamelers," with copper, brass, and some quite precious metals used as a base.

This bathroom, besides its new metal tile walls, was given a new lavatory, new built-in tub and shower, and closet.

How to Rejuvenate Bath.

Even without entire replacement of old fixtures with new, an existing bathroom can be greatly rejuvenated. One method is to add some of the many bathroom accessories now displayed in showrooms and stores.

Mirrors can work wonders in any bathroom. One modernized bathroom I saw recently had a new mirrored door, with a horizontal light above it. The bathroom was small, and this door effect, besides being of convenience to the users of the room, gave an illusion of space.

Then there are the wealth of new cabinets, also with their gleaming mirrors; the bathroom hampers and stools, scales and waste baskets, and towel bars.

A generous supply of shelves in a bathroom spell comfort for every one. Glass shelves will fit in with any color scheme. There is a good carpenter in every neighborhood who can install such shelves.

Shower Units Easily Added.

Besides a new tub, there are all the tub accessories to consider. There are the easily added shower units which can be attached to the wall over the tub. These showers afford not only the invigorating joys of a brisk bath but give the excuse for splashes of color in shower curtains.

Then, too, there are various modern ways of making a bathtub safe for domesticity. A hand rail of some sort is becoming standard equipment on many a tub these days. It can extend the length of the tub, being installed on the front of the rim. Then, with a grab handle on the wall side, it gives one a chance for life in even the slipperiest, sudsiest tubs. Or there can be just a short handrail on the tub rim and a knurled handle on the wall. Still another practical asset is some type of nonskid mat. Some of these mats may even be put in the bottom of the tub as well as on the floor beside it. Skidding in a bathroom can be quite as fatal as skidding on a highway in snowy weather—or any weather. If you don't believe it, look up statistics on accident hazards in the home.

Trays for Tub Are Handy.

And while we are on the subject of little things to do for our tubs, there are the new bathtub trays. These can be in the nature of a suspended shelf across the tub from side to side. No one can help being pleased with such a handy parking space for all manner of jars and bottles, and soaps, and powders.

There are homes and apartments where the bath, through sheer force of circumstance and environment, remains stubbornly dark in the daytime, no matter how brightly the sun may be shining. A daylight lamp will throw more light on the situation—and the kind of daylight one wants. Install one of these daylight giving blue bulbs near a mirror and you feel as if the bathroom had been given an extra window or two.

Hints for Bathrooms—New or Old.

In selecting plumbing fixtures this year, remember to decide on the color scheme you want for your bath before you make any long time purchase, such as a lavatory, tub, or closet. Plumbing fixtures now come in matched sets, with complete harmony of design, and, while it is a comparatively simple matter to buy accessories to match the fixtures, it is not so easy to buy fixtures to match the accessories, and even the walls and ceiling, unless you plan for it ahead of time.

Shower Improves Basement.

When a basement is utilized for recreation purposes, a shower compartment and closet, or even a complete basement bath, is an immense comfort.

If you modernize with paint on the walls keep in mind, in selecting the shade, that no matter how pale it may look, its color will be intensified when all four walls reflect one another.

To guard them against too much indoor moisture, rub your bathroom window sills with wax after you have given them a coat of paint. Do this as soon as the paint has dried and it will keep them in good condition.

It is possible to treat the walls of the bathrooms and kitchens so that sounds from these rooms are not so audible in other parts of the house.

In considering colors to use on bathroom walls it is well to keep in mind that colors and illumination are closely bound, and one cannot be considered without the other. So closely are they bound that it is hinted that some day we may develop a paint which will be able to absorb the sun's rays in the daytime and diffuse them at night. In this way our walls will be semi-storage batteries of light and cheer. However, since that time hasn't arrived yet, we can note the following "reflection" values of different colors for use when it comes to painting a light room or a dark room in the house.

Reflection of light percentage on colors:

	Pct.
Milk white	87
Cream	70
Ivory	64
Light green	54
Light blue	45
Aluminum	42
Dark red	14
Dark blue	9
Black	10

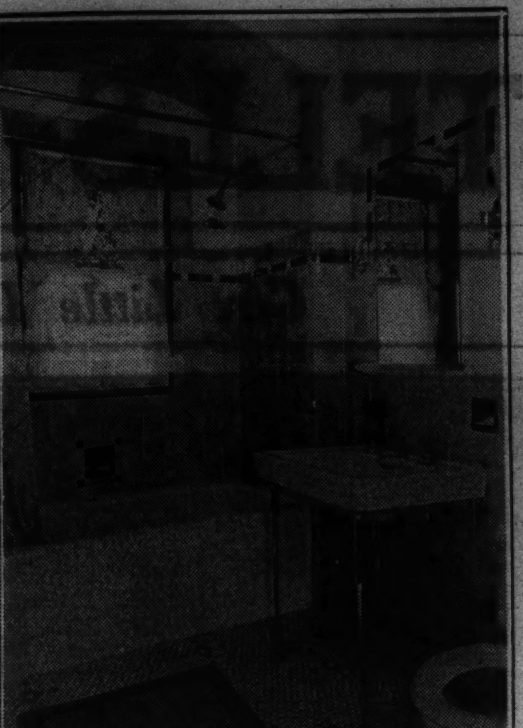
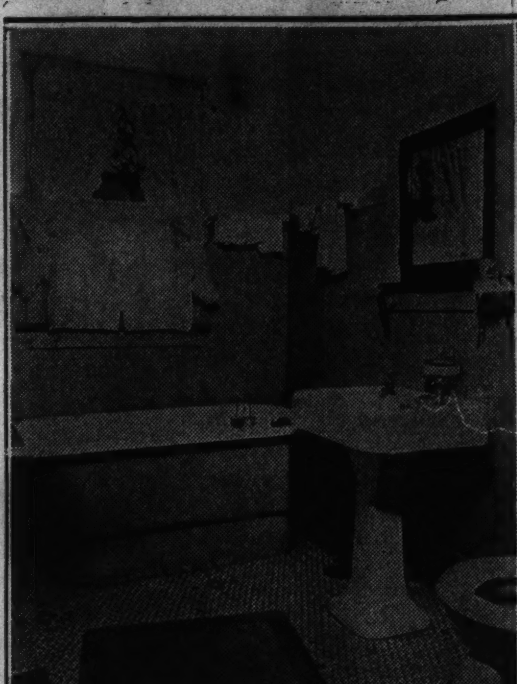
REVOLUTION IN PLUMBING



This picture shows the results of a rejuvenating program recently carried out in the home of Mrs. J. J. Bickel, 6269 West 109th street. The walls are of porcelain enamel metal tile in a soft shade of bisque, with ebony accents. Shower curtains are peach.



No dilapidation here, but merely fixtures and fittings and decorations outmoded by the relentless passing of time. The difference between what was in vogue a decade ago and what's in vogue now is strikingly shown in the two photographs reproduced here today.

M'HENRY COUNTY G.O.P. TO PROVIDE PRIMARY BATTLE

Democrats Rest Hopes on Single Ticket.

Democrats of McHenry county, campaigning for the offices of state's attorney, county judge, circuit clerk, and coroner, are hoping to upset a tradition supported by the older residents that a Democrat has never been elected to a McHenry county office.

With only one candidate for each office, the party ticket will go to the primaries in April as a mere matter of form. The candidates are: D. Walter Kelly, of Crystal Lake, for state's attorney; Lester A. Seidschlag, of Spring Grove, for circuit clerk; Dan Quinlan, of Woodstock, for county judge, and Dr. William Copeland, of Cary, for coroner.

G. O. P. Has Contests.

Republican aspirants for the nominations are: William M. Carroll, of Woodstock; James J. McCauley, of Harvard, and Vincent Lumley, the present holder of the office, for state's attorney; William T. Conn, of Woodstock, for circuit clerk; Floyd E. Eckert, of Woodstock; David T. Smiley, of Harvard; Henry L. Cowlin, of Crystal Lake, and Charles P. Barnes, of Woodstock, for county judge, and E. H. Cook, of Huntley; Jesse C. Pierce, of Woodstock, and Harry L. Ehorn, of Richmond, for coroner. The county has no office of auditor and the county recorder's duties are performed by the circuit clerk.

Two Battles Expected.

Bitterly contested battles are expected for the state's attorney and county judge nominations. State's Attorney Lumley has held this post for a total of 26 years. One of his opponents, William M. Carroll, is the state representative from the 8th district.

There has been a vacancy in the County court since Jan. 23, caused by the death of Judge Charles T. Allen, jurist for nine years. Two of the Republicans, Charles P. Barnes and David T. Smiley, are former county judges. Coroner E. H. Cook, Republican, seeking renomination, has held the office for twelve years.

DRIVE TO ENROLL NORTHWEST SIDE SCOUT CAMPERS

Plans for a campaign seeking early enrollment for summer camp by Boy Scouts of the northwest district were made recently at a meeting of the Checaugau chapter of the Order of the Arrow, northwest unit of a national organization of Scout campers.

The Chicago council has selected this organization to direct the preseason camp preparations in the area. Enrollments are being registered for Camps Robert Stuart and Wilderness near Whitehall, Mich., and Camp Kiwanis near Willow Springs.

Dwaine Filkins, committee chairman of the Owasippe lodge of the order, has charge of city-wide activities. Officers of the northwest group are: Gerald Keeler, chief; Herbert Thompson, vice chief; Frederick Brems, secretary; Harry Eck, treasurer, and Herman Mock, guardian of the trail.

In charge of the district drive are Frederick Brems, Fred Berghoefer, Robert Lindh, Fred Stegbauer, Ray Goldstein, John Toops, Erwin Relth, William Rohter, Bernard Kroeger, Robert Stenberg, Jack Krieter and John Francesco.

George M. Schnier, executive of the northwest district, will be director of Camp Stuart, assisted by an experienced group of instructors, camp leaders and doctors.

According to Mr. Schnier, not a life has been lost by drowning or accident during the 25 years since the Michigan camps opened.

SINGER AND SCHOLAR

A mellow contralto voice is winning popularity for Miss June Newell, 16 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Newell, 6500 Oxford avenue, Edison Park, who is a member of the Schurz High school glee club. Miss Newell's numerous requests to sing for charitable organizations does not keep her from her studies, for she intends to make law her career, and is on the honor roll of the senior class at Schurz.

WANT TO GET IT OFF YOUR CHEST? HERE'S CHANCE

Readers Air Their Peeves and Perfume.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Once more this column is turned over to readers who wish to air pet peeves or distribute perfume. Here's an excerpt from a note from a couple of funny men:

By golly, we just thought of something. You know on Sundays you run that column of squawks and bouquets from listeners. How would it be if we had some friend write you and say that he always listens to us and thinks we are swell. Gee, a thing like that would look swell in the column, wouldn't it? Especially with your comment after it.
RUSSELL PRATT,
DON McNEILL,
[Pratt & McNeill, Unlimited.]

Editor's note: I have been waiting [and am still waiting] for that letter from your friend. Guess he must have let you down.

SALVOS FOR SALVO.

I see that we now have a place in the Sunday Tribune to give voice to our kicks. Why has The Tribune discontinued the best radio program that it has been my pleasure to listen to? I refer to Len Salvo's Mail Box. Let's hear your excuse and believe me they better be good.
CARL K. HUBER, Gary, Ind.

Editor's Note—Well, W-G-N, what about this?

CONCERNING SHAMROCKS.

My big sister is always singing a song that she says Peggy Dell sings. One line says: "I found a four leaf shamrock." My daddy says shamrocks only have three leaves. Will you tell her about it? I like those funny poems Pat O'Malley says. I want to sing like Morton Downey when I grow up. I am nine years old.
BOBBY O'BRIAN, Chicago.

Editor's note: Bobby, I have asked Peggy Dell about the four leaf shamrock. She says they're very rare and very lucky—like a four leaf clover, only more so. She doesn't know any one who has ever found one—she hopes some day she may.

A WHIFF OF FRAGRANCE.

Not a little perfume but a great deal of it for Joan Blaine, the loveliest personality on the air and one of the few truly great radio actresses. Mr. Eastman and his Edison Symphony orchestra rate a goodly whiff of fragrance for their consistently beautiful programs.
BETTY SARGENT, Chicago.

A PAT REPLY TO PATTEN?

O, lords of the press, please protect us
From guys like Pat Patten and such
The things he condemns on the radio
Have rated him sure as the nuts.
If he doesn't like the Major and Vallee
And Little, who sure entertain, let him
Dispense with his radio, pronto
And ease his silly old brain.
EVA CREIGHTON, Chicago.

OPPOSES APPLAUSE.

When will the time come that hand-clapping applause ceases? It does not interest radio audiences, and is tiresome to listeners.
FLORA LOWELL.

Editor's note—How do you feel about it?

LOMBARDO VS. GARBER.

I would like to put in a word regarding the Lombardo-Garber trouble. I hate to see Jan Garber leave [the Trianon] just because some other orchestra he is supposed to imitate is coming to Chicago. . . . I admit that Lombardo is good, but I still believe there are a half dozen others just as good and Garber is one of them. I can assure that I do not wish to see Lombardo's orchestra any time as a result of this trouble.
ELMER BUBB, Lake Bluff, Ill.

DISCOVERS MAJ. BOWES.

Last night I listened to Maj. Bowes for the first time and what a surprise I got. The whole hour was almost perfect entertainment. . . . But right in the middle of this perfect program came Graham McNamee with the usual silly childish plug, and when he got through the ball was passed back to a guy in Chicago who carried it a yard or two and then got down on his knees and begged me to buy a pound of his product. Ye gods! One pound after the major has sold me a ton.
MARY McMAHON, Waukegan, Ill.

Editor's note—Right you are. The local cut-in is exceedingly annoying.

CANTOR, JOLSON OVER THE KNEE.

My pet peeve seems to center around Eddie Cantor. Too often he inserts sob stuff that sounds like burlesque to me. He and Al Jolson are just a couple of hams to me. How would this be for the perfect program: Fred Allen as master of ceremonies for Major Bowes' amateurs?
N. E. ROGGENSACK, Waukon, Ia.

Editor's note—I should suggest Allen without anybody's amateurs.

NEVER AGAIN!

I have always been a Fred Allen fan, but never again. His inane laughing at his own jokes has been getting on my nerve for some time, but after his burlesque [?] of Maj. Bowes I am through with Allen. . . . I consider his program on Maj. Bowes as insulting as it could be.
MRS. M. POSSOW, Chicago.

Editor's note—I have an idea that Maj. Bowes enjoyed the Allen ribbing.

A VOICE FROM LOUISVILLE.

I am a great radio fan and am especially fond of W-G-N programs and stars. I am one of Horace Heidt's greatest admirers. I really believe he has the best orchestra. . so do many people in and around Louisville. I have begun to grow very fond of Will Osborne. . . . Bob Elson sure is the top. I've heard Ted Husing, Hal Totten, etc., but Bob is my favorite.
URBAN H. HOLMES, Louisville, Ky.

"MURDEROUS" SINGING.

What do you and your readers think of the murderous singing of nursery [kid] songs by bass voice men, unmarried men and women who know nothing about love for small children? These songs should be left to Ethel Shutta and other married women who have children.
J. J. ENLOE, Chicago.

Editor's note—O, I don't know. Children can stand a lot. My young daughter [aged 3] even tolerates my warbling.

LIKES HAL KEMP.

Here's perfume right back to you for your grand tribute to Hal Kemp and his orchestra. The daytime feature "Girl Alone," is a bit of all right. The peak of drama is reached in the Radio Guild presentations. Edwin C. Hill rates a bouquet for his frank opinion on comments made by George Bernard Shaw. Lum & Abner follow Easy Aces in my regard for comedy. O, yes, Fred Allen—he's good, too.
SANDRA MONTENAY, Chicago.

It is impossible for us to answer all your individual questions about radio stars. When self-addressed stamped envelopes are sent replies will be made.

WELCOMES SONGSTRESS

Kate Smith, arriving here for a guest appearance with George Olsen and Ethel Shutta last evening, was welcomed at the 12th street station by H. E. Moberg, general superintendent of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, her radio sponsors.

KING EDWARD'S RADIO ADDRESS ON NETS TODAY

King Edward VIII.'s first radio address to his empire and his first radio appearance since, as prince of Wales, he appealed for support of King George's Jubilee Trust fund on April 12, 1935, will be broadcast in America over WMAQ and WBBM from 11 to 11:30 a. m. today.

The new king is recognized as one of Britain's best and most forceful radio speakers, his voice being notably clear and free from affectation. He made more than fifty radio talks as prince of Wales, and is expected to continue broadcasting important messages to his subjects.

BENNETT SISTERS TO BE GUESTS ON HOUSE PARTY

The Bennett Sisters, rhythm trio, will take their place tomorrow as guest stars on the Friendly Neighbor's House Party, musical variety show broadcast over W-G-N at 10 a. m. every day except Sunday.

'Old Lady Shakespeare' on 'Grand Hotel' Tonight

"Old Lady Shakespeare" will be the title of the play presented during the Grand Hotel program at 6:30 p. m. tonight over WLS. The story concerns a "great lady" of the stage, in retirement for many years, who makes a comeback at the risk of her life in order to further a budding romance. Anne Seymour and Don Ameche will have leading rôles with a strong supporting cast.

Arnold Johnson Gives Amateurs a Fair Trial

Arnold Johnson, musical director of the original National Amateur hour, which is heard over W-G-N and the Mutual network Sunday at 6 p. m., makes sure that every amateur, good or bad, receives a fair trial. A specially constructed control booth has been devised in the studios for the judges. It enables Johnson, Ray Perkins and the associated judges, to hear the amateurs without seeing them.

Dr. H. M. Edmonds to Be Sunday Club's Speaker

"Doing Something About It" is the subject of the address to be given by Dr. Henry M. Edmonds of the Independent Presbyterian church of Birmingham, Ala., before the Chicago Sunday Evening club tonight. W-G-N will carry the address beginning at 8:30 p. m.

Larry Lamont Is New Anson Weeks' Singer

Anson Weeks, who returns with his famous orchestra to the Trianon and W-G-N and the Mutual network today is bringing a newly discovered singer, Larry Lamont, back to the bandstand with him. While playing a "one night" engagement, Anson was introduced to the young singer by a band admirer who urged Anson to listen. Constantly on the look out for new talent, Weeks gave the boy an audition, and after having him sing a couple of tunes signed him up, and added him to his musical troupe.

MINNEAPOLIS SYMPHONY ON MAGIC KEY HOUR

Musical Premiere Slated by Philharmonic.

The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, making one of its few remaining appearances under the baton of Eugene Ormandy, will give a special concert on the Magic Key broadcast over WENR-NBC at 2:00 p. m. today.

The program, commemorating the sixteenth anniversary of the opening of commercial wireless service across the Atlantic on March 1, 1920, also will present Cornelia Otis Skinner, famed monologuist; Mischa Levitzky, one of the world's greatest pianists; John B. Kennedy, commentator; Frank Black and the NBC Symphony orchestra, and Milton J. Cross, master of ceremonies.

The radio première of "Once Upon a Time," five fairy tales in music by the young American composer, Bernard Rogers, and the radio debut of a young Brooklyn woman pianist, Ray Lev, will be highlights of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony concert directed by Hans Lange over WBBM-CBS from 3:00 to 5:00 p. m. today. Miss Lev will play the Beethoven Concerto No. 3 in C minor.

"Once Upon a Time" was written two years ago. The sketches are based on fairy tales from Andrew Lang's series of Colored Fairy Books. Their titles are: The Tinder-Box Soldier, The Song of Rapunzel, The Story of a Darning Needle, Dance of the Twelve Princesses, and the Ride of Koschei the Deathless. The last is the Russian legendary character whom Stravinsky used in his "Fire Bird" suite.

Lange's program will open with Sam Franko's setting of Pergolesi's Concerto in F minor, followed by the Beethoven concerto. The second half of the concert will be devoted to the Rogers work and two familiar compositions by Borodin, "On the Steppes of Central Asia" and the "Polovetsian Dances" from "Prince Igor."

JEFFERSON PARK BESTOWS HONORS ON GLADYS COOKE

Recreation Leader Wins C. of C. Tribute.

Highest civic honors were awarded by the Jefferson Park Chamber of Commerce at a recent meeting to Miss Gladys Cooke, 4761 North Luna avenue, for her outstanding contributions to the recreational life of the community. In addition to the award Miss Cooke was made an honorary member of the organization and is the only woman belonging both to it and to the Jefferson Park Recreation commission.

MISS GLADYS COOKE.

An auditor by vocation, Miss Cooke, also a specialist in psychology and a vocalist, is giving her time to leisure time projects for children of Jefferson Park. Her interest in music led her to begin her most recent endeavor, a violin club which last week gave its first recital when Mrs. Ann Hathaway lectured on the origin of music.

Prussing P.-T. A. Founder.

The violin club meets once a month and for a program at a future meeting the services of Miss Elizabeth Kidd have been obtained. She will exhibit a collection of old musical instruments.

Several years ago Miss Cooke founded the Prussing P.-T. A. and served for a time as president of the organization. Today, she appeals to the organization in this statement "The parents must forget self interest and keep child welfare at heart or surely the only objective of the parent-teacher movement in the schools will be lost."

When Miss Cooke returned to Chicago after her work with the Indian tribes of northern Michigan which she did after her graduation from Saulte Ste. Marie college, she took over the supervision of the lunch room at Prussing school without receiving remuneration so that she could have a more personal contact with the children of her community.

Heroes of the Arts.

In her music work and dramatic programs which have been presented frequently in the park fieldhouses, Miss Cooke has given the children ideals to work toward, and has provided them with heroes in the masters of music and art.

Because of her work in the Chicago homecoming celebration last September, Miss Cooke was awarded a certificate of appreciation for taking over the responsibilities of the Jefferson Park district program at a banquet held at the close of the celebration in Burnham park.

Miss Cooke is the only woman member of the committee for the dedicatory program of the new Jefferson Park postoffice which will be held early in April.

The recreational leader wears a ring made of Indian campfire stone, given to her as a tribute of friendship by an Indian tribe located near Saulte Ste. Marie. It was during a concert tour that she made through the Indian reservations of northern Michigan that she met Princess Tsianini, the Indian opera singer, who with Miss Cooke worked for the benefit of the Indian people.

"It took all my knowledge of human psychology to become friends with the Indians," explained Miss Cooke, "It takes just as much to know and understand the adolescent child in our own community."

SCOUTS TO HAVE RALLY THURSDAY AT LAIRD HOUSE

Scouts of troop 69 will hold an open house Thursday evening at Laird Community house, 1838 West Division street. The features will be two demonstrations of Scouting activities to be held at 4:30 o'clock for children and at 7:45 for parents and adult guests.

During the evening awards will be made to troop members. Theodore Zawistanowicz, 1026 North Winchester avenue, will receive an award for 100 per cent attendance at meetings for the last year, the second time he has merited the honor. Patrol leaders' certificates will be presented to Scout Zawistanowicz, Harry Orzechowski, 1434 North Noble street; Joseph Ragio Jr., 1353 North Ashland avenue, and Clemens Switaj, 1256 Noble street.

"I NEED MONEY!" "WHY NOT ENDORSE IT?" SAID WINNIE, PUSHING A PAD BEFORE KEEN. KEEN SIGNED QUICKLY. For Women and Girls

BARBERING

For Men

These professions have stood the test of good times and bad . . . and now offer greater opportunities than ever to earn good money . . . or build up a profitable business of your own.

Younger sisters and brothers—daughters and sons—nieces and nephews—and many others—are being sent to Moler's by our graduates. This proves several things of importance to any one who wants to get into a business that rings the cash register.

1. Moler graduates make good money and are satisfied they have gone into the best thing they could find.

2. These professions have felt the return of prosperity. Those in the business know there will soon be a shortage of trained beauty operators and barbers.

3. Moler graduates recommend our teaching and placing methods to their relatives and friends as the best.

4. Moler graduates in business for themselves WANT OTHER MOLER GRADUATES TO WORK FOR THEM.

OPPORTUNITY FOR DEALERSHIP

If you possess these qualifications and would like to investigate a most unusual opportunity in a startling and vigorous new industry, give full details in letter to midwestern executive, D. A. Beeler. Inquiries will be held confidential.

ON THE LAKE SHORE

IN EVANSTON.

It's rather nice to live in a house built high on a walled-in terrace, where every room is flooded with sunlight and where the views to the north and south are over lawns and into woods, and to the east out over the colorful waters of Lake Michigan. A beautiful secluded spot where you never feel lonesome or isolated, for it is right in the midst of Evanston, and only 25 minutes by motor, or train from Chicago's business district. A real retreat for a busy business man who cannot afford to spend much time commuting. 12 rooms, large living quarters and everything that goes to make up a marvelous home. $250 monthly. You may not believe it, but a pair of cardinal birds nest in the shrubbery and stay the year round. They like it.

Chicagoland's "Little Farms" Profit from Unusual Crops

BY BOB BECKER.

The owner of a "little farm" in Chicagoland does not have to follow any fixed pattern for the development of small tracts of lands, judging from a survey just made of how tracts of land varying in size from 5 to 50 acres are being utilized. The "little farmer" who lives close to Chicago can raise almost anything from grapes to foxes to potatoes.

In fact, a glance at the checkerboard of rural acreage within 50 or more miles of Chicago's loop [where there are tracts of land of all sizes being developed by their owners] shows a surprising diversification in products from the land and illustrates how country life, hobbies and a good living can go hand in hand close to a big metropolis.

Little farms west and northwest of Chicago are especially interesting because of the different ways in which they are being worked.

For Instance, a Bee Farm.

For example, although Ellsworth A. Meineke of Arlington Heights doesn't own a very large tract of land near that suburb, he has enough acreage sufficient for operation of a thriving apiary. He has approximately 200 colonies of bees on his little farm. These hard working insects do such a good job of production that the harvest of honey is approximately ten tons per year. This apiary, on a comparatively small piece of ground, is an excellent illustration of how a little farm can be worked to yield a good income for the owner.

There are quite a number of fur farms in Chicagoland. For example, J. F. Coombs, owner of the Shagbark Lake Fur and Feather farm near Des Plaines, is making a specialty of raising Yukon mink. The pelts of these northern fur bearers are selling at the highest prices they have ever attained on the fur market—going as high as $39 per pelt during the present winter. Coombs has more than 350 of these mink for breeding stock on his twenty-six acre farm.

He also has about a dozen pairs of black raccoons which he has raised, as well as many varieties of pheasants, quail, partridges, ducks, geese, swans, peacocks, foxes, weasel, and other birds and animals. He sells the pelts of the fur bearers, as well as the live birds and their eggs.

There's a Waiting Market.

There are many bird fanciers who like to raise fancy pheasants and quail, so they buy their eggs from game farms such as Coombs owns.

Two fox farms are situated in the vicinity of Woodstock, each of which covers about 40 acres of land. These, like Coombs' game farm, provide a pleasant diversion from the ordinary types of farming, and also provide a living for their owners.

Frank Mueller is president of the Woodstock Fur Farm, Inc., which is 1½ miles west of Woodstock. Each of the fox pens is 50x50 feet in dimensions and is surrounded by a 7 foot wire fence. Charles T. Dunning, manager of the farm, recently stated that 400 pairs of silver foxes are kept there, one pair to each pen. Last year 1,360 young foxes were whelped, many of them being kept for breeding purposes and the rest being killed for their pelts.

Another fox farm is operated by Mr. and Mrs. Kirsten Langlykke, five miles southeast of the town. The Langlykkes have 60 pairs of breeding stock and last year averaged four whelps to a pair. The property comprises about 38 acres, most of which is planted in tomatoes, cabbage, carrots, and other vegetables, some of which are fed to the fur bearers.

Grapes, Potatoes, Tomatoes.

Another example of how a little farm can be worked intensively for a crop that finds a ready market is found near Elgin, where Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Browning have developed a vienyard on their place. They have several acres of ground which is devoted to the production of Concord grapes.

Lee Baker, McHenry county farmer residing 1½ miles east of Marengo, last year had approximately 10 acres of land in the cultivation of potatoes. In 1934, the year of the drouth, he fashioned a novel irrigating system for his crop. He sunk a three-inch sandpoint in the middle of his potato field to hit water at 16 feet. Then he used a centrifugal pump to drive the water into a porous canvas hose about 1,000 feet long. The hose could be laid in the furrows, the water turned on, and the sprinkling device did the rest.

Home Packing Operations.

Guy Hubbs, who lives near Marengo, raises tomatoes on a large scale and operates his own packing plant. Last year he had 10 acres in tomato vines and from the yield packed 30,000 ordinary-sized [No. 2] tins at his home cannery. He also sold barrels of tomato pulp to silver fox farms. This year he will put 25 acres in tomatoes.

These examples of how little farms in the Chicagoland area have been developed in order to yield an income are just a few of the many ways in which owners of small tracts of agricultural land find security and a living by "going to the country" and settling down on a small plot of land.

AUTOMOBILE LOANS.

BUY A CAR BORROW ON A CAR
There isn't an automobile dealer in town who isn't prepared to make the sale of a new or used car and let you pay for it "on time." That is one of the reasons why the price of an automobile—new or used—is so low. Manufacturers can make so many, and dealers can sell so many—mass production it is called, and mass selling.

If the price of a car—new or used—is low because of time financing, should not time financing be low, too, because of the mass of time financing?

We think so.

And that is the reason we are offering low rates and liberal terms to the buyers of cars or those who own a car and who wish to borrow on it.

FOR EXAMPLE—

Balance to be financed.	Total yearly charge.	Total amount of note.	12 monthly deposits.
$100	$12.08	$112.08	$ 9.34
$200	19.00	219.00	18.25
$300	23.04	323.04	26.92
$400	29.00	429.00	35.75
$500	35.08	535.08	44.59

Fire and theft insurance only is required—you may place the insurance with your own broker or agent.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
MARCH 1, 1936

Mrs. Edwin C. Ward is the former Miss Jean Rawlins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steven C. Rawlins of Evanston. Her marriage to the son of the Edwin J. Wards of Kenilworth took place last month, and Mr. Ward and his bride now are at home in Evanston.

Mrs. Frederick H. Wolff Jr. (above) looks all set for winter sports in this picture with a warm sweater and skirt and a swagger fur coat. She is one of Evanston's most attractive young matrons; she and Mr. Wolff and their two little girls, Catherine and Judith, reside on Sherman avenue in that suburb.

TRIBUNE STUDIO PHOTOS.

Mrs. John R. Harder is another member of the Kenilworth center of the Chicago Infant Welfare society, which is in the midst of a drive to interest other Kenilworth residents in its work. The Center specializes in baby blankets handmade by its members, and eventually Mrs. Harder and her associates hope to open a shop where blankets and other articles may be sold to benefit infant welfare.

Mrs. John L. Fix, one of the Kenilworth Infant Welfare center's able young members, does her part for infant welfare by sewing baby blankets, which are sold to raise funds for the society. Mrs. Fix, who was Margaret Neilson until her marriage four years ago, always has lived on the north shore, and is among its most civic minded young women.

Cooking Editor Offers Zestful March Dishes

Mixed Grill, Hamburger Sandwich, Onion Pie Brighten Late Winter.

By Mary Meade.

WHETHER March blusters in with traditional leonine ferocity or meets the cook with lamblike gambols, the clever kitchener has a greeting ready.

A spanking new set of heart warming, comfortable hot dishes is her answer to any last of the winter blizzards. A foresighted collection of spring dishes, as bright and fresh as the first truant crocus, is her March howdy-do in case there's a promise of spring in the air.

New Combinations Contribute Verve to Jaded Winter Menus.

Without masquerading as any weather prophet you probably are wondering more about winter's-end cooking than about any harbingers of spring. Winter menus can settle into a pretty discouraging routine about this time of year, and a good shaking up [with some unusual combinations and exciting seasonings] is just what they need. So, first of all, we're going to pass on a few suggestions for these menu prodders.

It's paradoxical to suggest serving lamb in lion weather, but still we think you'll find this interesting mixed grill, featuring lamb kidney chops, a good cure for menu doldrums.

MARCH MIXED GRILL.
[Serves six.]

6 boned, skewered kidney chops
3 medium tomatoes
6 large mushroom caps
6 thin slices bacon
6 cooked chicken livers
Butter, salt, pepper
4 medium sweet potatoes, cooked
6 toast rounds

Have the lamb kidney chops boned at the market, and skewered with the flank wound around the chop. Preheat the broiling oven to 500 degrees F, and place the chops on the center of a rack so that there is a space about three inches between the top of the meat and the heat. Brown one side of the chops, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and turn. Then, around the edge of the rack, arrange the halved tomatoes and slices of cooked sweet potato, which have been dipped in melted butter. Peel the mushroom caps, dip in butter, and place on the broiler, gill side up. Wrap the cooked chicken livers in bacon and arrange near the center of the broiler rack. Return to the heat and continue cooking until the lamb chops are done and the bacon around the chicken livers is crisp on all sides. Serve on a large hot platter, with the bacon wrapped livers arranged in the center. Around the platter alternate the toast rounds, topped with the grilled tomatoes and mushroom caps and the broiled lamb chops. Pile the grilled sweet potato slices at either end of the platter, garnish with cress, and serve immediately. A lemon-parsley-butter sauce is a zestful accompaniment.

Fascinating Hot Sandwich Is Based on Hamburger.

For a mad March luncheon, how about something decidedly new in the way of hot sandwiches? We favor a hot hamburger affair in a jacket of French toast, too elegant for words.

HOT HAMBURGERS A LA RITZ.

1 pound ground beef
4 teaspoons minced green pepper
1 tablespoon fat
1 tablespoon minced onion
½ cup minced mushrooms
1 cup tomato sauce

Brown the ground beef, green pepper, minced onion, and mushrooms in the hot fat, stirring frequently. When well browned add the tomato sauce, cover the skillet, and let simmer slowly for half an hour, adding water as necessary to keep the mixture moist. Spread the cooked hot mixture thickly between slices of buttered bread.

Dip each sandwich in a batter made of:

1 egg
1 cup milk
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt

Sauté each dipped sandwich in hot fat in a large skillet. Serve immediately with crisp coleslaw.

Fragrant Hot Onion Pie Ideal Main Luncheon Dish.

Maybe a savory, fragrant, hot onion pie is the proper prescription for enlivening your vegetable cookery at the tag end of the season. It's a fine luncheon main dish and a sure winner at any buffet supper.

HEARTY ONION PIE.

3 slices bacon
2 cups sliced onion
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon flour
1 egg
¾ cup thin cream
Unbaked pastry

Dice the bacon and cook slowly until crisp. Add the sliced onions, seasonings, and butter or margarine, and cook, covered, for ten minutes. Combine the flour and beaten egg, add the thin cream, and stir in the onion mixture. Turn into a pie pan lined with unbaked pastry. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees F., for 10 minutes, then continue at 325 degrees F. for 20 minutes longer.

Rosy Rhubarb Fluff Pie Is a Breath of Springtime.

In all this business of spicing up the old winter cooking we can't forget that spring is around the proverbial corner. So a gay tirra-lirra for this rosy rhubarb fluff pie!

RHUBARB FLUFF PIE.

2 cups finely chopped fresh rhubarb
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup water

Cook the chopped rhubarb with the water and sugar until tender. Force through a coarse sieve.

1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
¼ cup cold water

Soften the gelatin in the water and add to the hot rhubarb mixture. Chill until almost firm.

2 egg whites
¼ cup sifted sugar
½ cup heavy whipping cream
1 tablespoon grated orange rind

Beat the egg whites until frothy. Add the sugar gradually, whipping until light and fluffy. Fold into the cold rhubarb mixture. Whip the cream until stiff and fold, with the grated orange rind, into the mixture. Turn into a crisp baked pie shell, chill, and serve cold with additional whipped cream and a garnish of peeled orange slices.

A SERIES OF SENSATIONS

● No. 1: This golden felt Homburg is trimmed with a dark blue veil. ● No. 2: This is the new bolero made of navy panama and trimmed with a blue veil. ● No. 3: Made of burnt tuscan leghorn, this toque is trimmed up the back with bright red ostrich flowers. ● No. 4: The newest suit hat, this bonnet of golden straw is worn over the back of the head. It has a blue veil and bow on it. ● No. 5: As Chinese as a tong war, this new beret has a straw roll edge and a brown silk top. ● No. 6: Made of natural straw, this shallow tailored hat is trimmed with shiny purple grapes and red poppies. John-Frederics designed all of these stunning spring hats.

Chic Means to Have Courage to Be Original

Bolero, Bonnet, and Beret Only Begin Paris' List of Daring New Spring Hats.

By Bettina Bedwell.

THIS is a season to dramatize yourself under a hat that will leave your public gasping and breathless or startled and intrigued. For sports don't let yourself repeat the usual felt sports hat with a round crown and girlish brim. Wear one of the new felts like John-Frederics No. 1, which is made of old gold felt with a dashing crown and a brim that is a challenge to beauty, with a kettle rim around the edges. A dark blue veil with a lacy border is fastened around the crown and hangs off the right side. Or wear a 18th century coachman's hat with a dizzy crown and perky brim.

Try a bolero with your suit and be different from yourself of last season. John-Frederics' new bolero is shown in No. 2. It is made of the softest panama in a warm navy blue color. It has a rolled up brim set ahead on a bandeau and worn to give you an air of young mystery that is irresistible. A ribbon trims the shallow crown and a blue veil hangs off the back, covering the curls.

John-Frederics Uses Burnt Tuscan in Bonnet.

Or you may want to try the new straw Highlander cap that Marie Alphonsine has brought out—a Scotch cap of paper panama with bold quills crossed like swords along the front. Or you may put your millinery fate in one of the new sailors that are impudent and young, with brims that have an uplift curve and bands around the head to hold them on.

No. 4 is a completely different kind of suit hat, from John-Frederics. A straw bonnet in a new hot color between gold and brown that has the challenging name "burnt tuscan," is worn to cover the back of the head and is trimmed with a blue bow of ribbon and a blue veil that makes wavelets and fishlets around your head.

For the toque minded there is a feast of new shapes and all of them are chic and dramatic. No. 3 is one that is made of leghorn straw in a warm, light beige. It comes forward over the forehead with ridged tucks making it seem to dip into the right eye, and it rises to an Alpine peak at the back. It is trimmed up the back with bright red ostrich feather flowers.

Straw from Man's Cady Borrowed for Ming Hat.

Right out of ancient China comes the Ming hat shown No. 5 and John-Frederics steals the straw from a man's cady to make it—the soft yellow straw you know so well. A spare tire is made of the straw. This goes around the head and the top is filled in with stretched red brown rough silk. A button of the silk is set right at the center on top.

You may want to wear your heart on your head, as lots of chic women will, and then you'll choose a Mary Stuart hat that has the point of the heart down over your forehead like a widow's peak, or Le Monnier's toque with an enormous heart set on the front, the heart filled with pearl flowers.

Many tailored hats will be trimmed with saucy bouquets of lackered flowers, as is No. 6. This is a brimmed hat of natural straw with a shallow painted crown and a black band holding it on around the head. Purple grapes and flaunting crimson poppies make the trimmings.

The Kitchen Forum

Mrs. E. F. A., Winnetka: "WHAT is wrong with the 'Simple Cake Pattern' recipe in your booklet, 'Baking the Perfect Cake'? The batter was entirely too stiff. I added another two-thirds cup of milk to the recipe, and it seemed of fair consistency. The cake now is in the oven and I will be able to tell soon whether or not I have a cake."

That brings up an interesting point in cake baking, Mrs. A. The cake recipe, just as it stands, is an excellent one. In fact, just about the best simple butter cake we've ever made. But the batter is—not stiff, but fluffy and of the texture of stiffly whipped cream. That may look like a mistake to cooks who are used to a thin, runny batter, but it really does insure a finer, lighter cake. This thick, fluffy batter isn't due to too much flour or too little milk, but to the large amount of air incorporated in the batter according to the directions of the recipe. The long creaming of the butter and sugar, the beating with the egg yolks, the thorough mixing after each addition of flour and milk, and the folding in of the stiffly beaten egg whites—all these serve to fill the batter with a great many tiny air bubbles. Whipping cream pours easily as it comes from the bottle, you know, but when it's whipped full of air it stands in firm, fluffy peaks, and that's just the way this batter works. We hope you'll try the recipe again, just as it's given in the booklet, for it really is a fine, tender, fluffy cake.

Mr. A. M. A., Chicago: "Just what is a picnic ham?"

A "picnic" ham is a tidy chunk of ham from the shoulder of pork. It may be purchased with or without the bone, and usually weighs from 1½ to 3 pounds. It usually is sold as a cured ham, but may be purchased as a fresh pork cut also.

Detachable Sleeves Make Knit Dress Ideal for Summer

By Jean Macdonald.

SOMETHING new under the sun for sunworshippers is the clever hand knitted dress illustrated today. The back is open, but the innovation lies in the detachable raglan sleeves which are snapped on under the arm and joined to the banded neckline with the aid of a braided white kid belt. Sleeves removed, the dress is a comfortably sleeveless model with a halter neck. Hand knitteds as well as hand made linens in summer dresses may have hemstitching.

As a matter of fact, it is easier to hemstitch a hand knitted dress than a linen one, since the hemstitching pattern is included in the knitting. The remainder of this dress is done in the stockinette stitch. Fine yarns such as 2 ply saxony, zephyrs, crêpes and cotton or linen of equal texture may be considered in the line of materials desirable for this dress.

An innovation for knitters who like to do their blocking at home may be found in one of the Chicago department stores. It is an adjustable blocking frame, triple galvanized, which is inexpensive. The price of it is approximately equal to the cost of cleaning and blocking one garment. Adjustable cross bars make it possible to block a garment for any size figure. This gadget is manufactured in three styles, the skirt, blouse, and dress frame. It takes up no more room than any dress hanger.

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instruction for knitting the sun back dress with detachable sleeves illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Be sure to include the following measurements:

Bust ....
Underarm to waist ....
Waist ....
Around armhole ....
Around top arm ....

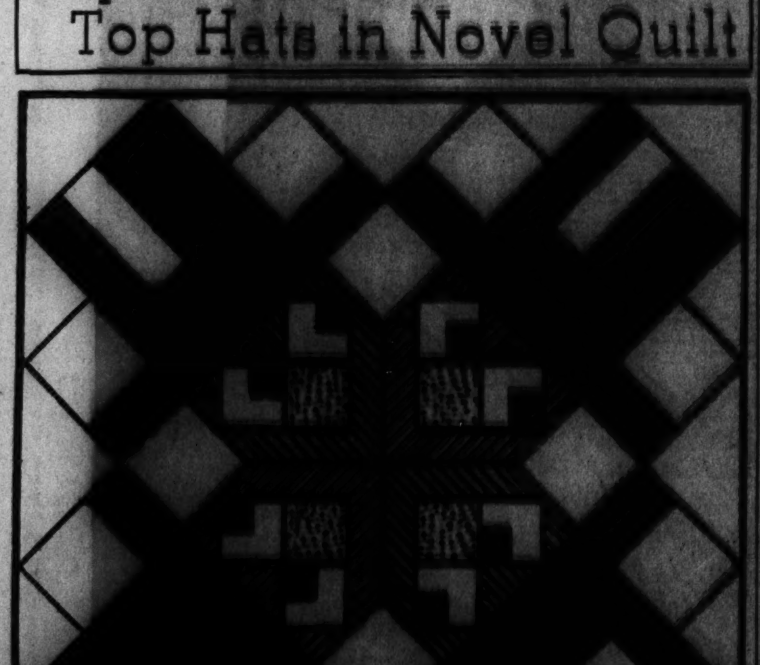
Sophisticated Owls Wear Top Hats in Novel Quilt



TOP HAT.

By Nancy Cabot.

POPULARITY of the radio and movies has led to the designing of many unusual quilt blocks. "Top Hat" is a grand example of a young mother's ingenuity. The pattern appears to simulate four wise owls, with their beaks together and each wearing a top hat. These four fellows are set together in an alternate arrangement with plain blocks. Dark blue, tan, and white form the color combination, with a dash of orange for the expressive eyes. Since the pattern measures 16½ inches square when complete, only 13 are required for an entire coverlet.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

City's Woman Symphony Is Aided by Clubs

Musical Groups Assist in Raising Funds Needed to Finance Orchestra.

More news of Chicago clubs and club women will be found in the other Society section.

THE Woman's Symphony orchestra approaches the fifth concert of its season next Sunday at the Studebaker theater with the backing of most of the musical organizations of the city.

MRS. JOHN CHARLES CARROLL.

The Music Study club will attend the concert in a body. Eighteen music clubs and sororities which have become season subscribers will be represented in the audience, and so will the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen.

When the orchestra found itself confronted with financial difficulties this season, 12 clubs raised funds to send it birthday gifts in celebration of its tenth anniversary this year.

Recently the orchestra board launched a drive to obtain 75 guarantors for the orchestra, one for each player's salary for the season. Members of the Chicago Woman's club individually have sponsored three players, the Lake View Musical society and the Musicians Club of Women, one each, and the music department of the sixth district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, one through the donations of most of the district clubs.

Organizations Assist the Orchestra with Its Finances.

At the outset of the season, Mrs. William J. Pigott, music chairman of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, placed the orchestra among the major projects of her department, and similar backing was extended by the Chicago Council of Federated Music Clubs, through Mrs. Frank Whitmore, president.

Mrs. John Charles Carroll, as chairman of club coöperation on the orchestra board, has been responsible for aligning much of this support. Mrs. Pigott and Miss Grace Seiberling, vice president of the Woman's Symphony Orchestral association, also serve with Mrs. Carroll on the club coöperation committee.

"The Eyes Have It" will be the theme of Eye Health week, beginning next Wednesday and extending through March 14, at the Central Branch Y. W. C. A., 59 East Monroe street.

A program of lectures, lighting exhibits, motion pictures, and demonstrations on the importance of the care of the eyes will be presented in the course of the ten days. All will be available to the public without charge. Tests of visual acuity will be made on 200 girls from Y. W. C. A. clubs and classes under the supervision of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

Dr. Beulah Cushman, opthalmologist, will open the program with a talk on "Your Eyes" at 6:45 o'clock Wednesday, with a question and answer clinic following. Afterward there will be a trip to the Chicago Lighting institute.

Several Speakers to Give Talks on Eye Hygiene.

Thursday at 4 and 6 o'clock Miss Lora Walker of the Commonwealth Edison company will talk on "What Is Good Lighting?" and at 7 o'clock Dr. Oscar B. Nugent will speak on "Something in Your Eye," describing how industry protects the eyes of its workers.

The following Monday, at 7 o'clock, Dr. Theodore Shapira will speak on "Keep Your Eyes Open," discussing eye cosmetics and makeup. The Illinois department of public health has provided two motion pictures, "How's Your Eyesight?" and "How Glasses Are Made," to be shown Friday, March 13, at 6:30 and 8 o'clock.

The Martha Washington club will give its annual luncheon and card party for the benefit of the Martha Washington Home for Dependent Crippled Children at 12:30 o'clock Friday at the South Shore Country club. Mrs. Frank J. O'Brien and Mrs. O. F. Scott are among those working on arrangements for the luncheon.

The home cares for 36 children between the ages of 4 and 18. Founded in 1926 along nonsectarian lines, the institution is operated without an endowment fund, and consequently is dependent for support on the contributions of individuals and organizations. Mrs. W. B. Bowers is president of the Martha Washington home and club.

"How Civil Service Affects the Citizen and the Taxpayer" will be the subject of the Friday forum of the Woman's City club. G. Lyle Belsley, director of the civil service assembly of the United States and Canada, will be the principal speaker at the meeting, which will be attended by representatives of the joint committee on the merit system. Mrs. C. L. Hagerman, chairman of the civil service committee of the club, will be in charge.

Juniors of Cook County Federation to Give Show.

Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum and Frau Erna von Abendroth will be guests of the club at tea tomorrow afternoon. Both will speak informally on Germany of today. Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher, first vice president, will preside.

The Juniors of the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs are giving a home talent entertainment and hobby show in connection with their monthly dinner Tuesday evening in the Colonial room of the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street. Miss Florence Smith heads the group, and among those assisting her with arrangements for the party are Miss Betty Grice, Miss Ellen Moberg, Miss Mable Berry, Miss Gertrude Jennings, and Miss Catherine Merz.

MISS FLORENCE SMITH.

The anniversary of Carl Schurz's birth and the 22d birthday of the Independent German-American Woman's club will be the occasion of a luncheon of the organization at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday at the Auditorium hotel.

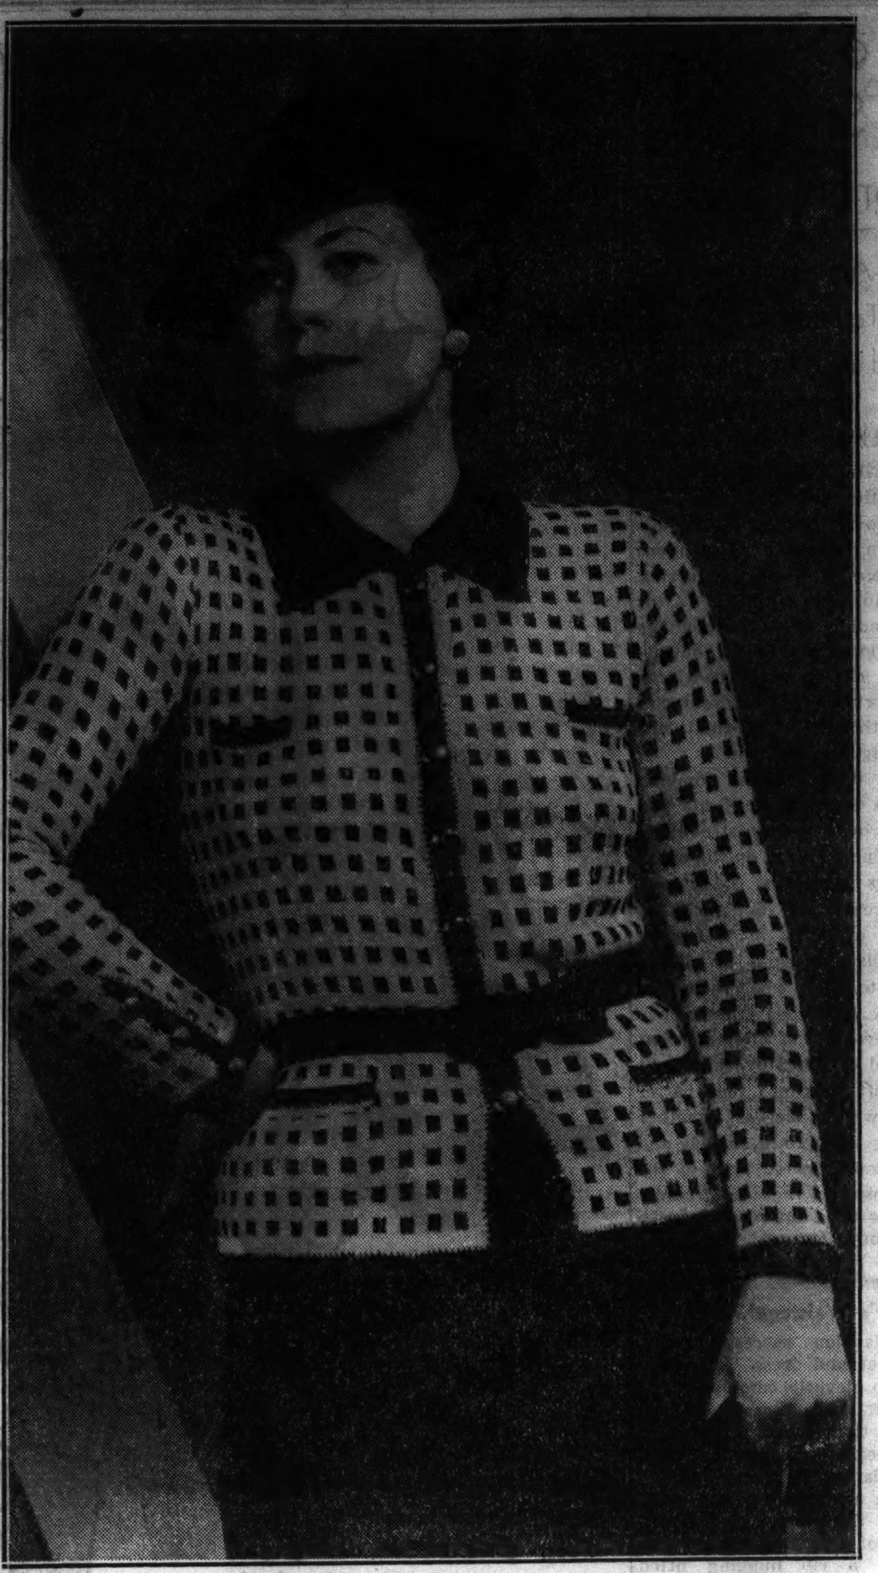
Dr. George L. Scherger, pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical church, and former presidents of the club will be guests. The Ringgold Artist duo, composed of Margaret Ringgold, pianist and composer, and Constance Neville-Jones, soprano, will give a musical program.

American Womanhood Institute Lectures to End This Week.

The final group of free lectures in the series sponsored by the American Womanhood institute will be given this week at the Chicago chapter's headquarters, 201 North Wells street.

"Child Psychology" will be the topic of Mrs. Allegra Rathbun at 6 o'clock Tuesday. The following evening, at the same hour, Miss Dahy B. Varnett will talk on "The Business Girl as Hostess," and Mme. Ida Charnoff will talk on "Feminine Charm in the Business World" on Thursday evening.

The institute will continue its community series of lectures at the Edgewater Beach hotel, the Southmoor hotel, and the Oak Park Arms until the middle of April.



IN TOWN-COUNTRY TYPE DRESS

Mrs. Walter Ware, a member of the Oak Park branch of the Infant Welfare society, is one of the western suburb's smartest matrons. She chooses this town-and-country type of dress to wear to a welfare meeting in the morning, and then to dash into town for luncheon. The dress is two piece, knitted, with a brown skirt and a brown and tan checkerboard squares top. With it Mrs. Ware dons a medium-brimmed hat of soft brown felt that is very flattering with her graying hair. The junior group and junior auxiliary of the Oak Park and River Forest branches of Infant Welfare are holding their annual benefit dancing party on Saturday, April 25, at the Drake hotel.
(Tribune Studio Photo.)

SHE FINDS TIME FOR CHARITY

Mrs. William W. Nicholas is one of the young Kenilworth matrons who find time to interest themselves in the work of the Kenilworth branch of the Infant Welfare society. The branch specializes in making baby blankets, which are sold for the benefit of the society, and eventually the branch hopes to have a shop in the north shore town.

Here are some fascinating dance steps you can do, posed by Doris Eaton. For the waltz clog step begin with figure 1: Step on left foot, right foot ready to go. Figure 2: Brush right foot forward. Figure 3: Brush right foot backward. Can't you see what this exercise would do for hips, legs, thighs, and waistline? Step on right foot, brush forward with left, brush back on left.

Dancing Gives New Lease on Life and Youth

By Antoinette Donnelly.

MY object in presenting the dance series, of which this is a part, is primarily to make women more conscious of lightfootedness. Nothing under heaven will do this as will dance steps. By lightfootedness is meant that lithe, young spring and "go" to the walk, without which a woman never can pass for a day younger than her age. Of course, along with the light step and movement, you are going to have to introduce a lighter silhouette, and the dance steps also work beautifully toward this goal, especially the tap steps. You are killing a whole flock of fat, heavy birds with the one "tap" stone. Hundreds of women sign up for tap lessons with no other ambition in mind than to reduce, and they do it and do it well, according to Arthur Murray, nationally known dance instructor. The long back steps of current fox trot popularity, and the long side steps are wonderful for hip reducing. The balance and control you get with modern dance instruction cannot help but make a more graceful, lighter, younger person of you. Besides, it is a glorious exercise in itself. It is fun. And there's music to it. Nothing releases you from troubles and worry like dancing. I could name a half dozen of the leading women executives [big, nationally known names] who attend dancing classes and dance for a couple of hours for no other reason than to keep mentally and physically fit.

So, girls, get in on this new system of physical culture [may we not call it so?]. Get the dance back into your stagnant toes. Get music in your feet, and just wait and see what a grand massage it proves for your face, too. Turn on your radio and practice the tap steps around home. If dad looks at you as if you'd suddenly lost your mind, yank him up on the floor so that he, too, will lose that serious mental application to business affairs. Many masculine executives, too, are sneaking off noondays and at 5 o'clock for an hour's workout at a dancing school, and finding it the exercise of exercises.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

VARIETY is present in a marked degree in our correspondence. The regular influx of appeals for help of various kinds continues, but wearing apparel of all types remains our first consideration at the present time. The needs range from wooly shirts for infants to warm shawls for grandmothers. There are hundreds of inadequately clad school children. Others are truant simply because they lack warm clothing and their parents are unable to cope with the problem. It's almost time for spring cleaning, but why wait until the last minute to go through the clothes closets and drawers to dispose of surplus clothing? If you do that now, you'll lighten your own burdens in the spring, and needy persons can enjoy the use of them immediately, when the need, incidentally, is greatest.

If your storage space harbors a suit, size 36, I feel sure you'll want to get it out immediately and pass it on to Mr. L., an elderly man just released from a hospital ward. In a recent letter to me he explained his circumstances as follows:

"Dear Miss Brown: I recently was released from the infirmary, and am at present on relief, which provides me with room and board. Fortunately, I have been able to locate a job doing light work around an office, but suitable clothing remains my greatest problem. Through the kindness of your readers I have been provided with a warm overcoat, but I am in dire need of a suit. When I left the hospital I was wearing a pair of overalls and a light, summer weight coat, and no vest, since the institution has no clothing appropriation. If I am unable to obtain a presentable suit, I shall be unable to do the work which will mean so much to me both mentally and physically. I understand that I can expect only a few weeks more of assistance from the relief office."

Mr. L. is, and has been, in a precarious state of health, suffering with a lung infection, and at his age is fortunate to be able to find light work which will enable him to earn a living, rather than depend on the bare comforts provided by public assistance.

Jacket-Dress Duet Smoothie of Spring Styles

Simple—Almost Severe—Frock Topped by Short, Rib Hugging Coat.

By Rhea Seeger.

INDIVIDUAL clothes to dramatize personalities, distinctively designed models to suit a most discriminating shopper seem more plentiful these days of new spring fashions than ever before. After weeks of wading through showings of suits, tailored two piece outfits, tweeds for chilly last-of-the-winter days, discovering these different creations gives the shopper all the thrills of an exciting fashion show.

Sometimes it is a clever combine of color, or a combination of silk and wool fabric, or a unique streamline that marks one of these outfits as an instantaneous success of the season. Afternoon dresses and dinner clothes are striking examples of this wave of individualism, hitherto so elusive and difficult to locate when they were most desired. Afternoon dresses have reached a new peak of interest, what with graceful drapings by experts at the trick, soft necklines that flatter knowingly, with sleeves, whether short or long, made to fit suavely and accent the sophisticated lines of the dresses themselves, these are rapidly becoming the most interesting dresses you can buy.

Jackets Resemble Grandfather's Waistcoat.

Another fashion success is the duet of jacket and dress. These two pieces are so cleverly combined that they look far more like a slim one piece outfit than the superpractical affair they really are. In most models one finds an extremely simple dress with a severely straight skirtline, or else the newest of graceful skirts, one of fine accordion plaits topped with a rib hugging fitted jacket that ends in a perky flared peplum at the hipline.

These jackets are quaintly fashioned and of materials resembling the decorative masculine waistcoats of grandfather's era. Tiny covered buttons, dozens of them, march down the front closing.

Cape Turns Formal Into a Dinner Dress.

Next to these afternoon dresses, or costumes, in fashion importance come the flattering and feminine new dinner and dance dresses that also come with separate and detachable jackets or shoulder capes, making them twice high fashion because they can double for informal dinners as well as decorative evening gowns. This spring they will swirl widely around the floor line and fit suavely over the hips. Taffeta is now the favorite material and, as the days grow warmer, net and chiffon together with sheer materials will be high fashion fabrics.

Five unusual models have been sketched, each a find, each definitly designed for distinction and individuality. No. 1, a lovely silk taffeta dinner and dance dress, made with a wide, wide skirt. This is one of the most daring of the new spring models because of the narrow bands of transparent chiffon that fashion a good half of the skirt.

Dove Gray Makes a Perfect Bridesmaid's Frock.

No. 2 is a picture dress, one that can be used for the bridesmaids at spring weddings, one of the most subtle creations to be found. It is of soft dove gray, with a clinging, soft skirt that reaches the ankles, softly draped sleeves, and a high neckline. A demure sheer white fabric makes the collar and cuffs on the sleeves. The hat is also gray and completes the costume in picturesque charm.

No. 3, another dinner and dance dress, this time in ginger brown, filmy marquisette with miles of glistening cire braid for decoration. This brown braid matches the marquisette in color and even though it is applied in horizontal lines the dress keeps you amazingly slim. The short sleeved jacket shows the décollétage of dress and fits smoothly, as do all new spring jackets, whether of silk, net, or sheer wool. The slip is of brown taffeta.

Golden Toast Tan Worn with Midnight Blue.

No. 4, an afternoon outfit featuring a new color, golden toast tan, worn with midnight blue. The longer-than-usual jacket is cinched tightly in at the narrow waistline and flares smartly and sharply almost at the kneeline. Flapped pockets in front, wide revers, and a row of buttons keep it snug and typically 1936 and spring. The straightline dress has an accordion plaited skirt, a simple bodice top decorated with tiny buttons, and a bow of the glowing toast tan of the coat-jacket.

No. 5, a short flowered jacket tied with black bows and fitted close to the figure, is used as tops for a black skirt. The narrow belt is also of the black material of the skirt. The printed silk is patterned with a small floral design in vivid colors. This duet of fitted short jacket and simple, straight skirt is rapidly becoming the most popular and springlike costume that can be worn now under a winter coat and later as a trim street ensemble.

All models sketched are from the collections of highly individual clothes featured in a smart boulevard shop in Chicago.

Paris Pattern Frock Adopts Broad Shoulders

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS—[Special.]—Dressmakers in the French capital are sponsoring the broad-shouldered effect for spring. I knew that you would like an adaptation of this mode for one of your new frocks, and had one of the most attractive versions of this type of frock copied in this pattern, No. 5126.

The square neckline and the sash may be employed to create your favorite color contrast. If you make the dress in dark blue, you may use red, green, tulip yellow, or light blue for the sash and bow. You need not be afraid to be dashing, for a combination such as a green frock, with the bow and girdle of soft red, is trés a la mode. Should you prefer to have the dress black or red, adorn the neckline with a bow of white and have the sash the same color as the frock.

You can "go to town" on fabrics for this model. Any material, from monotone silks to sheer woolens, even including the gay prints so fashionable now, would be appropriate. Satin is a possibility, as are the many soft cottons.

The style of this dress is such that any slim figure can wear it successfully, no matter what the age or type of woman who selects it. This frock with the "gay nineties" air is gracefully simple, therefore appropriate for many occasions. Both long and short sleeves are attractive. Your ultimate choice will depend upon the type of event for which you primarily intend the frock.

Women's Clubs Plan Pageant of Progress

Event April 18 to 26 Is to Aid Charities of Various Organizations.

More news of Chicago clubs and club women will be found in the other Society section.

A NUMBER of leading Chicago organizations are planning to acquaint a new public with their activities through the Woman's Pageant of Progress, to be held at Navy pier April 18 to 26.

MRS. BURNETT D. WARNER.
[De Haven Photo.]

The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, the Woman's City club, the Goodwill Industries, the Woman's Ideal club, the first district of the Illinois State Nurses' association, the Service Council for Girls, the women's auxiliary of the Chicago Medical society, the School Children's Aid, and the Woman's Christian Temperance union are among the groups which already have contracted for booths whereby their work may be demonstrated.

These and other secular and church organizations are engaged in selling tickets and exhibition space for the pageant, by this means raising funds for their charities. The pageant, which is planned and managed exclusively by women, is being conducted as a not for profit venture, with civic and cultural as well as philanthropic objectives.

In addition to the section for clubs the pageant will include five other divisions. Garden furniture, garden statuary, birds, butterflies, fish, and examples of the fine and domestic arts will compose one section. Another will be devoted to apparel of all types, perfumes, cosmetics, and accessories.

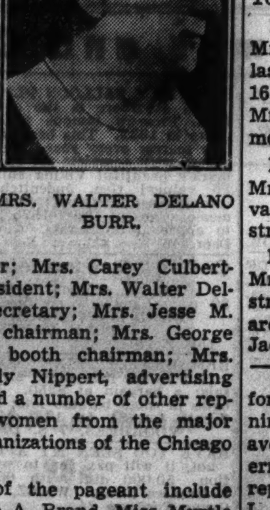
Various Arts and Crafts Are to Be Exhibited.

Radios, rugs, glassware, pottery, cutlery, and brass, copper, and silver ware will form another division, and food products and antiques still others. In the "modern home" section will be displayed building materials, decorations, plumbing, heating, air conditioning, refrigeration, oil burners, electrical accessories, paints, and fuels.

At a recent meeting representatives of organizations participating in the pageant decided to make vocational guidance available to high school students and graduates who visit the pageant. They will be given the opportunity to fill out occupational selection blanks, which will be graded and analyzed and returned with advice as to what occupations they may best fit themselves to fill.

Preparations Are Being Made for Pageant Fashion Showing.

Elaborate preparations are being made for a fashion show to be presented during the pageant. The north wing of the pier is being fitted with a four tier stage, upon which the models will parade under novel lighting.



MRS. WALTER DELANO BURR.

Associated in the direction of the pageant are Mrs. Burnett Dewey Warner, president and treasurer; Mrs. Carey Culbertson, vice president; Mrs. Walter Delano Burr, secretary; Mrs. Jesse M. Coen, ticket chairman; Mrs. George N. Beecher, booth chairman; Mrs. George Hanly Nippert, advertising chairman, and a number of other representative women from the major women's organizations of the Chicago area.

Sponsors of the pageant include Mrs. Gustave A. Brand, Miss Myrtle L. Carpenter, Mrs. Samuel A. Ettelson, Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer, Mrs. Harry Hart, Mrs. Edward Hines, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Koch, Mrs. Otto Kerner, Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, Mrs. George Allen McCorkle, Mrs. Forest Ray Moulton, Mrs. F. Jefferson Redfield, Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, Mrs. Julius Smietanka, Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher, Dr. Julia C. Strawn, Mrs. Lorado Taft, Mrs. John Van Wakeman, Mrs. Mary Alexander Wall, Mrs. Ralph W. Webster, and Mrs. Louis E. Yager.

Service Council for Girls Plans Two Benefit Programs.

The Service Council for Girls, of which Mrs. Warner also is president, has two benefit programs planned for the next fortnight. Proceeds of both will go to the council's big sister work among Protestant girls who pass through the Juvenile court.

Mrs. Stanley Gibson will be hostess for the first benefit next Friday evening at her home, 2440 Lake View avenue, and the following Friday afternoon the same program will be repeated at the home of Mrs. Roy L. Davis, 2672 Stewart avenue, Evanston. Judge Mary M. Bartelme is honorary president of the council, which was founded upon her suggestion.

Phi Mu Sorority Plans Founders' Day Program.

The 84th birthday of Phi Mu sorority is to be celebrated with a founders' day luncheon next Saturday at Bradshaw's tearoom, 661 North Michigan avenue. This second oldest esoteric organization for women in the country numbers so many members in Chicago that west, north, and south side groups have been organized.

The west side group will be hostess at the luncheon Saturday, with Mrs. H. W. Carnwright handling arrangements. Mrs. Hal E. Bishop, president of the Chicago group, will conduct the founders' day ritual after the luncheon.

INSPIRED BY CHINESE ANTIQUITIES

This window, showing a treatment using the new flat mohairs, is on view in the drapery department of a Chicago store. Over-curtains are in magnolia design and glass curtains are of pale pink. They are hung over Chinese split bamboo shades, the bamboo being repeated on the valance and on a small 18th century English chair near by. Designed by Edith Weigle, the decorative idea was inspired by the London exhibit of Chinese antiquities.

New Mohair Fabrics Make Charming, Soft Draperies

Flat Species Never Wrinkle Nor Muss and Can Be Shaken to Cleanliness.

By Edith Weigle.

HAVE you seen the new mohairs? We have been singing their praises for some time past, for we know by actual experience how beautifully they drape, how excellently they wear and clean. And now a large Chicago store has created a special mohair department in which all the colors and varieties of this fascinating fabric are shown. It's a good time to get acquainted with them if you have not had this good fortune before.

On view, also, are four windows, arranged just as you would have them in your own home, so you can see for yourself the charming effect of the draperies and curtains.

The new mohairs are, as perhaps you know, made from real Angora yarn. They come in different weights and widths from the new gros point and the lovely velvets for upholstery, through the ribbed, diagonal weave and printed drapery textiles to the almost-sheer and equally attractive curtain types and the textured casement cloths. They have the salable features that they never wrinkle nor muss and that you can easily shake dirt out of their folds when they become slightly soiled, as it does not readily adhere to their surface.

One of the nicest new printed patterns for draperies and slip covers is called calla lily. The flower of that name is seen in cream white, touched with yellow and a fleck of orange on a gorgeous blue-green ground. The foliage is in the fashionable pale gray tone.

Also stunning is the silver swan design showing a conventional shell pattern and swan with laurel sprays in gray and light green on a dark blue ground. For a modern room sable plaid is intriguing, for on a Dubonnet red ground are crossings of a beige and brown stripe that looks exactly like fur.

Again, a graceful iris motif in yellows, beige, and green makes a brown background highly decorative. "Nassau" is a luxuriant riot of tropical flowers, immense in size, on a grape-wine ground, aptly named.

The picture today shows a living room window with the new mohair draperies. The over-curtains are deep blue, with a magnolia design in pink, green, and a touch of yellow. The glass curtains pick up the pink note, and the Chinese split bamboo shades, used instead of Venetian blinds, echo the yellow. The simple, narrow valance is yellow with bamboo trim. The colors blend as softly into one another as the diminishing ripples on a pond. The chair near the window is covered in yellow, chevron weave mohair that is also used on the valance and that repeats the bit of yellow in the drapery pattern.

This window, Chinese in feeling, was inspired by the famous exhibition of Chinese antiquities now being held in Burlington house, London.

Planned Decore Insures Unity in Modern Rooms

By Claire Winslow.

COOL pastel colors, Moroccan rugs, furniture of absolute simplicity in the best modern manner create beauty in an interesting skyscraper apartment. Although the rooms are not large, a restful feeling of spaciousness results from the use of plain tones and surfaces rather than patterned and ornamented areas.

The walls in all the rooms are painted in pale tints. In the living room and bedrooms, white; in another bedroom, gray; in the dining room, white, with one wall a vivid green, opposite wide windows with floor length draperies of the same green. The furniture upholsteries are plain, flat mohairs, and linens, also in solid colors.

In the living room the only pattern appears in the stunning draw curtains of light gray linen with cross bars of black and white. The furniture is of walnut, in its own light, natural color. The couch and one chair are done in brown, two comfortable lounge chairs are in rose, the desk chair is black and chromium, there is a rose ottoman and the rug is tawny beige. Long, low bookshelves run along one wall, ending in cabinet with sliding doors and the writing desk, seen in the picture.

The master bedroom is all in white, beige, and pale green. White linen draw curtains are at the windows. The twin beds and chests are of light ash with natural finish. Bedspreads are green with white trimming. A telephone seat is a round, backless chair of brown lether and ash.

Especially lovely is the dining room. Here the mahogany table is not in the center of the room, but near windows that command a view of the lake. The Moroccan rug is a charming yellow, contrasting with the rich brown of the furniture woods and the cool green of the chair seats and linen draperies. As already stated, the wall opposite the draperies is green, "tying up" with them, while the others are white.

The hall is not large, yet here, too, there is a feeling of space because it is not in any way cluttered. On the wall is a long, unframed mirror, beneath which is a mahogany shelf. On either side are pictures. Nothing else except the artistic little Moroccan rug on the floor.

Everything in this apartment except one or two small items, was designed and built especially for it, so there is a satisfying unity in the effect, and a real beauty not found otherwise. It is one of the most perfect examples of good modern interior decoration we have seen in Chicago. The furniture was designed and made here.

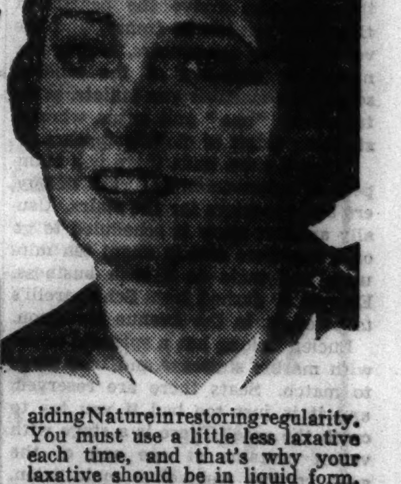
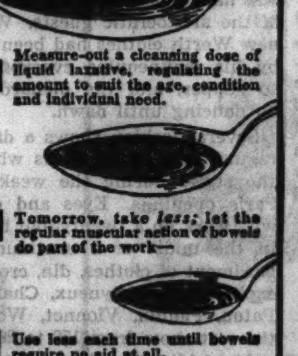
"The Doctor was RIGHT!"

Women should take only liquid laxatives



THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION



I Measure-out a cleansing dose of liquid laxative, regulating the amount to suit the age, condition and individual need.

II Tomorrow, take less; let the regular muscular action of bowels do part of the work—

III Use less each time until bowels require no aid at all.

SOME say there's no relief from constipation on account of the things we eat and the way we live, today. It isn't true!

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes matters worse. And that isn't true.

Do what doctors do to relieve such a condition. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. It's the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried. You'll never go back to fixed doses of strong cathartics that act with such violence!

Ask your doctor. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. Or get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes any sluggishness or biliousness due to constipation, return it and get your money.

Try Syrup Pepsin! Just take regulated doses until Nature has restored regularity.

Paris Gone Delirious Over Fashion Shows

Spring and Summer Openings Put French Capital in Its Gayest Mood.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris is having her usual midwinter fling given over to the bright, noisy, and luxurious business of the spring and summer fashion shows. The town has suddenly turned gaudy with buyers from New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Berlin, Czechoslovakia, and other points in this style conscious world, while excitement begins to boil over with conferences of kings and dictators settling the fate of something or other. Taxi drivers are doing their bit to make it a wild party by declaring a small war over double night rates. Innocent farestanders find themselves receiving bricks and flying glass meant for the chauffeurs of their taxis, and everybody has a grand time.

Aristocratic Place Vendôme has filled up with gendarmes and the garde republicaine, wearing their shiny tin hats with plumes. Plain clothes detectives hop around to see that King Carol of Rumania, King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, handsome Prince Starhemberg of Austria, or some of the other royalty get through Paris unscathed. Cameramen and movie vans taking "shots" at the notables have gummed up the corner where the kings and princes have been lunching and talking business at the Ritz, while their wives and other feminine complements to diplomacy join the rush to Schiaparelli's opening next door.

Schiaparelli's a Mad Scramble of Celebrities.

Going into Schiaparelli's historic house to see her new summer styles was a mad scramble of the world's buyers, newspaper folk, swanky women, and society artists, hunting seats. The swarming crowds gaping at royalty in the Place Vendôme outside were no more clotted than those seeing the clothes in the dressmaker's salons. These elect were crowded in in a way to make a sardine packer chew his fingers with rage. I arrived early, in time to see Schiaparelli herself and get a tip about the coming collection from her, before she went into hiding in her private office. In ten minutes I was swamped in a sea of ambassadors' wives and titled women from the overflow at the Ritz. Princess Sixte de Bourbon Parme, aunt of Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne, came to see the new clothes. She might have been looking for something to wear to her nephew's court a little later. The Hon. Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, the fabulous "Daisy," was there, looking white, and wrapped in rugs. She got up from a sickbed to come.

Around and under and over everything were the buyers, who came three thousand miles to see and buy the Paris styles, flanked to right and left by high tension editors from the snooty magazines. Everybody has a "dead pan" look, but they missed nothing. The eagle eyed buyers know just what to pick for Main street to wear next summer. By the time the manikins began their parade the spectators were so thick the girls were forced to carve ailes through a solid wall of human flesh. Schiaparelli's adorable little manikin Suzy was the first. She waltzed down these ailes of humanity wearing a postage stamp printed baby knicker bathing suit, with a ruffle for a skirt, an isinglass sunbonnet, and dark sun goggles. The next girl followed at once, and they passed thick and fast, wearing living excitement in the breathtaking styles.

Show Is Opened in Cathedral-like Silence.

The show of a Paris dressmaker lasts about three hours, and the models usually parade in unbelievably crowded rooms, in spite of the rigorous restrictions on invitations.

When a show is about to begin a cathedral silence settles down. As the manikins arrive the pencils of the press scratch in frenzy, and the voices of the announcers, calling the names or numbers of the models, sound like machine gun bullets, punctuated by "ohs" and gasps when a startling tidbit of clothes appears.

When a show ends there is a stampede of saleswomen and rush of buyers and reporters for the stairs. Usually another show is scheduled to go on somewhere else in about ten minutes, and taxis do a rush business. Everybody dashed from Schiaparelli's to Lelong's, in the Avenue Matignon.

Lucien Lelong has a splendid house with marble staircase and trimmings to match. Seats there are reserved, and it is just too bad if you try to crash the gate. There is a stage with velvet curtains at one end of the gold, crystal, and velvet main salon, from which the manikins start. When I arrived in this salon the crowd of invited had been shoehorned in, and Lucien Lelong himself had got into his traditional position in the big doorway. I stopped to say "howdy" to him and then settled with the rest of the audience for another onslaught of glamorous new clothes.

All Bets Off on Regular Meals During Fashion Week.

The former Mme. Lelong, Princess Natalie Paley, just back from Hollywood, held up the show for her entrance. She was wearing sables and a crazy little hat with a big white bird taking off from the stern. She brought down the house when she kissed her youthful looking, distinguished "ex" smartly on the left cheek and trailed to her chair, followed by a tall Russian with white hiar, fur gloves, and no hat. Paula, the dean of Paris mannequins, came first, cool, ageless as the Mona Lisa, with her hair in sleek, folded, black wings at the sides. She was poured into a gray suit. Following her was a langorous brunette mannequin all in dark trailing lace with a lace headdress hung from flowers just like good Queen Victoria wore in her heyday. In a minute another opened the velvet curtains and swam down the steps, and then another, and another, wearing gorgeous new clothes, each exciting. After two hundred models had paraded, everybody went into another sumptuous salon for a buffet supper with champagne.

In the madhouse weeks of the Paris fashion shows you take your food where you can, because all bets are off on regular meals. At 8 we left Lelong's to make another taxi rush for home or wherever. I had forty minutes to change into evening clothes and get back up on the Champs Elysées to Maggy Rouff's evening style show and party. Few buyers get bids to evening shows, and the audience at Maggy Rouff's was made up of the Paris smart set, sleek, dressed and manicured like a million, blazing with jewels and chattering as if they were at grand opera.

The mannequin parade at an evening party lasts longer, is much gayer and handsomer, and afterward there is more champagne, caviar, cakes, and sandwiches. Then home at 2 a. m. to set the alarm for a morning opening. Worth opened his new house in the Faubourg St. Honoré with a big dance, this time, and the style show was hard put to it to top the toilettes of the aristocratic guests. When the new Worth clothes had been paraded by his mannequins everybody went to supper, and the diehards stayed on dancing until dawn.

Several fashion shows a day is the regular fare of all of us who follow the styles during the weeks of the Paris openings. Eyes and ears and wits work on a twenty-four hour shift in the midst of a continuous bombardment of clothes, din, crowds, and excitement. Molyneux, Chanel, Jean Patou, Paquin, Vionnet, Worth, and the rest show from 150 to 200 models apiece. After the show I am expected to go behind the scenes for a chat with the head of the house to give him or her congratulations. A big dressmaker's private salon is like a star's dressing room on a first night after the show. Celebrities jam it, and the health of the designer is drunk by his, or her, friends.

The fight for seats in Mainbocher's house for a first day is a battle of the first magnitude. I got there an hour early and found the house filled with saintly Arum lilies. There were two female bouncers at the door keeping the rush at bay.

The Paris style shows are as strenuous as training for the Olympic games, and a lot more fun. They take a memory like a chess player's, a writing arm as quick and potent as Joe Louis's fighting arm, and a bodily tolerance for a prolonged diet of sandwiches and champagne. But they are a society and style circus of the first magnitude, and a three weeks' spree in clothes that any woman would go a long way to acquire. You go away from them with your head full of swirling dresses, high topped shoes, flower colored gloves, swishing petticoats, giddy parasols, incredible printed stuffs, daring hats, and a million other new clothes ideas.

Versatile Neckline Gives Triple Chic to Trim, Tailored Spring Frock.

By Clotilde.

THE simple dress with versatile features is fashion's pet for spring and its predecessor, late winter. This model, pattern No. 2599, is an especially attractive example of this type of dress. You will notice that the lines are essentially plain, with the two exceptions of the graceful flare in the hemline, achieved through clever plaiting, and the well fitted waistline, created by the use of a minimum number of magic tucks.

The glamor of beautifully tailored details is the undeniable possession of this dress. Adhering to simple lines throughout the frock, the designer centers the major portion of the chic in the neckline. The pattern provides for three individual and flattering treatments. You may have the slightly opened neckline, accented with military fastenings, and a neat scarf inserted as background. Should you choose, you may omit the scarf and open the neckline into neat revers. If you are bound and determined to go military [one of the smartest trends of the season], create this frock with the decidedly military bodice treatment illustrated in the sketch second from the right. Buttons march precisely down the center of the waist, and a neat and abbreviated collar hugs the neckline.

You also may have short sleeves, if you so wish, with the clever button motif repeated.

The original of this smart spring frock is fashioned of beige wool crêpe, with the scarf of cocoa brown crêpe. Any two colors which contrast suitably may be employed. One need not use wool crêpe, for any heavy silk will make up beautifully.

Style No. 2599 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 2.

The hotbed should now be in full operation. Ventilation should be given at suitable times, especially while the sun is shining. Simply admit a little stream of air by raising the end of the sash away from the wind and keep material at hand for covering on severe nights. Watering should be done in the morning on a rising temperature, and not at night. Thin out plants that are crowding one another, and thin or transplant seedlings before they get too large. Many annuals may be sown at this time. Try a few branches of unusual trees and shrubs for forcing—the elm, alder, walnut, hazel, horsechestnut, hickory, and linden make interesting material for bouquets.

Tuesday, March 3.

Many house plants will begin to show activity at this time and shifting or transplanting may begin. Soil may be obtained from a local florist if none is at hand. Use pots that are not more than one size larger than those the plants were in. Old pots should be washed. Do not fill the pot to the brim with soil but leave space to hold water. Tamp the soil in with a dibble when potting palms and use a rich, heavy soil. For begonias, ferns, and fibrous-rooted plants employ a soil that is comparatively light, such as loam, leafmold, and sand, with about one-fourth decayed manure.

Wednesday, March 4.

Tuberous rooted begonias can be started in sand, and, when rooted, potted in attractive containers for growing and flowering. Many roses will be seriously injured, or killed, from the effects of the severe winter weather. Perennials should survive because of being covered with snow over such a long period. There is little that can be done about it, but the spring pruning of roses may be delayed until after danger of late frosts. Otherwise the plants will have to be gone over again.

Thursday, March 5.

The destruction of insect cocoons may be undertaken at any time, and certainly before the hatch and new broods come forth. Many cocoons are found on the trunks and branches of trees, on sheds, and on the corners of board fences. These should be collected as one passes through the grounds and burned or destroyed immediately. Shrubs that should be pruned in the spring include the kerria or globe flower, snowball hydangea, and rose of Sharon or hibiscus. The kerria and spiraea may be cut to the ground. They will send out many new growths which will produce an abundance of bloom.

Friday, March 6.

Place orders for hardy lilies that are to be planted in spring as early as possible, for the stocks are frequently limited. Orders placed now will receive attention, and there will be no disappointments. Two small garden handbooks should appeal to the home gardener. They are on "Perennial Flowering Plants" and "Growing Annuals." The author is Prof. Riis of Ohio State university. Any one interested in grafting plums and cherries should do the work early. Use a liquid grafting wax in cold weather. There is a lot of garden fun grafting.

Saturday, March 7.

Points to observe when sowing seeds for early plants in the house are [1] fine, moist soil, not too wet nor too dry; [2] thin sowing; [3] light covering; [4] careful watering; [5] plenty of ventilation when the seeds germinate; [6] transplanting as soon as the young plants can be handled. Many plants can be easily grown from seed in a glass covered box in the window for planting out of doors later on. This is a fine time to build pergolas, trellises, arches, and other garden accessories before the spring rush begins. Plan to use plenty of vines, for there is nothing that gives such a feeling of repose and quietude.

Child's Stealing May Rise from Emotional Crisis

Loot Youth's Compensation for Deprivations and Vacuums in His World.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

THE following letter has on it no name nor address, which means that the writer is reluctant to give these particulars and would like to have a reply in the newspaper. Unsigned communications frequently come to my desk, but almost always the problem the correspondent wishes me to discuss in the column is not general enough, or is entirely unsuitable for the purpose. Today's letter is different, however. Even the handwriting shows the distress in which it is written. It reads: "My dear Mrs. Bevans: We have a son of 12 who has within the last year been taking money both from his mother's and father's pocketbooks.

"He is a quiet boy and this shock has come to both my husband and myself as a severe blow. We cannot account for this, since he has always been truthful, having been reared in an atmosphere of honesty, refinement, and culture. This boy is not denied anything and I cannot understand what force urges him. I understand that he uses that money to buy candy, also to treat some of the boys."

Punishment Utterly Futile in Curing Dishonesty.

Punishment is the most utterly futile means of dealing with this behavior, as with most serious phases of conduct.

These two forms of dishonesty—lying and stealing—are seldom direct acts, but are symptoms of some inner disturbance, or conflict, or need. We must work gently at the cause to remove the symptoms. While a child of 12 knows the difference between right and wrong, still we need not associate these acts in our minds with a criminal tendency, even though we call them lying and stealing.

I sometimes wonder when I'm writing about problems like this, and when I speak of discovering the buried or hidden causes [usually emotional ones] of such behavior, whether many parents are not a little skeptical and think, "How far fetched that is," or "Children aren't like that; their feelings and actions are not as complicated as that."

Social Maladjustment Often Causes Pilfering.

If you are rather new to the study of child human nature and to the indirect ways in which it works, look at a simpler kind of behavior trouble. I am quite sure that, for instance, you find it easy to believe that many of the mealtime performances of the child who is a poor eater and who has to be coaxed are due to a desire for attention. You can also see how a small child will indulge in different kinds of naughtiness after a new baby has come, in order to get once again some of the mother's attention which the baby sister or brother has taken from her.

If this kind of hidden motive is easy for you to understand, then just go a step farther and you will be able to see how some of the following reasons, which at first glance seem far afield, may account for a lad's stealing:

A desire for popularity, or a longing just to be noticed, or to be taken into the crowd, often are found to be the reasons for a boy or girl stealing money at home. With money in his pocket he can treat the crowd, and that gives him standing. At least for the moment it lifts him or her out of the feeling of inferiority which comes from failing in lessons, wearing poor clothes, or having an unfortunate personality.

Some Stealing an Act of Revenge.

As you may surmise, I am talking now of the child who suddenly starts stealing, not of the one who has never had any home training and has always done a little pilfering, or who has lived always in an environment where delinquency is the exception rather than the rule. It's the normal child in the average home we are discussing today.

Now to go on. Sometimes stealing is quite direct. A child steals in order to buy something he or she longs for, such as jewelry, or a bat, or a catcher's mit. Or a child may take money to save himself the humiliation of disclosing his poverty before his schoolmates; to buy lunch at the school cafeteria, or mid-morning milk. Or a child will sometimes steal in revenge, to hurt the child or grown-up he steals from.

Much more indirect is the stealing which is done because a child is hurt. Something happens at home to make him feel himself less loved, and taking money to buy candy or some other indulgence is a sort of compensation.

Dr. Douglas A. Thom speaks of stealing as sometimes being associated with some unhappiness or confusion connected with sex.

A child may sometimes be thrown with companions who indulge in petty theft outside their homes as a means of excitement. A boy who is more or less forced to play with these lads may find it difficult to hold off—to be "different."

But in the appeals for help that come to me it is the taking of things at home that is the most usual problem, not real delinquency. And it is not often the depredations of the little child that I hear of. So some of these motives or conflicts I've listed will be passed over by many of my readers who are in distress over this kind of behavior.

Humiliating Young Delinquent a Fatal Tactic.

Need I say once again, before I write today's last word, that punishment for dishonesty is worse than useless. Need I add that horror, shame, and emotional "scenes" on the part of parents are not only futile but harmful. And that even worse is it to make a boy or girl feel shame or humiliation, or the dreadful sense of being shut away in spirit and affection from those he or she loves.

To be sure, a child of 9, or 12, or older must be made to realize that what he is doing is not right; that it will not lead him to happiness nor to the respect of his fellows.

But, that once made clear in friendly if serious explanation, the mother's or father's efforts must be bent toward the gaining or keeping of their child's confidence. Sometimes he himself, in quiet talking, will be able to tell or to see himself why he has done what he has done.

To meet the other problem in the letter quoted, we have a fully written leaflet called "Untruthfulness—Its Causes and Cures," which will be sent on receipt of a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in The Tribune on Monday and on every day of the week.

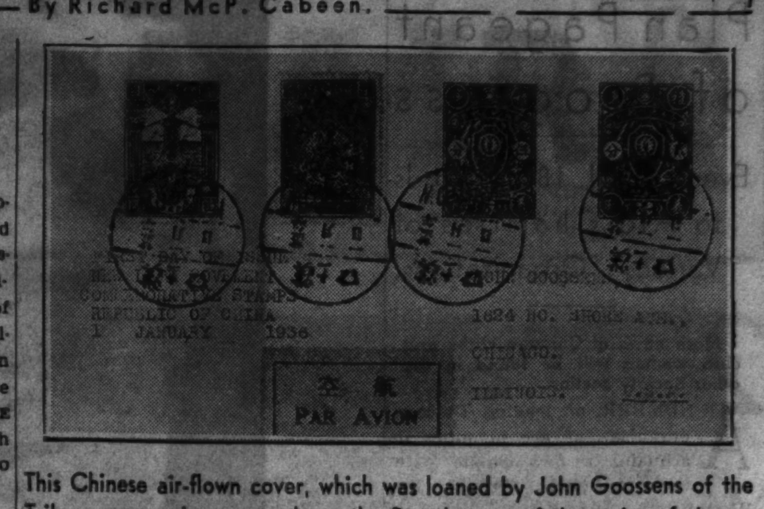
THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen.

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



This Chinese air-flown cover, which was loaned by John Goossens of the Tribune composing room, shows the first day use of the series of stamps issued in China to commemorate the New Life movement. These stamps were issued with the idea of reviving the teachings of the philosopher Confucius in the hope that some thoughts of politeness, righteousness, purity of conduct, and self-consciousness might be incorporated in the western civilization which the new China has adopted.

IN VIEW of the many stories appearing in the philatelic press and in the stamp columns of newspapers concerning the stamp collection of the late King George V. of England, the Stamp Collector welcomes the opportunity to present an authentic account obtained by George J. Scharschug, cable editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, from David Darrah of the London bureau of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S Foreign Service.

Mr. Darrah states that there is considerable speculation in England regarding the disposition of this wonderful collection. It is agreed by experts that the collection of United Kingdom and British Empire stamps—the late king did not collect the stamps of foreign countries—is the finest in the world.

It is housed at Buckingham palace, in a special ground floor room overlooking the great quadrangle and is estimated unofficially to be worth about $2,000,000. The collection is mounted in 600 60-page albums, bound in royal red half morocco covers. While the number of stamps in each volume varies considerably, the average is somewhat between 750 and 1,200, and the total number in the collection is probably between 500,000 and 750,000. Though the collection has never been exhibited to the general public, portions of it have been shown annually to the members of the Royal Philatelic society, of which King George was patron and formerly president.

A few distinguished British and foreign collectors have been privileged to see it in Buckingham palace, but since it would require at least a week to inspect it thoroughly, they have been able to examine only portions of it.

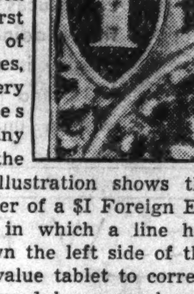
Many of the rarest and most valuable stamps in the collection were filmed in color last year by the postoffice. In this film, "The King's Stamps," which takes 22 minutes to show, Frank Godden, London stamp expert, well known to many American collectors, takes the part of the philatelist. "The King's Stamps" has been shown but once in England, that being the occasion when the present king as prince of Wales opened the King George V. hall at the postoffice last year, and American collectors are promised a rare treat at the International Philatelic exhibition, opening in New York on May 9, for there the film will be shown hourly throughout the period of the show.

It is understood there will be no issue of new postage stamps bearing the portrait of King Edward VIII. for eight or nine months, or possibly a year. It is the practice of the postoffice when considering new stamp issues, to commission several leading artists to submit designs, which are then placed before the king, who signifies his choice. He has the final word upon any design upon which his head is represented.

On the coinage of the United Kingdom the head of the monarch always faces the opposite way to that of his predecessor, but this is not true of stamps. King Edward VIII.'s head on the coinage will look to the right, as did that of King Edward VII., his grandfather.

It is unlikely that any stamps will be issued showing the head of the late King George V., even though the printing had been completed prior to his death. It will be remembered that when King Edward VII. died, a new 6 penny stamp was ready for distribution. This was suppressed except for one copy, which was sent to King George V. through the Charing Cross postoffice to Buckingham palace, and which now reposes in that great collection.

While many examples of shifted transfers and a lesser number of cracked plate varieties have been listed among the stamps which comprise the first issue revenues of the United States, there are very few examples which show any recutting of the plates. The illustration shows the upper left corner of a $1 Foreign Exchange stamp in which a line has been recut down the left side of the shield shaped value tablet to correct a condition caused by a poorly entered design. It is suggested that collectors check their coples and report any duplicates.



Collectors who think that all stamp information is available in book form ready to copy out for the stamp columns may well ponder on the fact that it has never been possible to determine what company printed one of the Red Cross Christmas seals issued in 1913. This seal, known as type IV. of the 1913 issue, differs in some ways from others but may readily be distinguished for it shows a union label and the numeral "8" at the bottom.

This is one of the scarcer seals, but since it was printed in Chicago it should be possible even at this time to find many copies in desk drawers and upon correspondence.

Readers are urged to ask lithographers with whom they are acquainted for information regarding this seal. It is believed that no other Red Cross seal ever was printed in Chicago, and that the first National Tuberculosis seal to be printed here was the 1924 issue, which was printed in three cities.

Airline Operators Pick Routes for Transatlantic Service

American Flying Boats to Make Test Trips This Year

By WAYNE THOMIS

THE United States, through Pan American Airways system, will have a hand in opening the world's most important air route—the line across the north Atlantic ocean linking this continent with Europe—but the honor and profits of the achievement will be shared by English and possibly by German transport operators.

American-English participation in the north Atlantic operations was assured when officials of Pan American and England's Imperial Airways agreed to carry out the service on a fifty-fifty basis. The official seal of approval to this bargain recently was given by the state departments of both countries when reciprocal landing and operating rights were granted both the air lines.

German participation in the north Atlantic line is not yet a certainty, although the reich's Lufft-Hansa, the state-operated air line under which Zeppelin and land and flying boat operations are concentrated, has announced that some experimental flights over the ocean are to be made this summer. Through Maj. Martin Wronsky, head of Lufft-Hansa, efforts now are being made in Washington to gain some such reciprocal contract as was given the English.

All this sudden activity by company officials and diplomats is a prelude to pioneering flights which are to be made by the American-British combine early in July. It is expected that regular mail flights will be made in 1937 and that experience gained through these flights will enable the joint companies to carry passengers in 1938.

Preliminary operation plans call for the inauguration within three years of a biweekly service ranging from 16 to 22 hours between the American continent and some point in either England, Ireland, or Portugal. All the services contemplated in the joint plans will be flown in giant four-motored flying boats [Continued on page eight.]

University Plans Complete History of Chicago Stage

Napier Wilt Leads Work on Drama Records

U. of C. Will Publish Research on Century of Theater Activities.

By Charles Collins.

THE subject of today's discourse is the history of the theater in Chicago—the theater of flesh-and-blood, not the marble halls and shadows of the cinema—during the last century. One hundred years of drama and musical shows, which started when a group of mummers wandering in the wilderness gave a performance in the dining room of the Sauganash hotel in the fall of 1837.

This is a large order. I do not intend to fill it. I have written a portion of that saga day by day, but I lack the patience to deal with it in centennial chunks. My purpose at the moment is to communicate the glad tidings that this history is being written, in all its details. The facts are being collected, arranged, organized and indexed with the sublime patience of professional scholarship; and will be published, perhaps two years hence, in five or six impressive volumes, which will form an encyclopedic dictionary and catalog of the Chicago stage.

Then there should be joy in the land. Then the citizens who get into quarrels over the titles or actors of the plays they saw twenty, thirty and forty years ago, will lie down together like lambs; then all bets can be settled with ease and speed; and then the fellow who owns these books will win kudos among his neighbors and will be pointed out on the streets as a superior being.

Filling a Blank Space in Civic History.

For the records of the Chicago stage during the last century have been little more than an aching void. Nobody has ever tried to keep the archives; nobody has ever published a book on the subject that was worth shelf space. To check on the facts about a play of two or three generations ago always has been a painful and laborious task of digging, even for a specialist like myself. For an amateur, it is a hopeless undertaking.

Every work of reference in the field of the American theater [there are thousands] has used New York as its base line. For example, by a quick dip into "Who's Who in the Theater" [an English publication, by the way], I can learn when any living actor of major rank acted such-and-such a play in New York; but I cannot get the date of his or her Chicago appearance. If the actor has been dead for a generation, a day's work in libraries would be necessary.

The University of Chicago, and particularly Prof. Napier Wilt, is going to change all this. Five years have already been spent on the project, and two more years will be needed to complete the task of research. Perhaps you may remember the Greek grammarian of Robert Browning's poem, who spent a lifetime to win the epitaph, "He settled hoti's business." Prof. Wilt and his associates—Catherine Sturtevant, Ph. D. and many young research workers—intend to settle the business of the Chicago stage and put it into print. A grant from the Rockefeller Foundation has supplied the funds for the long and grinding task.

Five Years of Work on Stage Lore.

A chronological index of dramatic performances is now nearly completed, on 50,000 filing cards. A check list of every play which has had professional performance supplements this mass of material. The information accompanying each title includes: author, origin, type of production, record of all Chicago performances, date and origin of the play if it exists in book form, data regarding the play in manuscript form. When completed, the history will also contain a check-list of authors and actors; the story of every Chicago theater; a check list of newspaper critics and their years of service; and a glossary of critical terms. The opera and vaudeville stage will be included in the survey. The performance of important plays and other topics of general interest, such as the "syndicate" problem of the early part of this century, the little theater movement, city regulations, etc., will also receive ample attention.

Chicago's First Hundred Years of Drama.

The first theater was named the Chicago, and was located on Dearborn street between Lake and South Water [Wacker] streets. The first theater to contribute materially to dramatic interest was the Rice, which opened on June 28, 1847. It was burned down in 1850; a second Rice, on the same site, was opened on Feb. 3, 1851. It was built by John Rice, an actor from Buffalo, who later became mayor of Chicago.

There have been only six years since 1836 that did not see a performance of "Hamlet" in Chicago.

The plays of George Bernard Shaw have been acted here 668 times during a period of forty years.

The sources used by Prof. Wilt are newspaper files, programs, diaries, scrap-books and magazines. However, the Chicago fire cut a great gap into such printed material, and there are still holes in the pattern of history which he must fill. He needs a few more tons of old programs and scrap books.

How to Dispose of Your Old Playbills.

Here, then, is a brilliant opportunity for your good deed of the day or the week. Dig grandpaw's books of old theatrical programs out of the attic or the basement and send them to Prof. Wilt. Do not kid yourself about their value to any one except a professional historian; there is no market for such collector's items. You will not be losing a cent by sending this junk to the University of Chicago, which will be glad to pay postage or express charges.

Citizens, rally around the Muse of History! Sacrifice your old play-going scrapbooks upon the altar of scholarship, for the greater glory of Chicago as an erstwhile theatrical capital!

THE cast of the Lunts' new play "Idiots' Delight" will contain Sydney Greenstreet, George Meader, Barry Thomson, Francis Compton, Jean McIntyre, Edward Raquello, Ernestine De Becker, S. Thomas Gomez, Le Roi Operti, Alan Hewitt, Gilmore Bush, Winston Ross, Tomasso Tittomi, Georgio Monteverde, Stephen Sandes, and six chorus girls. Many of these performers appeared in "The Taming of the Shrew."

Empire Room Ready to Give Spring Revue

Pickpocket Comedian Will Appear in New Revue at Palmer House March 5.

THE Empire room of the Palmer house announces that its new "Springtime Revue" will open next Thursday. Bob Hall, singing rhymster, who makes up his jingles as he goes along, will be prominent on its bill. Manya and Drigo, a dance team new to Chicago, also will be featured. Giovanni, making his first Empire room debut, is an honest pickpocket who tricks the guests at ringside tables. Freddy Dosh, who is also making his American première, is an imitator. The Abbott dancers and Ted Weems' music will complete the bill.

● Phil Levant, orchestra leader in the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel, has arranged for publication of his theme song, "My Book of Dreams." Another song just completed by Levant and Herb Walsh is "Tired of Me," which has been heard on his broadcasts. It also will be published shortly. A weekly amateur song writer contest is conducted in the Walnut room every Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Levant. George Neildoff has returned to the Walnut room after a two weeks' concert tour through Wisconsin and Michigan. He produced a new floor show last Friday.

● The complete cast of the new revue, "Florida Bound" at the Royale Frolics consists of 56 entertainers and 21 musicians. Starring in the revue are Dolly Kay, blues singer, and Nell Kelly, comedienne. The supporting players are: Sid Tomack, musical comedy entertainer; Barbara MacDonald, dancer; Modie and Le Maux, ballroom dancers, and Una Cooper, acrobatic dancer. Music is furnished by Henri Lishon's orchestra and Jimmy Meo's "swing" band.

● Milton Berle, the comedian now starring at the Chez Paree, has been engaged to stay four more weeks at this night club. He has broken all attendance records there. "Low comedy" has previously been taboo at the Chez Paree, which is partial to such entertainers as Harry Richman, Sophie Tucker, Libby Holman, and Helen Morgan. The Biltmorettes, three tumbling and acrobatic girls, are also prominent in the show. They are 16, 18 and 19 years of age.

● Clive Erard, the latest addition to Jack Hylton's revue in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel is an English song writer. He gives monologs which he writes himself, and he also furnishes most of the patter for the Hylton radio skits. "Mendel's Son's Swing Song" is one of the hits produced by Erard.

● Carl Schrieber enters his 14th consecutive week as musical director in the Oriental gardens. He recently completed an engagement of 28 weeks in the Baker hotel, St. Charles, Ill.

● Antonio and Renee de Marco, the ballroom dancers, will remain at the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel through March.

● A feature of the Old Heidelberg Sunday afternoon semi-classical concerts is the violin playing of Armand Buisseret, leader of the Heidelberg ensemble. He is also featured each evening with the Old Heidelberg octet. Herr Louie, the Weasel, and the Original Hungry Five, veteran Chicago entertainers, continue in the rathskeller.

● Bernie Cummins and his orchestra, with a floor show, are getting a warm welcome at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The Harriette Smith ballet girls will be held over for an indefinite stay. New acts for this week are Johnny Rexola and company, and Milton Blakely, lyric tenor.

● Anson Weeks and his orchestra return to the Trianon today after a short tour through the middle west. Returning with Weeks is a new singer, Larry Lamont. At the Aragon Freddy Martin and his orchestra play for the dancers. Dancing at both places is continuous on Sunday from 3 p. m. to 12:30 a. m.

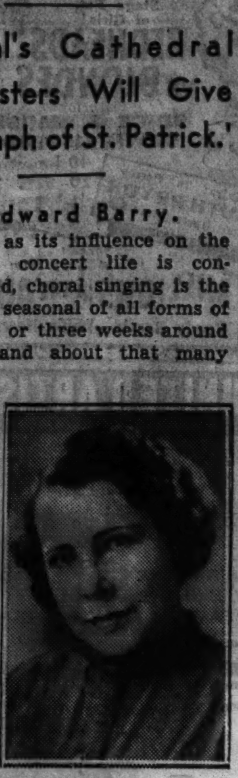
Two Mighty Oratorios Usher in Lenten Choral Season

Apollo Club Sings 'Israel in Egypt'

Cardinal's Cathedral Choristers Will Give 'Triumph of St. Patrick.'

By Edward Barry.

AS far as its influence on the city's concert life is concerned, choral singing is the most seasonal of all forms of music. Two or three weeks around Christmas and about that many months in the spring are the only times of the year when this ancient and glorious art leaves its churchly environment to venture out into the world. The month that begins today marks the opening of the longer of its two seasons.



SYDNIE SMITH COOLEY.

Tuesday of this week and Monday of next are important dates on the choral calendar. The admirable Apollo Musical club reaches another climax in its long history day after tomorrow when it assembles in force on the stage of Orchestra hall for what is believed to be the first complete Chicago performance of Handel's monumental "Israel in Egypt." Another oratorio, never before heard here, is due for presentation six days later. "The Triumph of St. Patrick," Pietro Yon's setting of the story of the man who drove sin and snakes out of Ireland forever, enlists the services that night of the Cardinal's Cathedral choristers. A variety of soloists, some of them well known, will lend added interest to both performances.

"Israel in Egypt" One of First of Handel Oratorios.

"Israel in Egypt" was written in 1738 or 1739, one of the first of the long series of great oratorios that gave Handel a preëminence in this type of music which has never been challenged. A remarkably interesting point about the man is the fact that the works on which his immortality rests are the product of his later years. The statement has often been made that the composer would be all but forgotten now if he had died at the age of fifty. Whether this is literally true or not, it is certain that the "Water Music" and bits from his Italian operas would have secured for him only the kind of present day rating that such men as Lully and Rameau enjoy.

"Israel in Egypt" is the story of the escape from the taskmasters of the Pharaohs, of the plagues that preceded the successful issue of Moses' plans, of the exciting passage of the Red sea. The whole second part of the oratorio is a song of jubilation and praise.

Text Drawn Mostly from Poetry of "Exodus."

The text is drawn mostly from the sturdy poetry of "Exodus," although a few excerpts from the "Psalms" that concern themselves with the same early period in the history of Israel are scattered through the first section.

The plain spoken candor and strength of the Old Testament, with its vigorous simplicity and the leavening beauty of its imagery and metaphor, gave the great composer a libretto in which he delighted. The power and the works of Jehovah, the protection he extended to his people and the calamities he visited upon their enemies, are the subjects of the entire robust oratorio.

A glance at the score confirms the claim that "Israel in Egypt" is preeminently a work for chorus. Although soloists are used occasionally for brief narrative passages, the choral writing is incomparably the more important. Even the remarbakle duo for baritone and bass, "The Lord Is a Man of War," will be given to these two divisions of the chorus Tuesday night instead of to the solo voices which the composer intended.

Handel Experiments Boldly with Descriptive Music.

The style is noble and dignified, with the grandeur of complex polyphony and the hugeness of monophonic fortissimo used in much the same manner as in the more familiar choruses of "The Messiah." Pregnant recitative precedes great cascades of tone, again in the fashion of the composer's best known work.

An interesting detail in "Israel" is Handel's willingness to experiment with descriptive music. The plague of flies visited upon the unhappy Egyptians for their wrongheadedness finds the orchestra buzzing along in thirty-second note figures without interfering with the flow of the vocal parts of the score. There are stern and stinging pellets in the instruments a little later when the chorus describes the inconceivable tempest of hail mixed with fire. The march between the divided mountains of water in the Red sea is begun to the accompaniment of an exact and forceful four-four rhythm which is soon lost in intricate counterpoint. The roll of this same sea over the eternally thwarted Egyptians is depicted in the orchestra by a surging and irresistible triplet figure.

Apollo Club Has Great Freedom in Artistic Efforts.

The Apollo Musical club is about sixty-five years old, and has been a factor of consequence in the city's life since the remote days that followed the great fire. The mantle of a long line of distinguished directors has fallen on Edgar Nelson, a man of intelligence and musicianship who has been careful to retain the luster of the club's tradition. It is not a money making organization, but a band of devoted and hard working singers who are members because they like to be. Since the financial aspect is of so little importance, the chorus is free to produce works of artistic moment without undue worry about the immediacy and enthusiasm of public response.

Two of the soloists for the performance, Betty Pietsch and Glen Bennett, soprano and tenor respectively, won the right to appear with the organization in this capacity through a contest sponsored last year by the Society of American Musicians. The other soloists are Hilda Ohlin, soprano, and Sydnie Smith Cooley, contralto. Miss Ohlin, you may remember, sang one of the maidens in the opera company's two performances of "La Fiamma" last season. A portion of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and Robert Birch, organist, will provide the instrumental backgrounds Tuesday.

Yon Also Composer of "Gesu Bambino."

Pietro Yon, the composer of "The Triumph of St. Patrick" is the Italian organist who wrote the familiar "Gesu Bambino" many years ago. He is now connected with St. Patrick's cathedral in New York. The Metropolitan Opera company sang his oratorio in that church on the occasion of its first performance.

The Cardinal's Cathedral choristers, who are to present the same work in Orchestra hall here on March 9, consist of about two hundred boys of the Quigley Preparatory seminary. Each Sunday they sing the noon mass at Holy Name cathedral. At their head is the Rev. Dr. Edwin C. Hoover, whose knowledge of liturgical music led to his appointment as diocesan director of music by Cardinal Mundelein. He will conduct the oratorio a week from tomorrow, a day which marks the first public concert appearance of the choristers in his group. There will be a special presentation of the work next Saturday morning for the cloistered nuns of the archdiocese.

Eleanor LaMance, one of the most reliable members of the Chicago City Opera company, and Sidney Raynor, a Tannhäuser of last season and a Pinkerton of the recent "Butterfly," head a list of soloists that includes John Patrick, Mary Grusczynski, Leonard Huber, Paul La Monica, and Robert Marco. Forty-five members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will assist.

The concert is being jointly sponsored by Holy Name cathedral and Old St. Patrick's on the near west side. The latter has long been regarded as a sort of headquarters by many of the Irish people of Chicago. The Orchestra hall performance of "The Triumph of St. Patrick" will be the most important event in the celebrations leading up to the saint's festal day which falls on March 17.

OPERA SINGER TURNS TO ORATORIO

Eleanor La Mance of the Chicago City Opera company, who takes one of the solo parts in Pietro Yon's "The Triumph of Saint Patrick." The work is scheduled for its first Chicago performance March 9 in Orchestra hall, when the Cardinal's Cathedral choristers, under the direction of the Rev. Dr. Edwin V. Hoover, will make their initial bow before concert audiences of Chicago.

Templeton Gives Recital Here Today

Young Englishman Plays Both Standard Works and Own Compositions.

Alec Templeton, the young English pianist, blind from birth, whom Jack Hylton brought to America last fall, is scheduled for a recital in Orchestra hall this afternoon. The first half of the program is devoted to standard works and the second to his own compositions. There will probably be improvisations and examples of the musical sleight-of-hand in which he is so skilled at the end of the afternoon.

ALEC TEMPLETON.

Templeton is one of the most prodigious musical talents ever seen in Chicago. The art has become a natural medium for him, and his mind works along lines entirely mysterious to the layman.

Six ballets new to America are coming up for performance this afternoon when Trudi Schoop makes her fifth appearance at the Studebaker theater. The program calls for "Fridolin" as well. The entire seven will be repeated this evening.

The comic ballet has played in about forty cities on this first American tour, but its two staple items, "Want Ads" and "Fridolin," have been the only things shown. Even New York, which saw sixteen performances by the troupe, was confined to the same ballets.

The most important of today's premières is "Trudi in Business"; others that seem to have great possibilities under Miss Schoop's deft handling are "Elocution," "Trafic Cop," and "Sport." The hilarious episode of the gymnasts in "Fridolin" promises well for this last ballet.

Instead of the Orpheus Male Glee club originally scheduled, the Temple Emanuel sisterhood is using an ensemble from the Woman's Symphony orchestra to wind up its concert series in Temple Emanuel tonight. A program of familiar music starts with the Mottl transcription of some Gretry dances and ends with Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Bumble Bee" and "Buffoons."

A piano recital by Esther Arneson in Kimball hall Wednesday night features three Godowsky transcriptions of the music of olden times, a group of Chopin études, and Dohnanyi's rousing version of the "Naila" waltzes.

Efrem Zimbalist, still among the world's first fiddlers despite the number who have risen to fame since he first began to concertize, appears with the Chicago Symphony orchestra this coming Thursday evening and Friday afternoon in the rôles of soloist, composer, and conductor. For his "American Rhapsody," never before heard in Chicago, Dr. Stock will surrender his baton to the violinist. The solo vehicle is the Glazounow concerto in A Minor.

Dr. Stock will revive the first symphony of Mahler after a lapse of twenty-one years and include it on these same two programs. The most promising popular concert of the year is due Saturday, with the Schubert C Major symphony, five of the Brahms Hungarian dances, an excerpt from "The Fire Bird" and the "Secret of Suzanne" overture.

Charles Wakefield Cadman, distinguished American composer, is the pianist and guest of honor at a concert to be given at Mandel hall [University of Chicago] next Sunday afternoon by several Hyde Park civic groups.

The stock of the humble guitar rose a thousand points one day back in 1928 when Andres Segovia first landed on these shores. The devilishly skilful Spaniard proved that it is no twangy tool of the sorrowful weaver of excessively romantic spells but an eloquent solo instrument in its own right. He exhibits his magic next Sunday in the little Civic theater.

So alone is Segovia in his novel niche that Spanish composers of the importance of Turina and De Falla create music especially for him. His program will feature also the smaller works of the standard composers in his own transcriptions.

Among the important events of the spring months will be performances in English of Weinberger's "Schwanda" at Mandel hall. The first presentation is scheduled for April 20, with three more on the next three days. The English translation is the work of Libushka Bartusek, a Czech woman living in Chicago. It has never before been sung in English, although the opera ranks with the most popular in the European répertoire. There have been more than six hundred performances in its eight years of life.

"God of Vengeance."

Sholom Asche's "The God of Vengeance" will be staged in the People's playhouse, 3500 Douglas boulevard, next Saturday evening, for seven performances. This will be the first Chicago presentation of the drama in English. The play was first produced by Max Reinhardt in 1910 and has been translated into nine languages.

New 'Vanities' Is Stage Show at the Chicago

Ralph Bellamy, making his first "in person" appearance in Chicago since the screen stole him away from the stage, introduces 40 entertainers of the "Laugh It Off" revue to Palace theater audiences this week. Others in the cast are comedian Benny Ross and his assistant Maxine Stone, the singer Thelma Leeds, the Three Nonchalants, Bobby May, Petch, and Deauville, and the Bebe Barri dancing girls.

The State-Lake theater offers the "Radio City Follies," as its stage show this week. It is a revue with a large company of singers and dancers. Two of the headline items are the Roxy Singing Ensemble, and the Roxyettes, a dancing chorus. This is the first time that these two organizations have gone on tour. The principals are Sully and Thomas, comedians; Hayes, Haig, and Howe; Nick Nickolas, Dorothy Holbrook and Helen Olsen, ballerinas; Jack Bickle, acrobatic dancer, and De Pace, mandolinist.

Easter Revue

"AT HOME ABROAD," the revue with Beatrice Lillie, Ethel Waters, and Mitzi Mayfair as stars, will conclude its New York run on March 7, and open in Philadelphia at the Forrest theater on Monday, March 9. It is headed for Chicago to begin an engagement at the Grand Opera house on Easter Sunday night, April 12.

"At Home Abroad" opened at the Winter Garden, New York, on Sept. 19, and when it concludes its engagement it will have totaled 198 performances.

Chaplin Denies 'Purpose' in Newest Film

"Modern Times" Is Not Highbrow Art, Just Spontaneous Fun.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—"If people just wouldn't take things so seriously!" said Charles Chaplin, following the local opening of his new film, "Modern Times."

"Critics treat me as if I were trying to produce highbrow art. I don't think I'm highbrow at all. They'll ruin me if they keep that up."

He stopped for a chuckle and the blue eyes twinkled.

"I think people in pictures take things too seriously. They get all worked up over their work, their ideas, and themselves. At the risk of seeming to say something foolish I say I think all this seriousness in making films is wrong. I know that it is a business where it costs a million dollars to turn around—that you can lose a fortune in a few months—the more's the pity, for I think all this ponderousness takes the spontaneity out of films.

Own Youth Got Into Early Films.

"Making pictures used to be so much fun! We used to whack 'em out, two in a week. We'd go to a park with a camera man, a comedy policeman, and a nursemaid, and run around all day, perhaps two days, and come home with a new picture. We just did silly things, and it was such fun! People seemed to like our pictures in those days. I loved to work like that. Some of our own youth and exuberance got into the celluloid, I guess."

Charley sighed reminiscently.

"Did you intend to portray yourself as Man-the-Victim-of-the-Machine in your current comedy, as has been said?" we asked Charley.

"No, indeed—I haven't such a purpose at all. If people see that in my film they're putting the idea in themselves. I was simply trying to present some amusing situations for my screen character to do his clowning in. That feeding machine idea came to me because a crank once offered me the chance to finance some contraption of the sort. The idea struck me as funny and I used it that way.

"Don't you think I did well putting myself through all those cogwheels?

Charlie Thinks He's Pretty Limber for 46.

"What do you think of my roller skating technique? Pretty limber for a man of 46, am I not? I wonder a little at it myself. You know, I should be getting a bit brittle at my age"—which seems the funniest thing of all; for, in spite of his white hair, which is striking looking, Charley has all the zest and sparkle of a mischievous small boy.

When complimented on his French gibberish song Charley grinned and said: "Imagine my making my sound debut as a singer! I can't sing at all—if you need to be told that after seeing the film—but I enjoyed doing that song number."

Somebody changed the subject to serious talk and reminded Charley that he had once said that Shakespearean characters are symbols. "You said that King Lear is Hamlet grown old, and that Falstaff is Hamlet in a prank mood."

"Did I say that? That was darned clever of me, wasn't it? Say it again; I think that's rather good, though I don't remember saying it at all. I must remember that," said Charley, much amused at himself.

Public Finds No Fault with Chaplin Technique.

In spite of the divided opinions of critics on the merits of Charley's first film effort in five years, report has it that United Artists corporation, which releases Charley's films, after viewing the movie paid him the largest price ever paid for a negative—and New York reports a huge box office in the first two weeks of its run there.

While critics carp about his assertedly radical propaganda and say that Chaplin ought to learn new camera technique and that silent titles jar—and all the rest of the things that can be said—there evidently is a big public that likes to relax and see the pranks of the funny little man with the mustache, the bowler hat, the baggy trousers, and the flapping footgear.

Chaplin's silent film comes at a time when producers have begun to talk about the importance of re-emphasizing pantomime on the screen and the desirability of cutting the interminable dialog that has become a tiresome feature of many dramas enacted before the camera.

While Chaplin is a complete rebel and an extremist in clinging to the outmoded form he uses for his screen vehicle, he can still teach 'em a few tricks when it comes to entertainment values. One wonders how many film stars could remain off the screen for five years and produce a hit like "Modern Times."

American Debut.

Hilde Albers, who has acted leading rôles in the national theater in Munich and in the municipal theaters in Cologne, Madgeburg, and Dortmund, Germany, is making her American debut as a court lady with Katharine Cornell in Shaw's "Saint Joan." One of her most successful rôles in Germany was Margaret in "Faust."

FILM ACTOR IN VAUDEVILLE

Ralph Bellamy, well known motion picture actor, returns to the footlights as star of the "Laugh It Off" revue, now at the Palace theater. This is his first "in person" appearance since the films took him away from the living drama. [William A. Fraker Photo]

February Has Grand Pickings for Film Fans

Each of Month's Six Best Is a Cinema Experience Not to Be Missed.

FEBRUARY'S SIX BEST MOVIES.

THE GHOST GOES WEST
AH, WILDERNESS — KIND LADY
THE NEW GULLIVER — MODERN TIMES
TALE OF TWO CITIES

Best Performances in Honorable Mention Films: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, Arline Judge, Gregory Ratoff, "King of Burlesque"; Cesar Romero, Bruce Cabot, Edward Brophy, Warren Hymer, "Show 'Em No Mercy"; Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, "Next Time We Love"; Cicely Courtneidge, Frank Morgan "The Perfect Gentleman"; Gene Raymond, "Seven Keys to Baldpate"; Freddy Bartholomew, "Professional Soldier"; James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Stuart Erwin, "Ceiling Zero"; Preston Foster, "Muss 'Em Up"; Conrad Veidt, Frank Collier, Rene Ray, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back."

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

February may have been a little month—but O, my, so far as its picture output was concerned! GRAND pickings!

"THE GHOST GOES WEST," for instance! Said the original review: "An amusing affair, gemmed with droll situations . . . suave and subtle satire. . . . Robert Donat doubles deftly as Donald and Ghost Murdoch. . . . Rene Clair's direction of the first water. The production [an English one] has been effectively staged and the dialog is bright. . . ."

"Kind Lady" Scares Its Audience to Death.

"KIND LADY" was a mystery drama that just scared the tar out of you. Aline MacMahon in the rôle of a philanthropic spinster who falls into the hands of desperate characters—"does a splendid piece of work. . . . Basil Rathbone plays with a still, cobralike touch. . . . Suspense maintained to an unusual degree . . . 'different' and interesting."

"TALE OF TWO CITIES." "An EXPERIENCE not to be missed. . . . One of the most compelling combinations of sweeping dramatic action, historical verity, spectacle and moving human incident that has ever been assembled. . . ."

"AH, WILDERNESS"—adapted from Eugene O'Neill's delightful stage success—"more satisfactory than the play because of the camera's recording of rich incident which the stage production necessarily left to the imagination. . . . You'll be passing up a thoroughly good time if you give "Ah, Wilderness" the go-by. . . ."

"New Gulliver" Greatest Thing Since "Mickey Mouse."

"THE NEW GULLIVER." "As novel and remarkable in its way as were the advent of sound and Walt Disney's 'Mickey Mouse' to the movies . . . story modern conception of 'Gulliver's Travels.' Enacted by 3,000 puppets and one human . . . figurettes are of clay, metal, rubber, and cloth, which makes them three dimensional and are not attached to strings as are marionettes. Facial expressions are interpreted by masks . . . joints work . . . film should be regarded by the discriminating moviegoer in the light of a new—and fascinating—adventure. . . ."

BitsaBOUTem.

After an absence from the screen for more than a year, LILA LEE will play a featured rôle supporting WILLIAM POWELL in "One to Two," a romantic mystery drama. Miss Lee, favorite of the "silents," did her last Hollywood film work in 1934. Since that time she and PATSY RUTH MILLER, another star of the "silent" screen, have opened up an exclusive dress shop in Hollywood. . . . It looks as though all the blondes in Hollywood are going brunette since JEAN HARLOW went off the blonde standard several months ago. The latest one out there to become a "brownette" is ANN SOTHERN—and according to reports it is most becoming. Miss Sothern believes that her own golden-brown hair expresses her personality much more than the blonde locks with which her fans are familiar.

RICHARD DIX still has the "set" orchestra consisting of violin and miniature organ which he hired more than ten years ago. They play for him between scenes. . . . ANN HARDING recently purchased an airplane and is one of Hollywood's most ardent students of aviation. . . . BING CROSBY, who spends most of his leisure time at the race track and, incidentally, who knows all there is to know about horses, says his fan mail has doubled since the start of the racing season at Santa Anita—half of the letters asking for betting tips. . . . SAM JAFFE, stage star, who played the rôle of Kringelein in the legitimate stage production of "Grand Hotel," has gone to Hollywood to appear in an important rôle with Marlene Dietrich in "I Love a Soldier." . . . CLARK GABLE and JOAN CRAWFORD are to be co-starred in M-G-M's "A Lady Comes to Town." Clarence Brown, who just finished "Wife vs. Secretary" and "Ah, Wilderness," will do the directing. . . .

See you tomorrow!

Boss of Minneapolis

Crime Syndicate Controled by Friend of Floyd Olson

Hoodlums Ready to Show Hand With Acquittal of Kid Cann

By WAYNE THOMIS.

INVESTIGATION of Minneapolis murders and exposures of its criminal-political alliances have accomplished little or nothing toward the destruction of the protected crime syndicate which controls gambling, liquor, and vice in that city.

The "heat" from the murder of Walter W. Liggett, the editor of a weekly newspaper who attacked political fixers and others allied with the underworld, clamped the lid on Minneapolis for a week after he was shot to death Dec. 9. Then the bolder spirits opened their places again.

During the recent trial of Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld, gunman and enforcer for the syndicate, who was indicted for the murder of Liggett, the pressure gradually diminished. With Blumenfeld's acquittal by a jury Feb. 18 the "heat" disappeared completely. The town has reopened, although some caution still is noticed by visitors to betting parlors or the larger gambling houses.

The "chief" of the syndicate now is "Big Ed" Morgan. Nearly deaf and with poor eyesight, he still cracks the whip over his lieutenants who formerly were his equals on the directing board of the organization. Morgan has become the czar of the underworld because he controls the political fix.

Less than an hour after the freeing of Blumenfeld, Morgan called a meeting in one of the larger Minneapolis hotels. In his tenth floor suite Morgan presided at the gathering.

"Big Ed," speaking in the loud voice of a man whose hearing is poor, stormed at his men, saying:

"Well, we beat this rap. It wasn't too tough. I'll show you that we'll beat all the raps. It'll be just as I told you mugs, we can take care of everything."

Morgan has had a long history in Minneapolis. During the period he played many rôles, and he has been known as a close friend of Floyd B. Olson, now governor of the state.

He first gained prominence and some power through his publication of the notorious Twin Cities Reporter. That newspaper was operated by Morgan merely for the opportunity for blackmail it offered. It was while he published the paper devoted to scandal involving the more prominent Twin Cities families that Morgan became known as one of the most expert confidence men and blackmailers in the United States.

On Nov. 29, 1920, Morgan was indicted by the Hennepin county grand jury on a charge of extortion. He had demanded money from a business man who trapped him neatly and took the evidence to the grand jury foreman. The case was dismissed on Aug. 12, 1921, with the consent of Floyd Olson, who at that time had been county attorney for less than a year.

Morgan continued to operate with some financial success until Aug. 28, 1923, when he was charged with publishing obscene advertising in his paper. This charge was stricken off the records on Dec. 16, 1925.

The same year Morgan printed an untrue and obscene article about the Rev. K. B. Birkeland, who had been kidnaped and murdered, as was later proved in the courts, by gangsters who sought to profit from his absence from certain important court hearings in which they were involved.

Following the finding of the body, Morgan informed the Birkeland family they could prevent publication of the story by paying him a sum of money. The family refused and the story was printed on page one of the newspaper.

Minnesota law provides that there is no defense for defaming a dead man. This was enacted on the theory that, even though true, such publications constituted criminal libel because the dead man was unable to defend himself. This particular statute also makes it mandatory upon authorities to prosecute in instances where such libels are printed.

Elmer A. Benson whose appointment to the U. S. senate by Gov. Olson aroused political dissension.

Despite these facts, Floyd Olson refused to take action against Morgan when the Birkeland family demanded that he be prosecuted. Olson prevented members of the Birkeland family from appearing before the Hennepin county grand jury and, as was shown in earlier stories in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE under the title of "Murder in Minneapolis," zealously protected the actual slayers of the elderly clergyman.

In 1927 Olson invoked the infamous Minnesota gag law in an attempt to silence the Saturday Press, which had begun to expose in news stories the misconduct of Olson and other county officials. Olson was then Hennepin county attorney.

This law, held unconstitutional when carried to the United States Supreme court by the Association of Newspaper Publishers and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, allowed a judge, without a jury, to declare a newspaper a nuisance if it printed lewd or obscene or defamatory articles about public officials or other persons.

When he obtained an injunction against the Saturday Press Olson also obtained a similar ruling against the Twin Cities Reporter. He was forced to do this, according to observers, because the reputation of the Twin Cities Reporter was so bad citizens demanded its suppression.

When he appeared in court against Morgan's newspaper, Olson swore on his own complaint that nine consecutive, specified, weekly issues of the Twin Cities Reporter were "lewd, lascivious, and obscene."

The Minnesota general statutes, section 10187, declare it is a gross misdemeanor to publish lewd, lascivious and obscene matter. This fact was called to Olson's attention, but he refused to prosecute Morgan, although he himself had made the charges in the gag case.

In 1930, at a time when the statute of limitations would soon have outlawed legal action against Morgan in this matter, a citizen obtained a warant for Morgan's arrest on the misdemeanor.

When Morgan was bound over to the District court, Olson refused to place the case on the trial calendar. The case remained on the books until January, 1931, when, along with 200 others, it was wiped off the books by a wholesale dismissal of indictments just before Olson took office as governor.

With the closing of his newspaper Morgan obtained the concession to place slot machines throughout Minneapolis. At one time more than 700 of these machines were in operation.

Within two years he was the chief of the gambling division for the entire syndicate, controling the roulette, card, and dice games for all of Hennepin and Ramsey counties. Every gambling house in the vicinity of the Twin Cities operated on the "oke" of Morgan.

His power increased as the necessity for a perfect "fix" became greater. One year ago a new gang of gunmen, gamblers, and hoodlums moved into Minneapolis and announced they would take over all operations. These men were fought vigorously by Morgan, and ultimately routed, according to government agents who were familiar with the affair. Since that time Morgan's power in the underworld has not been disputed either by rival gangs or the constituted authorities.

The recent acquittal of Kid Cann on a charge of murdering Walter Liggett has recalled to Minneapolis citizens a story printed in one of the last issues of Liggett's Mid-West American charging that Gov. Olson offered to sell for $50,000 an appointment to the Minnesota Supreme court.

Circulation of this story led to the filing of a libel suit in Minneapolis against the state Minnesota Farmer-Labor party. In the records of the suit, which has not yet come to trial, are three affidavits which were the basis of Liggett's story.

The first of these was given by Einar Hilsen, former Farmer-Laborite, whose home is at 2710 South 14th avenue, Minneapolis. Hilsen came to the United States as representative of the Norwegian crown to attend the 1914 centennial in celebration of Norwegian national freedom in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Finding conditions to his liking he remained, became a citizen, and entered politics. He joined the Nonpartisan league movement. For ten years he was an organizer, lecturer, and campaign speaker for the league. Then, a short time after the league was dissolved and the remnants in Minnesota were pulled together by Olson into the Farmer-Labor party, he stepped out.

⁂

Hilsen remained friendly with many Farmer-Laborites, however. Among these friends was Charles Louis De Reu of Marshall, Minn. De Reu, an attorney, war veteran, and active member of the dominant state party, was a Municipal judge in his city from 1921 through 1925, and afterward was city attorney of Marshall.

In 1934 De Reu reached the ear of Gov. Olson and sought party support in his campaign for election to the state Supreme bench. Support was not forthcoming but, according to De Reu's statements to friends, Olson indicated he might consider favorably the appointment of De Reu to fill any vacancy which might occur in the court.

In the spring of that year such a vacancy did occur. De Reu was not, however, appointed. He was angered by this fact when he visited the home of Hilsen one evening and poured out his story before the Hilsen family. That visit, according to affidavits signed by Einar Hilsen and his wife, Olga, and their son, Harold, was in April.

The affidavit, sworn to by Einar Hilsen on Aug. 8, 1934, stated in substance that De Reu, in conversation, had declared he had been offered the appointment to the Supreme court, but that Olson demanded a contribution of $50,000 to his private campaign fund.

The affidavit of a friend declared Charles L. De Reu (above) stated that Governor Olson demanded $50,000 to appoint him (De Reu) to the state Supreme bench.

In the affidavit Hilsen reported De Reu also said that Olson told him another man, then a member of the Minnesota Supreme court, had paid $100,000 for his post, and that a second member of the court had contributed $60,000 to the party "kitty" for his judgeship. Hilsen swore that De Reu said he refused the offer and gave this refusal as the explanation for his failure to receive the appointment.

Mrs. Hilsen's sworn statement was that De Reu had made the same allegations in her presence. Harold Hilsen's affidavit corroborated those of his father and mother.

Liggett printed facsimilies of the affidavits as well as his news story of Hilsen's charges. Olson did not accept Ligget's challenge to indict him for criminal libel if the story was untrue, but Olson's newspaper, the Farmer-Labor Leader, printed a front page article attacking the veracity of Hilsen and branding his statement as untrue.

Liggett's story was printed during the summer of 1935. At that time Hilsen was in Europe on business and he did not see the Farmer-Labor Leader's reply. Representatives of Hilsen, who is well known and liked throughout the state, immediately filed a libel action against the paper on his behalf.

This libel suit has never been brought to trial, being held on call pending the return of Hilsen from Europe. Hilsen had planned to return in November, 1935, but suffered a stroke while in Norway and still is convalescing.

Olson never was questioned about De Reu's charges by the larger newspapers of the Twin Cities, which ignored the matter entirely in their news columns. Olson's only public denial of the story was made through the Farmer-Labor Leader.

⁂

The newspapers of Minneapolis have not, however, ignored entirely the series of stories outside publications have printed about conditions there. At first the Minneapolis Journal, Star, and Tribune relied on sarcasm in editorials, advising outsiders who professed to be shocked at the conditions in the Twin Cities to clean up their own communities.

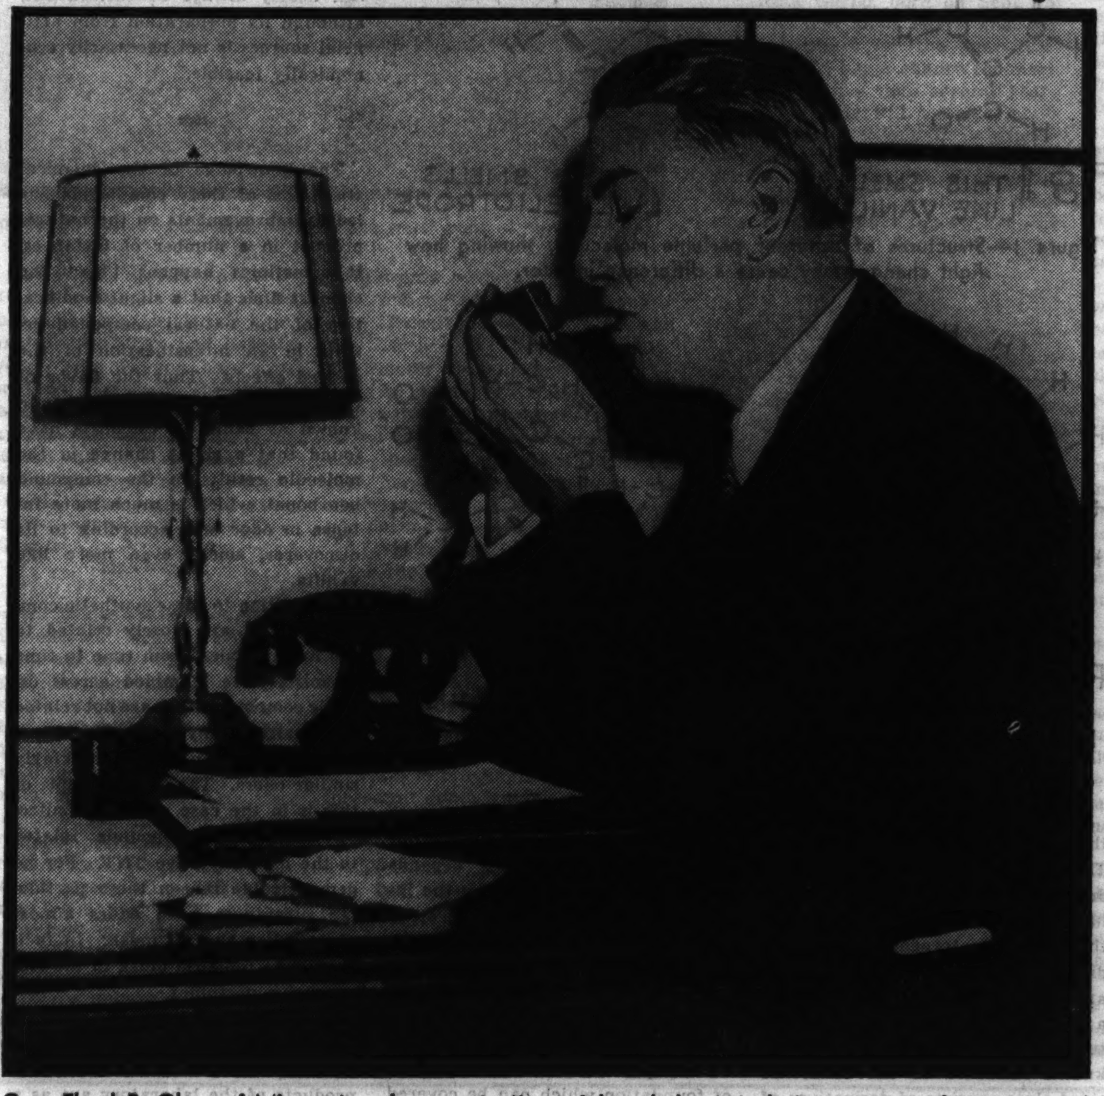
Then the papers began a systematic inquiry to discover the attitude of Minneapolis citizens toward the exposure of the criminal-political situation. Questionnaires were mailed to residents picked at random from the city directory.

To the astonishment of the local publishers the Minneapolis residents, by a large majority, said: "It's time something was done about these conditions. If local papers are afraid to move, then it is splendid that outside publications have the courage and initiative to call attention to our situation."

With this discovery came an immediate flip-flop in the editorial policy of the Minneapolis papers. They now are demanding action to bring about a change in crime conditions there.

Attempts by private citizens to remove Floyd Olson from public office have been made since 1927, when a petition was presented to Gov. Theodore Christianson. This petition was withdrawn soon afterward. In 1928 a group of citizens charged Olson with malfeasances and misfeasances in office and demanded his removal. The governor refused to act.

In 1934 a similar group of citizens began an effort to remove Olson under the corrupt practices act of the Minnesota general statutes. This case now is in the hands of the state Supreme court, and many Minneapolis lawyers say it is the strongest move of its kind made up to this time.



Gov. Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, whose protection of branded criminals is a matter of court record.

The corrupt practices act provides, among other items, that all candidates for public office must declare their relationship, whether partner, stockholder, subscriber, or purchaser of advertising, to any newspaper in which they receive support. It also provides that candidates must report all campaign income and expenditures. Failure to comply with these regulations is punishable by removal from office under a final paragraph of the act.

Olson was attacked on both these points. The first charge against him was that although he reported that his 1934 campaign for governor cost him only $80 over and above the filing fee of $50, actually he spent several hundred thousand dollars.

The ouster party, represented in court by Attorney Mart Monaghan, produced witnesses to show that Olson obtained 2,000 inches of advertising in the Farmer-Labor Leader alone during the campaign. This advertising was valued at $2.75 per column inch, the regular rate, they were able to show.

Furthermore, Olson spoke over radio station WCCO in Minneapolis and several times spoke over a state-wide hookup, including stations from Duluth, Fargo, and Yankton, as well as from St. Paul. In all, this time on the radio was valued at many thousands of dollars, but for the sake of brevity, it was agreed that it was worth at least $1,000.

Frank W. Murphy, attorney for Olson, argued recently during an oral hearing before the state Supreme court that his client did not pay for any of the radio time. The lawyer said the Olson All-Party Volunteer committee, friends of the governor, purchased the time for him. Attorney Monaghan replied that the law specifically states that "all things received and used by the candidate must be accounted for."

The second point at issue involves the relationship of Olson to the Farmer-Labor Leader. Upon that point the governor had been silent in his campaign report.

As an active member of the Farmer-Labor association, which is the owner and operator of the Farmer-Labor Leader, Olson is, under Minnesota law, a partner in the operation of the paper.

In answer to the charge brought by Monaghan, Murphy replied that the old Farmer-Labor federation, a corporation, was the original owner of the Farmer-Labor Leader. He said that Olson believed that in 1925 when the federation changed its name to the Farmer-Labor association, that it had been re-incorporated.

⁂

Records introduced in the case show that the Farmer-Labor federation as a corporation became extinct in 1925. The Farmer-Labor association was never incorporated. The records show also that Olson was a member of the committee which formed the association.

Attorney Monaghan informed the court that the Farmer-Labor federation, disbanded in 1925, could never have owned the Farmer-Labor Leader because the publication had not existed prior to 1930.

In addition to the hammering from without his party, Gov. Olson has roused dissention within by political tactics which preceded the appointment of Elmer A. Benson to serve out the unexpired term of the late United States Senator Thomas D. Schall, who died from injuries suffered when an automobile struck him in Washington.

Benson is 40 years old. He has been in politics only two years. He is a war veteran and was president of the Farmers and Merchant's bank of Appleton, Minn., until it closed its doors. In 1933, through Gov. Olson, he obtained an appointment as state securities commissioner.

There were a number of "wheel-horse" Farmer-Laborites who wanted Schall's seat in the senate. None of these men found favor with Olson, who proceeded to win the approval of Benson's appointment from a majority of the state central executive committee of the Farmer-Labor party. There are 21 members on this committee, which is the equivalent of the state central committees of Republican or Democratic party machines.

Those "in the know" say that Attorney Poyer, now head of the legal department for the state highway department and investigator for Olson when the governor was Hennepin county attorney, went about his task in a very amusing fashion.

His work was done by telephone. He completed the canvass of the entire group within a short time—an hour or so. To each member of the commission he said:

"Hello. Say, I've got 20 members of the executive committee who have approved Gov. Olson's appointment of Elmer Benson to the United States senate. Can I get your approval to make it unanimous?"

The committeeman, believing that the odds were 20 to 1 against him, replied: "Yes, sure. Count me in for Benson."

When this conversation had been repeated 21 times, Poyer had the committee's approval. Later, however, an exchange of stories by the committeemen revealed Poyer's tactics.

An instance in which Olson, while Hennepin county attorney, perjured himself in the courts, came to light recently when investigators examined the records in the cases of Philip Moses and "Big Mose" Barnett, both of whom were indicted for assault and conspiracy in restraint of trade in 1928.

The indictments grew out of the racketeering of the Twin Cities Cleaners' and Dyers' association. Moses, a lawyer, was secretary and director. Barnett was muscle man and enforcer. Moses pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge and was fined $1,000. While he was out on bond in the assault case, Olson appeared before the court and announced that Moses was no longer in the custody of any court and asked that his citizenship rights be restored. This was done on May 28, 1928. Not until 1931 was the assault case dismissed upon petition of Olson. Meanwhile, Moses technically had been in custody of the court.

Barnett was a great friend of Frank Brunskill, then chief of police and now captain of police in charge of the North side station in Minneapolis. The two men corresponded frequently and Barnett appeared often at Brunskill's office.

When the indictments were returned Barnett was informed in time to flee from Minneapolis. It was not until 1933 that he returned and stood trial, receiving a 10 year sentence in the penitentiary.

Sweet Odors Come from Coal Tar

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

INTERNATIONAL trade did not concern itself in its infancy with such prosaic materials as hides, scrap iron, or petroleum. Instead the ships and caravans carried cargoes of fragrant commodities—frankincense, myrrh, and sandalwood. The desire for spices no less than that for gold inspired Europe to begin its conquest of the world 400 years ago.

Perfumes and flavors present a unique economic picture. While the usual effect of scientific advances has been to cheapen luxuries until people come to regard them as necessities, in these two classes we have former necessities which, although cheaper, have become luxuries.

For flavors and perfumes, desirable as they may seem in decorating our foods, drinks, clothes, and persons, are not absolutely essential to a comfortable existence. But it was otherwise during the middle ages. Soap was expensive in those days, and our medieval ancestors exhibited a deplorable disinclination to use it. Consequently the liberal use of perfumes was necessary for the smooth functioning of human society.

In addition to the soap shortage, artificial refrigeration was unknown. Therefore it was necessary to use spices to cover up the undesirable flavors which occasionally developed in perishable foods. In addition the mild antiseptic effect of a number of spices served to pickle foods and thus preserve them from decay.

At the present time flavors, and especially perfumes, may be of either natural or synthetic origin. The natural perfumes are the actual odoriferous materials extracted from plants. These materials, known as essential oils, are, as their name implies, oily substances, and they are present in the blossoms, fruits, or other parts to a rather small extent, usually less than 1 per cent.

The oils may be removed in a number of ways, depending on their source, their nature, and the form in which they are desired. In the case of a particularly rich source of an essential oil, such as lemon peel, the oil may be squeezed out in a press. In other cases it may be distilled directly from the source or blown out in a current of steam. It may be dissolved out by organic solvents, such as alcohol, or extracted by means of highly purified animal fats. The amount of essential oil obtained from the blossoms of most plants is in the neighborhood of only a few pounds a ton.

Needless to say, such processes are extremely expensive. However, they still are important industries in parts of France and the Balkans, because they produce the highest quality of certain types of perfumes. Nevertheless they are facing steadily increasing competition from the chemical laboratories as the artificial products approach closer and closer to the natural ones.

The essential oils are not oils of the same type as the edible ones, such as olive or cottonseed oils. (Incidentally, the word "essential" does not mean necessary; it is derived from the word "essence.") Chemically they are mixtures of a number of different organic compounds, which in turn may be grouped in several different classes.

Roses are among the most important flowers used in the making of natural perfumes.

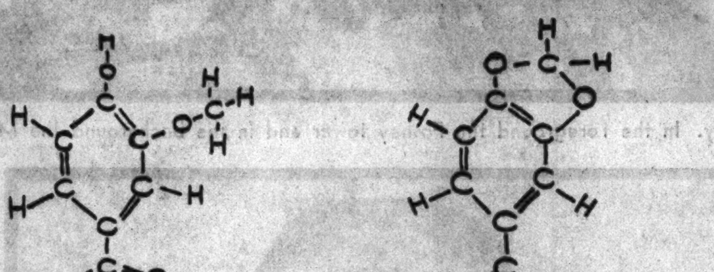

Fig. 1 THIS SMELLS LIKE VANILLA — THIS SMELLS LIKE HELIOTROPE

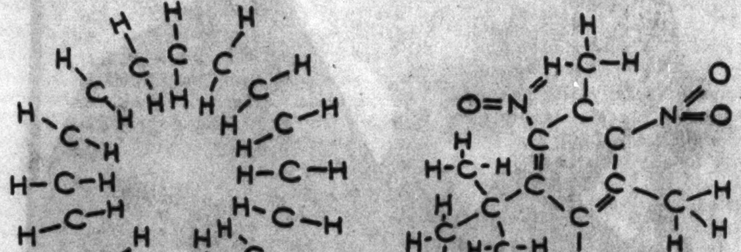

Fig. 2 NATURAL MUSK — ARTIFICIAL MUSK

Figure 2—Two more molecules. These indicate how widely different molecules may have the same odor.

Perhaps the most common of these classes is that of the esters. These are compounds of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen and in general have fruity or winelike odors. Then there are the terpenes, containing different arrangements of carbon and hydrogen atoms. They have as a rule rather woody smells, like turpentine or camphor, two well known members of the class. A third class consists of derivatives of benzene, the most important hydrocarbon obtained from coal tar. Obviously coal tar presents an excellent starting material for the artificial synthesis of such perfumes as the last.

Since their presence in very dilute concentrations suffices to give flowers their odors, it is not surprising that some of the odoriferous ingredients are far too powerful for use in the pure state. The manufacture of high-quality perfumes depends not so much upon obtaining the ingredients from natural or other sources as upon the proper blending with other materials.

Such other materials may include a considerable amount of a substance with a mild but persistent odor to provide a "body," or a sort of foundation which can be covered by the particular flower essence. Then, too, minute amounts of foreign odors are frequently added to bring out some desired characteristic. These last usually bear no resemblance to the smell they are assisting in imitating; in fact, some of them are extremely bad smelling when in the pure state.

Most of the essential oils have been separated into their principal constituents, and the chemical constituents of these compounds have been determined. Once the arrangement of the atoms in an organic molecule is known, the synthesis of such a molecule in the laboratory can nearly always be carried out, although its preparation from artificial sources is not necessarily economically feasible.

The knowledge of the chemical structures of these compounds has led to improvements on the natural product in a number of instances. It sometimes happens that the chemist finds that a slight modification of the natural compound results in an intensification of the desired effects. Thus the flavor of vanilla is largely due to a compound known as vanillin. Chemists have found that a slight change in the molecule results in the compound bourbonal, which is much more intense in odor and, according to its discoverer, smells even more like vanilla.

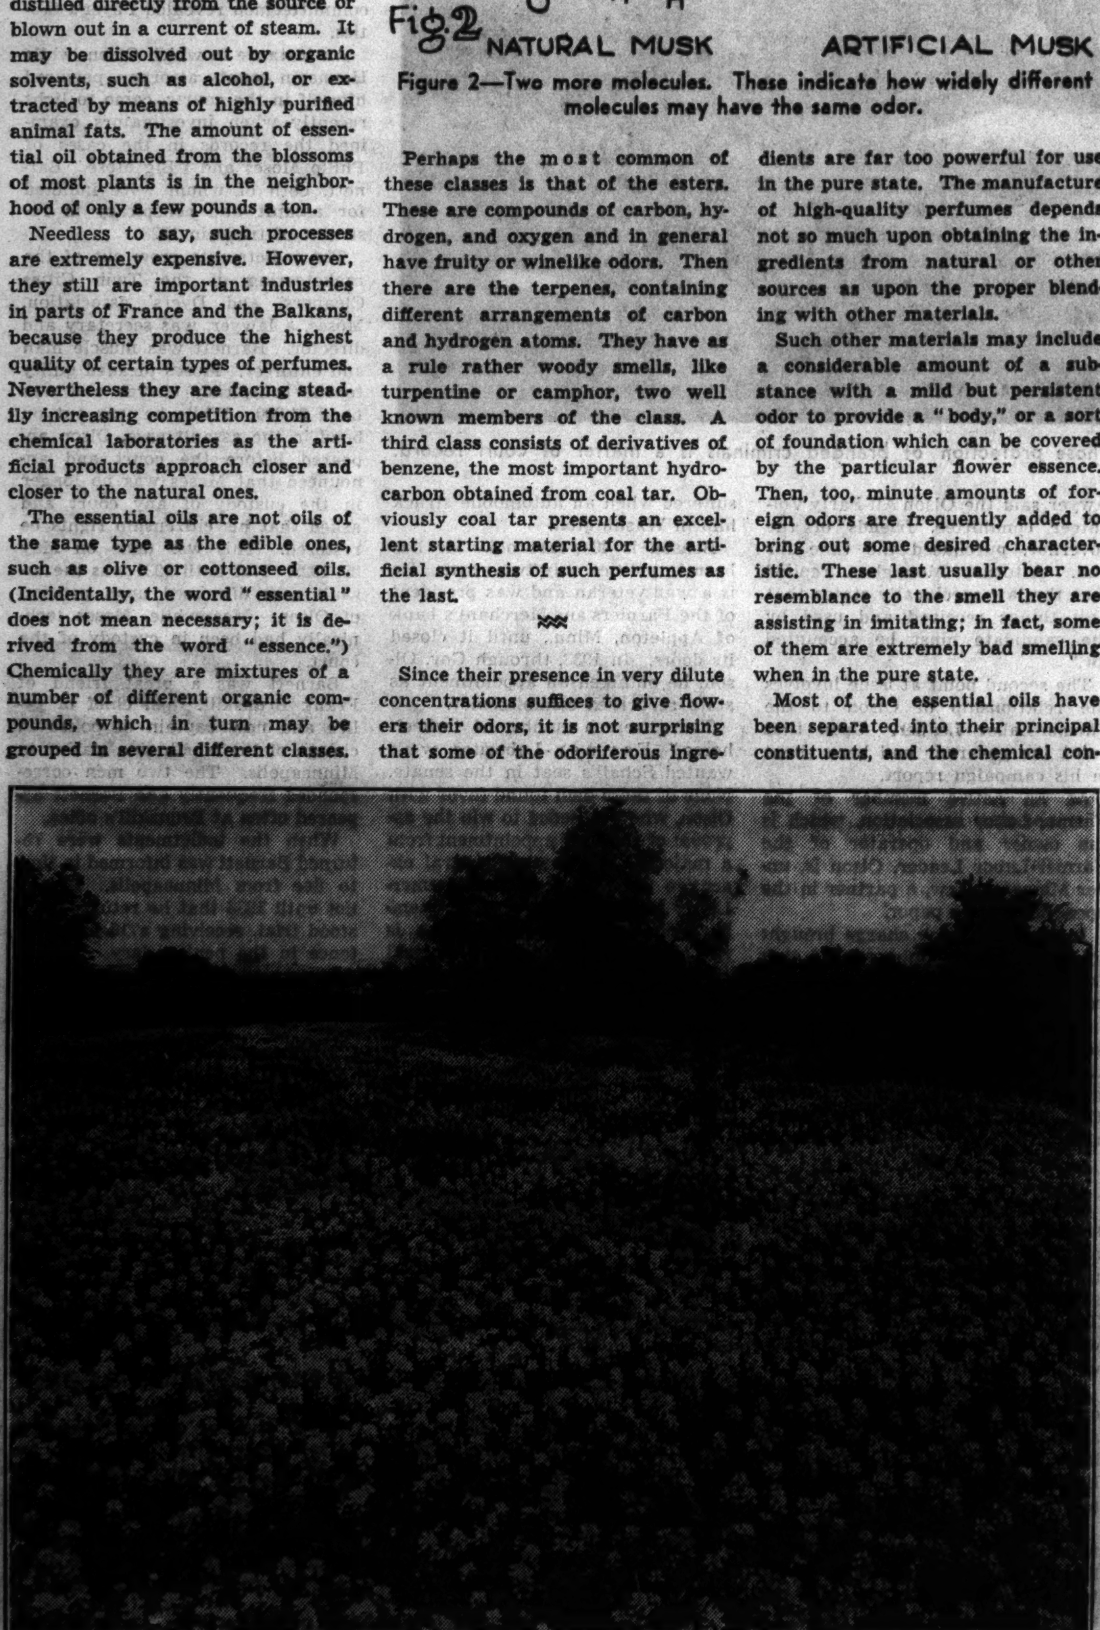
In addition to these synthetic compounds that are closely related to the natural ones, from time to time chemists have stumbled across organic compounds that are not related chemically to any natural perfume, but which happen to have strikingly similar odors. The chief example of this is in the case of certain nitrogen-containing compounds related to the high explosive TNT. For no demonstrable reason these particular substances have odors almost exactly like that of musk. In fact, they have replaced musk in the less expensive perfumes.

It is a sad point for a chemist to concede, but the field of perfumes and flavors is one in which the products of the laboratory are as a rule inferior to the best natural products. The reason is that the synthetic products are entirely too pure. Chemical analysis is not very accurate in determining minor constituents which comprise only a fraction of a per cent of a mixture. It is these unidentified impurities that make the natural product more desirable than the synthetic.

It may have been noted that the words "perfume" and "flavor" have been used throughout this article as though they were synonyms. While they are not, nevertheless there is a close relationship between the senses of smell and of taste. One similarity between them not shared with the other senses is that they cannot be subjected to any numerically expressed analysis. Light can be broken up into its wave lengths and sound into its overtones, but smell and taste must still be measured on the inaccurate scale of human judgment.

Consequently it is very difficult to copy accurately a natural flavor or odor. This undertaking is further hindered by the fact that the odors of many compounds change as they are diluted. For instance, ionone, one of the essential oils of violets, has this odor only when greatly diluted. In fact, there are a number of good perfume ingredients which have a disgusting smell in the pure state. The three most important perfumes of animal origin, musk, civet, and ambergris, are of this type.

Two of the worst-smelling compounds known, indole and skatole, actually are used in some of the better-class perfumes. Of course, they are very highly diluted.



The manufacture of perfumes from flowers faces steadily increasing competition from chemical laboratories.

Mostly About Dogs

Keeping Dog Clean in Winter Matter of Brushing

WHEN dogs are kept in the house a great deal (as they are at this season of the year) the dog owner is apt to be puzzled by the problem of how to eliminate the natural odor of the dog without bathing it frequently.

Ever since severe cold weather in the middle west became the routine of the weather man we have had an increasing number of inquiries about this problem. One springer spaniel owner pointed out that he didn't want to bathe his dog often because the pup slept in a pretty cool place and he understood it ought to retain the oil on its hair rather than have it removed by too much bathing. But there were complaints about dog odor when the pup came into the house, so he had to do something.

It is the oil on a dog's hair and skin that produces the odor which all dogs have, and also it's this oil that gives such a beautiful sheen to a dog's coat and makes for a healthful condition of skin and hair. Dogs that are not in good shape invariably have unthrifty coats, with hair that may be dry and lacking in sheen. When we can run our hand down the back of our black Labrador, fairly see the shine on his coat and feel the rich, luxuriant character of a good growth of oily hair, then the inclination is to exclaim about the excellent condition the dog has attained.

The slight odor that dogs have is not offensive to most owners. However, we realize that one doesn't want dogs around the house making the place smell like a kennel. Therefore the inclination is to do something to remove the odor from the coat and skin. And here is where the owners come to the parting of the ways.

On the one hand we have thousands of owners who give their pets frequent baths even in bitter cold weather. The idea is to clean the dog and at the same time kill the natural odor. We know of many owners who give their pets a bath every week right through the winter.

There isn't any doubt but what frequent baths keep a dog clean, but it is rather hard on the dog, to say nothing of his coat. A pup that is put in the tub every week hardly has a chance to get any natural oil on his skin and coat. Therefore he doesn't have natural protection and a natural growth of hair. In fact, your veterinarian will tell you that too frequent bathing may irritate the skin, keep it too dry, and thus help the pup develop a minor skin trouble.

When friends ask us how often we bathe our dogs, and we tell them that they do not get a tubbing from the end of the hunting season until spring, they register amazement. And they doubtless wonder how we can have dogs in the house that never are given a scrubbing. The explanation is simple.

The object of bathing a dog is to remove odors, to take dirt from the hair, and to keep the skin clean. We believe that you can do all of these things in very cold weather by following this system: 1. Comb and brush the dog every day, and don't be afraid to use a stiff brush on a long-coated pup so you can get down to his skin. A good combing and brushing removes all dead hair, takes out the dirt, and reaches to the skin, so that the latter is stimulated. 2. Have your dog sleep on cedar shavings, which impart a delightful fragrance. The shavings can be sacked or put on the floor of the dog's sleeping quarters. We keep our dogs in a cedar atmosphere all through the year, and therefore they do not have the typical odor. Incidentally, the use of shavings discourages fleas in the summer. At this time of the year they are used solely for their fragrance.

As a further means of eliminating the natural odor we put two or three drops of pine oil on a brush once or twice a week and brush it into the coat. This lasts for a long time. Some owners may not like this scent, but to most people it is pleasant.

By following this system of much brushing, plus shavings and pine oil, we can keep dogs all winter with luxuriant, glossy coats, clean skins, and no odor. We have been following this routine for many winters, and it has worked out very satisfactorily.

Of course, there are times when it is necessary to give a dog a bath because it has picked up some objectionable odor or gotten something into its coat that requires warm water and a good soaping. We can remember how our springer used to make trouble during the summer by coming into the house with a foreign odor on his long coat that had to be removed by a tubbing. That is a different story from the practice of many owners of bathing their dog every week.

It's no secret (and your veterinarian will confirm this) that most of us who own dogs overfeed and overbathe them—especially during the winter. Both excesses can contribute to ailments. And both can be avoided.

THE QUESTION BOX

We own a pedigreed Welsh terrier, and we're at a loss as to the correct method of grooming her. Have you any printed matter that would help us, or can you refer us to a book on this subject?—Alfred B.

This department has no leaflets on how to groom a Welsh terrier, but we are recommending a book that gives complete instructions on how to do the job. If possible you should call on the Welsh terrier authority in Glenview, Ill., who will be glad to advise you on grooming a dog of this breed. Name and address being sent to you by mail.

I have a dog which I understand to be a Dalmatian. He is black with white spots. Why is it that all pictures of Dalmatians show them as white with black spots? Is mine a thoroughbred? I have often wondered just why I never see this type in the advertisments of Dalmatians. —J. H. C.

I believe you will find the standard of the Dalmatian (as drawn up by the Dalmatian Club of America) well worth reading. Here is an excerpt from it referring to the color of the breed: "The ground color in both varieties should be pure white, very decided, and not intermixed. The color of the spots in the black-spotted variety should be black . . . in the liver-spotted variety they should be brown." You will note that a pure-bred Dalmatian is not black with white spots, but white with black or brown spots.

Will you please give me information on this question? A friend of mine says he owns an Eskimo police dog and that the American Kennel club has recognized the breed. Is there such a dog? If there isn't, where can I get information on all the dogs of the world?—GENE D. N.

In the first place, there is no such breed as the police dog on the American Kennel club list of recognized breeds. What is usually called a police dog is a German shepherd. There is no breed listed as Eskimo police dog—at least, not to our knowledge. However, the American Kennel club does recognize the Eskimo dog. It's a native of the Arctic and is a long-coated, rugged working dog. A male will weigh 65 to 85 pounds. Your friend probably has reference to this breed, but the correct name is Eskimo, not Eskimo police dog.

Astrologer Tells Film Stars What 1936 Holds for Them

Good and Bad Events Seen for Colony

By ROSALIND SHAFFER

Hollywood, Cal.

ALL Hollywood has a strong faith in the influence of stars on fate. Motion picture executives and actors consult their astrology charts before making decisions that may launch them on a sea of troubles or place their feet firmly on the ladder of success. Whether or not you believe this is superstitious nonsense, Hollywood believes in it firmly.

Since the proof of the pudding is in the eating, before we begin our forecast for 1936 in Hollywood as given by Mabel Walrath Smith, for twenty-eight years adviser in the offices and palaces of the film mighty, a brief review of some outstanding forecasts made by her last year might be interesting.

Mrs. Smith said that five prominent film couples would be divorced last year. There were exactly five in which both parties are well known in the colony and actually identified with films. Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were granted their divorce in 1935. Joan Crawford and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. also received their divorce. Then there were Claudette Colbert and Norman Foster, whose affairs are so shrouded in mystery that we can really include another divorce, that of Jean Harlow and Hal Rosson, and still get under the wire without doubling, unless you have proof that we have never been able to get about the Colbert-Foster divorce. John Barrymore and Dolores Costello were divorced, as were Joan Blondell and George Barnes.

"One of the Fox executives will be removed," said Mrs. Smith last year. Winfield R. Sheehan fulfilled the prediction. He is at present still out of the film picture.

"There will be several deaths of stars; two outstandingly tragic," said Mrs. Smith. Will Rogers and Thelma Todd fit into this prediction.

Mrs. Smith continues with some amazing forecasts for the colony that may turn things topsy-turvy in the industry. She even predicts that films will have moved entirely out of California by 1939.

"During 1936," she says, "the planet Saturn is opposed to Neptune; this happens only once in 37 years and is always tragic to things influenced by them. Neptune rules the motion picture colony. I have cast sixty charts for Los Angeles for this year and have worked things out at some length for the vicinity. Saturn is the black planet and Neptune the sea-green one. Thirty-seven years ago the movies were not started, hence this is the first time motion pictures have undergone this opposition of Saturn and Neptune.

"This opposition of Saturn and Neptune will result in many deaths with no warning, sudden and tragic; some airplane and auto accidents, and the suicides of two very prominent stars. Several studios will lose executives by death. Several prominent stars will decide divorce is the only solution of their difficulties. During 1936 nine actresses, stars in films, will die; five prominent male stars also will die.

"It is possible for people to beat their stars; stars incline but never compel. Only the place and the manner of death are absolutely determined at birth, not the time. I know one star who is living four years past her allotted time. Her chart showed every planet afflicted but one, the one that rules faith in the Supreme Being. With that she beat her stars and is living today after recovering from a supposedly incurable ailment, a remarkable demonstration of faith.

"Now for some personal charts. Paulette Goddard, Chaplin's leading woman in his new film, is a rising star and will assume considerable importance. I said last year that Charlie did not know how good she would be in the film; it has turned out to be so and has surprised him greatly. She will receive offers from abroad. Stars indicate prosperity in her work and otherwise financially.

"There appears to be an element of mystery disturbing to her peace of mind; the final result of the situation will be satisfactory to Paulette, due to a friend several years her senior. A business transaction and a paper requiring her signature are shown. Stars foretell more than one accident to her during the year; she should be cautious while traveling; there is illness to be guarded against in the late spring or early summer and also in the early fall of 1936.

"Constance Bennett has a bad chart for this year following her spectacular successes of a few years ago. There will be many headlines in print about her affairs. Her health will not be good, either. A planet in the heavens influencing home and domestic affairs denotes lack of understanding and coöperation at home that may lead to a sudden crisis in her affairs. She will need determination, faith, and courage to beat her stars this year.

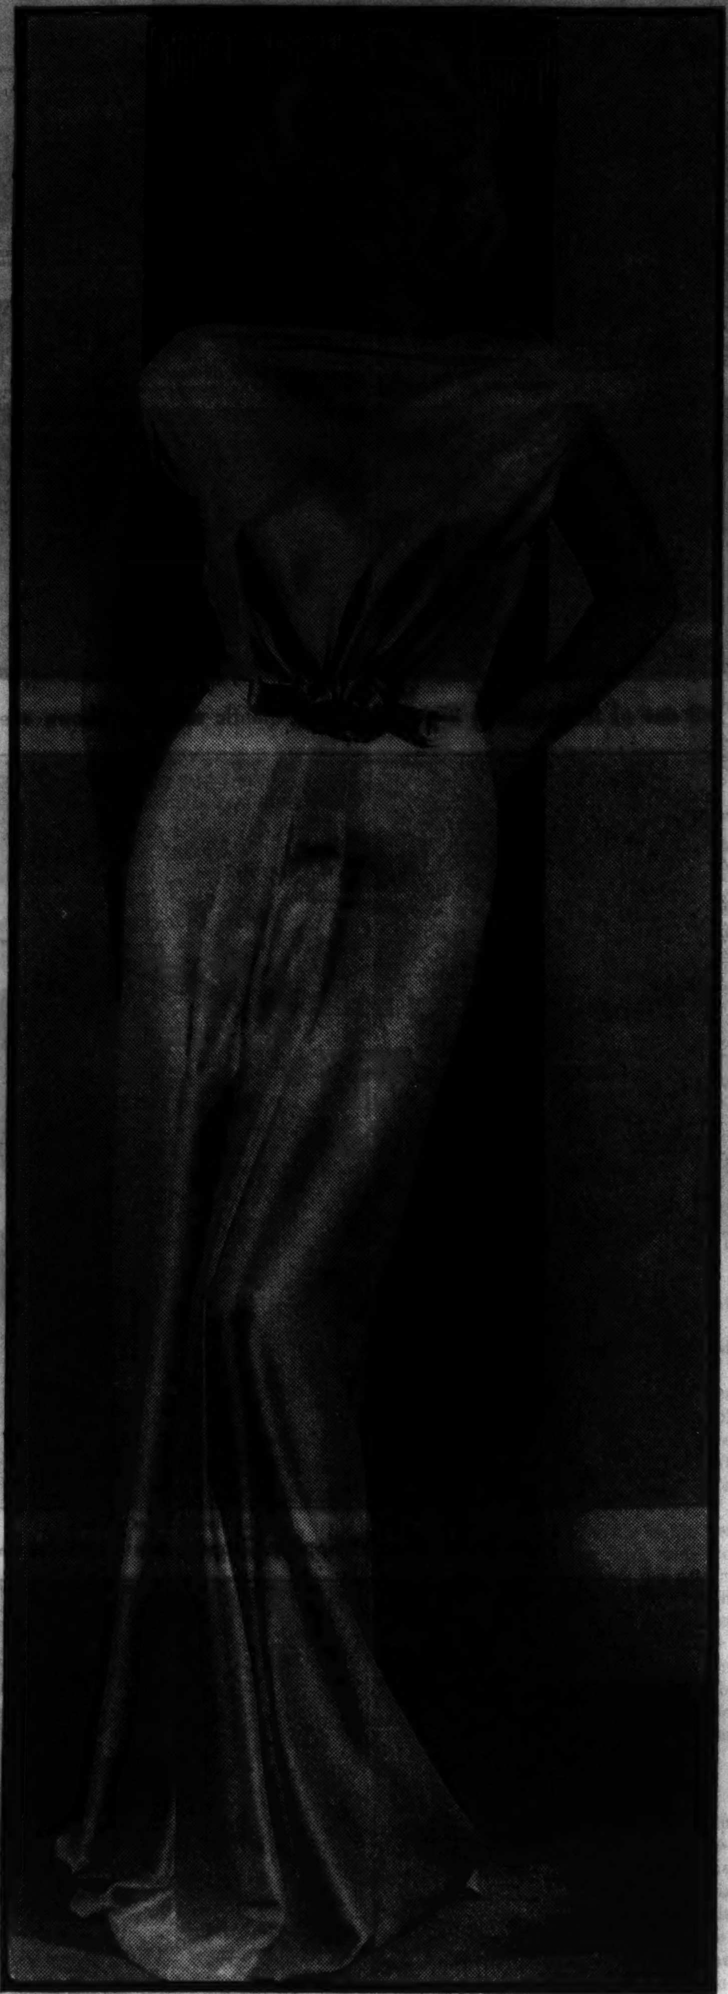
"Fredric March will suffer the loss of a close friend and also of a relative. He must be cautious in regard to investments. Though there is a chance for gain in sound ones, there also is a great chance for loss in carelessly made ones. There is a warning of misunderstanding in his business affairs. The latter part of the year, especially September and October, is more propitious if care is exercised the first half of the year.

"Sylvia Sidney, whose birthday is Aug. 8, had the planet Mars influencing her birth, in the fifth and twelfth sections of her horoscope, the sections influencing movies and drama. The moon and Jupiter in her midheaven denote success. The planet Uranus in the second section (the house of money) and Neptune in the fourth section show much money earned from her profession. She must refrain from extravagance in 1936-'37 and is warned against accidents in travel.

"She must not allow friends or relatives to interfere in her personal affairs this year, or it will cause her serious heartaches. The month of April, and from Oct. 20 to Nov. 3, and again December, will be unlucky for her. She must protect her belongings from theft or fire.

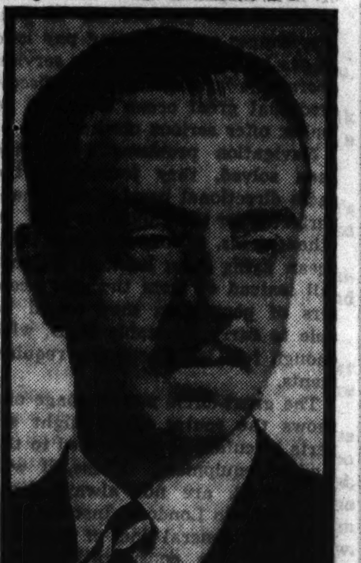
"Jean Harlow, born March 13, is among the Pisces people who will be hit hard because of the aspects of Neptune this year. George Brent is also among the Pisces people. This year will be tempestuous and threaten scandal for Miss Harlow. There will be expensive arguments, terminating in separations, both with her studio and with close associates. She must endeavor to curb her impulsiveness, especially in the spring and again in the late summer. Former close associates will try to make trouble. There will be gossip and scandal and possibly lawsuits.

"Clara Bow, born July 29, is still suffering from the effects of the last-year eclipse of the sun, which is one of her main planets at birth. Clara must guard her speech in 1936 and keep her temper under control at all times. In December a married 'friend' may cause her trouble and bring her into his or her domestic difficulties.



Jean Harlow is warned that 1936 will bring to her separations from her studio and from close associates. There will be gossip and scandal, too.

Loretta Young is told that she will be in danger on or near the water. She must control her emotions.



William Powell, declares the astrologer, will have perplexities and anxious hours because of Jean Harlow.

Claudette Colbert must be careful in choosing her friends this year. There is a probability of some sorrow.

"Clark Gable, born Feb. 1, is warned by the position of Saturn, Mars, the moon, and Neptune in his chart that he must beware of danger in travel, as this year shows him in greater danger from accident than ever in his life. Neptune will make him restless and Saturn will make him depressed. This year is a crossroads in his life. If he and his wife determine on a divorce it will be very unfortunate for him. His career probably will be affected, and it will open up many difficulties. The involvements of his new freedom will be terrific; some of them may shock both Europe and the United States. His wife is his only salvation; this is no year for him to tempt fate. Danger, misfortune, and loss are around him. Loss with horses runs all through the year."

"Last year I predicted that Joan Crawford would marry, in spite of all her statements to the contrary. She did. The position of luminaries in her chart this year denotes changes. One is to a new environment, possibly to Europe. If she acts discreetly she may gain her objective, whatever it is. Aspects denote a new cycle in her life and a long journey. I advise her not to take it in April. She will have worries this year caused by a former close associate. Gossip will worry her.

"Ann Harding must be careful of legal documents. She will be more fortunate in associations with those several years her senior. She will travel quite unexpectedly, due to a sudden happening. It will have a romantic effect for the remainder of her life.

"Claudette Colbert, born on May 1, has an ideal chart at birth for a movie star. In her progressed chart for 1935-'36 are signs that she has and will contact deceptions and will not be out of these aspects till the spring of 1937. October, 1936, will bring annoyances due to interference of friends, also the probability of some sorrow. If she had deferred her marriage until after the end of the first half of 1936 it would have been under better aspects. It is not a good year for her to speculate, as what she would gain would only lead to heavy losses. She must be careful in choosing friends this year.

"Janet Gaynor has bad aspects this year. Miss Gaynor, born Oct. 6, would be happier if she would postpone marriage until 1937. Planets say she will consider marrying in 1936 and will have vexations and confusions to contend with. Danger from travel, some losses, but good aspects for her screen work face Miss Gaynor.

"Loretta Young has a year ahead in which she will face the problem of beating her stars. Born Jan. 6, her signs show she will experience worries about financial relations with her mother. She takes this too much to heart. She must watch her diet through the summer. She will be in danger on or near the water at this time. She is in danger due to liquids, perhaps choking, and danger from travel accidents, which menace all screen stars this year especially. The year 1937 will be better for her romantically and in her work. The planet Uranus, in the seventh section in her birth chart, foretells unhappiness for Loretta in marriage and romance. If she does not control her emotions, both worry over family and financial difficulties and her romantic side, she will shorten her career and also her life.

"Dolores Costello, born Sept. 17, must be careful of robbery this year —perhaps robbery when traveling. If she escapes a grave danger menacing her in travel nothing can retard her full come-back to screen popularity. She will suffer the loss of someone once dear to her.

"William Powell, born July 29, faces the fact that the stars say the lady of his choice, Jean Harlow, is bad for him. He will have perplexity and anxious hours because of her. If he can overcome the difficulties in his astral chart the month of August and up to Sept. 23 will be his most fortunate time in 1936, especially for romance, as well as work. Professionally he will be successful as long as he lives.

"Personally he is a gentleman and an aristocrat at heart, showing a 'good fellow' face to his associates, but often feeling when he is alone that he has cheapened himself a little in his efforts to be companionable. He has a fine mind; nine times out of ten he can outsmart the other fellow. He has great respect for intelligence in other people. Both he and Miss Harlow have signs that prophesy no lasting marital happiness for either, with others or with each other.

Kay Francis, it is predicted, will have a new romance, but it will not be lasting.. Her career will continue to be successful.

"Greta Garbo, born on Sept. 18, both in her birth chart and her progress chart for the year 1936, and into '37, has a chance for marital bliss with a man several years her senior. He will have dark, expressive eyes, a femininely expressive mouth, olive complexion, tall, athletic build, will be a lover of books and home, one who has traveled much through many dangers and experiences, one who knows women.

"He will be given to few words. If she works hard to beat certain aspects in her chart she will marry him and he will be an inspiration to her in her career, which will continue. The forbidding aspects are that she has danger to health through impaired assimilative organs in 1936. The sudden death of a close man friend [evidently Jack Gilbert, before whose death this chart was cast] and the illness of a close relative will upset and worry her.

"Myrna Loy will have romance as her paramount interest during 1936—happenings of this year will lead to a marriage purely for love, not involving money nor advantages. She will have continued success as an actress through her life. If she were a man she would be an A1 director. There will be two and a half years of increasing popularity before there is even a slight wane in her career. She, too, must avoid the bad travel signs for autos and airplanes.

"Warner Baxter faces danger to his health this year, also illness in his home circle. For his work it will be a fortunate year. He should write short stories and plays.

Death of 14 Film Actors Forecast

"John Barrymore shows through his chart that he is still intensely in love with his wife, Dolores. All his recent troubles can be blamed on his mischievous, trouble-making planet, Uranus. If he can beat aspects in his chart for this year denoting illness he will come back to full popularity on the screen and his finances will be enhanced.

"He needs his wife intensely; she is a very understanding woman, and he knows it. It is the tragedy of his life that his marriage has been broken, for each will always love the other. He also is in danger from travel this year.

"Mae West will have no new romances; she has some anxious hours, with threats of stolen clothes and jewels. She must be careful of associates this year; she must be careful where she spends her money and who receives it.

"Charlie Chaplin will have a huge success with his new film; however, the year brings him worry and anxiety over a close woman friend. His geatest sorrow will be the death of a woman and man close to him. This will cause him to change some of his plans. He will take a long voyage, his destination England; new plans will be made on the voyage, favorable in their outcome. He is a lone wolf; no lasting marriage will be his.

"Dolores Del Rio has heartaches ahead; financial difficulties and trouble with her mate through misunderstandings, but no separation. Danger from investments during the month of April and from Dec. 12 to the end of the month; however, latter August and early September are good for investments for her. She is under the sign of Leo.

"Bad assimilative and digestive organs threaten health this year; she must learn to relax and rest completely, or she may shorten her life, as this year is the crisis of her life. This is not a year for changes; new faces and new places are not for Dolores.

"James Cagney must beat his stars, which bear the menace of an air accident. [Recently Cagney has become an enthusiastic airman and has been taking glider lessons.] His screen success is assured, even spectacular, if he will stay out of planes.

"Kay Francis will bloom forth with new romance, but it will not be lasting; none ever will bring her lasting happiness, as her marriage sign is afflicted. Her career will continue successful. Her health will continue to be not of the best.

"Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller will face a troubled year matrimonially. This is not a good year for Johnny; his health is menaced. Sudden happenings due to the position of Uranus in his chart will precipitate a domestic crisis, and other crises as well.

"Fred Astaire is warned by his stars to avoid air travel. In the fall some sorrow will enter his life.

"Ginger Rogers, his film partner, faces a possible separation in their successful teaming. She will go on alone and continue successful for several years. Latter part of the summer domestic worries and money matters menace her.

"Miriam Hopkins, born under Libra, in October, faces happiness ahead, a successful romance, and success in finances this year. She will gain in popularity here and abroad.

"Paul Muni faces a sorrow due to death of a near and dear connection. His marriage and private life continue to run smoothly."

Bicycle Is England's Flivver

From Squire to Rector, All Go Wheeling

By DAVID DARRAH

London, England.

THE bicycle is still the flivver of England. There are no exact figures on how many of them are owned, because some of them, belonging to people in the provinces, date back almost to the time bicycles were invented. But it's certain that many more bicycles than the million-odd automobiles owned in the country are being operated.

Everyone in the British countryside from the squire to the rector rides a bicycle. Like the flivver in America, it is the main form of family conveyance for the small-income man in England. The main reason is that Britain has no moderate priced auto—that is, nothing to compare in price to the low-cost American car.

Besides, automobile licenses are expensive here, and gasoline costs much more. A car driver in England must pay $3.75 a horsepower a year—about twice the average price in the United States. A 16-cent-a-gallon tax brings the price of ordinary gas here up to 29 cents and of ethyl to 33 cents. Automobile owners here also have strict regulations about compulsory third-party insurance.

For these reasons mainly the British pedal along on their bikes and Mr. and Mrs. John Bull and the kids ride out into the woods over the week-ends for their picnics instead of piling into the car, as families in America do on Sunday.

They even have the old tandems, or the "bicycle built for two," as they were called in the "roaring nineties," when bicycles were aristocratic and every dude from Bath to Park Lane rode one.

Tandem or single-seater, they cost a pittance compared to the cheapest flivver, and they pay no taxes. The government is, however, now thinking of charging $1.25 a year for cyclist licenses.

In Holland, also, nearly everyone rides a bicycle—even the queen. The British have not gone that far, but they ride bicycles apart from economic reasons because in England distances are smallish. You are never more than 75 miles from the sea, wherever you go.

Bicycles here fit into the gap that lies between the small percentage of automobile owners in proportion to the population as compared to the United States. The British Isles have about 44,000,000 people. Among these 1,376,054 autos are owned. In America 120,000,000 persons own 21,524,068 cars.

That illustrates the difference between the lot of the lower 60 per cent in England as compared to the United States in matters of comforts, conveniences, and ease of living.

Cyclists and not motorists are the chief problem in London's trafic.

One project for using the $1.25 which is to be levied against each bicycle owner is to build a side cycle path such as they have in Holland. Britain's host of cyclists then would keep on their special path and not get in the way of automobiles.

Riches of Edward VIII. Huge

Map showing some of the enormously rich possessions which were inherited by the prince of Wales when he became England's king.

Vast Income Inherited by King

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

London, England.

WHAT is the income of the king of England, and what will Edward VIII. inherit from his father? A bewildering miscellany of incomes, letters, jewels, books, police stations, streets, palaces, stamps, oyster beds, theaters, and mineral rights—perhaps the most varied and complicated estate of any living man, and certainly one of the most difficult to administer.

The king is one of the greatest landlords in England. However, ever since 1760 each sovereign has made over the revenues from these possessions to the nation in return for a fixed annual income for life.

The annual income from King Edward's possessions which will thus be held in trust by the nation amounts to more than $7,000,000. Where does all this come from? He is the owner of immense London properties—the ground landlord of His Majesty's theater, of the majestic stucco mansions in Carlton House terrace, of the Royal Opera arcade, of Vine street police station, of Pall Mall, and of the Criterion block at Piccadilly circus, that alone yields $40,000 a year.

Besides huge blocks of property all over London, he also is landlord over Regent street, that modern gold mine that has multiplied its rent roll seven times since being rebuilt, from $220,000 to $1,575,000.

The crown lands all in all comprise about 319,000 acres. They include immense Welsh mining rights, salmon fishing in Scotland, 70,000 acres (more than 100 square miles) of agricultural land, and, among other properties, the Isle of Man in the Irish sea.

If parliament grants the king the same income on the civil list that it did to his father he will receive $2,100,000, of which more than three-quarters is appropriated for household expenses, salaries, pensions, works, charity, etc., leaving none too much for his needs.

(Acme photo.)

Should parliament decide that, being unmarried, King Edward does not need as much as this, it is quite probable that he will reserve for himself the income from his own property, the duchy of Cornwall. This amounts to $1,320,000 a year, of which he has been receiving between $300,000 and $350,000 after all expenses and other deductions have been made.

Nevertheless, money goes fast in the palaces. When the cost of living was much lower, in 1909, it was revealed to a parliamentary committee that the royal cellars cost more than $37,000; Buckingham palace, $145,000; Windsor castle, $84,000; Sandringham, $55,000; the royal laundry, $30,000; the royal yacht, $14,500; carriages and automobiles, $25,000, and liveries, $26,000. These expenses would naturally be much higher today and would have the addition of the private airplane and its upkeep, for he is the first British monarch to fly.

Among his inheritances is the duchy of Lancaster, the private estate of the king. Who could set a price on Buckingham palace, or Windsor, Balmoral, or Sandringham? These buildings, as well as the treasures that fill them, would fetch fabulous prices in any market, not only because of their intrinsic worth but because of their history and tradition.

It was estimated at one time that Buckingham palace, the most valuable of the king's possessions, standing in a superb central site, probably would be worth $15,000,000. But, again, the difference between the actual worth and the price that could be obtained is enormous.

Has 2 Million in Postage Stamps

Valuable as is the palace, its contents are worth more. The gold plate alone is valued at $10,000,000. It weighs five tons, and some pieces are so heavy that they require several men to move them. Before these pieces are used they are always warmed by immersion in boiling water, because other methods might injure them.

The great art collections housed at Buckingham palace and at Windsor—Titians, Rembrandts, Watteaus, Velasquezes, Gainsboroughs—are worth at least $5,000,000. There was a curious doubt in 1914 as to who really owned these pictures, and state papers were to be examined in search of confirmation, but nothing ever was announced.

Then there is the jewelry that has been collected by and given to the royal family during the centuries of England's history. Huge diamonds, priceless emeralds, rubies, and sapphires, and the crown jewels—who could say what their value would be?

The royal library at Windsor, containing more than a hundred thousand volumes, many of them first editions, beautifully bound, the oldest ones superbly illuminated, would fetch enormous sums if they were put up for auction.

Among the most important possessions Edward VIII. will inherit are his father's private letters and those of his ancestors before him. Royal letters always have been the object of extraordinary attention and have been jealously guarded. When the late King George received his father's letters they were carefully filed in a steel-lined cabinet.

Not least valuable of the new possessions of Edward VIII. is his father's famous stamp collection. Comprising about 600,000 stamps, the collection is carefully filed in a long row of bound albums arranged according to country, year, and issue. Its value is held to be at least $2,000,000.

Pick Air Routes Over Atlantic

Test Flights to Be Made This Year

weighing at least 50,000 pounds and capable of 3,000-mile nonstop flights.

This ambitious project has all been done on the basis of the performance which Pan American Airways already is getting from the Sikorsky S-42 and the Martin 130 ocean transport flying boats in service on the Caribbean and Pacific divisions of the company. Rigged with special tanks for long flights, either of these two types of airplanes is capable of meeting equipment requirements for trans-Atlantic service.

It is true that the Sikorsky could carry only a small pay load over such a range, but the Martin undoubtedly could carry all the mail which would be routed during the first few months. Then, if a building program contemplated is carried out, the joint companies would have in service 100,000-pound Clipper type airplanes which would carry enough pay load to justify commercial operation of the ships.

The whole American-British scheme is based upon performance of new airplanes now under construction here and abroad. In plotting ranges and adjusting pay load to gas load for the Atlantic service, operations specialists have discovered that great ocean distances no longer offer serious obstacles.

Navigation problems also had been solved, they found, by the radio directional bearing equipment perfected for the Pacific air line. In other words, if they confined their ocean flying from landfall to landfall instead of from the great centers of population they would be able to carry profitable loads, with enough fuel for emergency requirements.

The great-circle map on page one shows the routes which flight experts calculate as best suited to the modern equipment. These, it will be noticed, are not always from New York to London. Instead they follow the general lines of the land, taking into consideration local weather conditions such as the prevalence of ice, fog, or other conditions which make flying hazardous.

The distance from New York to London is 3,337 statute miles. This is almost the extreme range of the Martin type boat, far too great a distance to risk passengers or expensive equipment in a gamble against weather. Particularly is this true around the south coasts of England, where the prevalence of fog would require the planes to carry heavy fuel reserves.

But from Portland, Me., 300 miles north of New York, to Cork, Ireland, is only 2,556 nautical or 2,938 statute miles. And from Cork to London is only 280 miles. This trip could be made with plenty of fuel in reserve against the possibility of fog or other adverse weather conditions.

Viewed from the standpoint of the operators, Portland is as good a port for European departure as New York, since passengers can fly there from the middle west as easily as they can from New York. Portland, which is only 868 miles from Chicago, has harbor facilities at least equal to those of New York and with a record of being less often closed by ice.

During the conferences between Pan American's president, Juan T. Trippe, and G. E. Woods-Humphrey, managing director of Imperial Airways, the conclusion was reached that for summer operations at least the American continental base of the overseas line will have to be either on the Maine coast or somewhere in the St. Lawrence river-Newfoundland area.

One interesting projection calls for a base at Seven Islands, in the St. Lawrence 250 miles above Quebec. From there a nonstop trip to Cork is 2,130 nautical or 2,449.5 statute miles, easily within range of present equipment. Seven Islands is only 1,148 statute miles or 999 nautical miles from Chicago.

Feeder lines from New York, Quebec, Detroit, Toronto, and Chicago could converge upon the island base as easily as they could upon Portland or any of the larger cities.

Just what point will be chosen as the American end of the ocean line will depend upon decisions of the operating personnel. Balances between pay load and fuel load, convenience, weather conditions at the given points, and similar matters will be weighed before the final choice is made.

For winter flying these northern bases are likely to be closed by ice. Anticipating this, the American-British combine expects to move southward with the season, making flights over the Bermuda-Azores route when weather closes the northern passage.

The latter is the route over which Pan American planned four years ago to send the first of its Sikorsky S-42 type Clipper ships. Weather surveys over the route disclosed that the climate was about the same as that of the Caribbean area, with which Pan American pilots and meteorologists are familiar.

Jealousies of the English, who refused landing rights in Bermuda, and of the French, who held the concession to land in the Portuguese-owned Azores, prevented putting this plan into effect. Now, however, the situation has changed.

The reciprocal agreement with England has opened Bermuda, and the joining of English and American interests is expected to soften French resistance to using the Azores as a base. Also the series of accidents in which every large French airplane built for trans-Atlantic service has been wrecked has diminished enthusiasm in Paris for efforts along those lines.

At any rate Imperial and Pan American officials at this time say they have every confidence that the Azores can be opened to their planes. The longest hop on this route, as shown by the map, is 1,787 nautical miles, from Bermuda to the Azores. This distance represents 2,055 statute miles, or a distance well within the range of the Martin boat.

The far-northern route from Chicago to Cape Chidley, Greenland, Iceland, and Norway, a total of 3,434 nautical miles or roughly 4,300 statute miles, offers special problems which may not quickly be solved.

Many of the early difficulties which discouraged the Canadian and American pilots who made survey flights over it have disappeared with the introduction of de-icing equipment, reliable radio direction-finding apparatus, controlable-pitch propellers, and more reliable motors.

Pan American experts who have been experimenting in operations of Pacific Alaska Airways, a subsidiary, north of the Arctic circle, feel that northern flying ultimately will offer many advantages over more southerly routes. The greatest difficulty in the northern regions, they point out, occurs during summer, from fog and unsettled weather.

Despite all difficulties, it is generally agreed, development of the far-northern route ultimately will come, because it is the perfect airway from the heart of the great agricultural and industrial middle west to the heart of a similar area of Europe.

The German plans for a share in the north Atlantic service are based upon the Zeppelin building program and upon a scheme to transfer the south Atlantic flying boat system to the north Atlantic. Attempts to carry out both these projects are to be made this summer.

Germany's newest and largest Zeppelin, the LZ-129, is practically completed. Nearly half again as large as the Graf, it will carry twice the pay load and have slightly greater speed. Its range is calculated to be equal to that of the Graf, or approximately 10,000 miles. Structurally it is stronger than any airship ever built, according to experts at Friedrichshafen.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, who has demonstrated his navigating ability in all conditions of weather on ocean and land, intends to try out the LZ-129 in flights around Europe and then begin passenger flights at fortnightly intervals between Germany and the United States, probably to Lakehurst, where facilities for handling an airship of this size already exist.

Dr. Eckener is not certain, however, that such a service can be carried out, but he is optimistic. He believes that large areas of depression—generally unfavorable flying weather—over the north Atlantic would force a Zeppelin to make detours of considerable extent. These would slow up progress and must be considered in planning schedules.

Germany's flying boat scheme is even more ambitious. At present the air mail service on a biweekly schedule across the south Atlantic is maintained in ten-ton Dornier Wal flying boats fitted with two engines. Mail is flown in land machines to the African coast and transferred to a steamer on which one of the Wal boats rests. The steamer puts out to sea. About 100 to 200 miles off shore, depending on the wind, the flying boat is launched by means of a catapult and continues to its destination. A similar service operates on the South American side.

If motor or other troubles develop the Wal boat lands and the steamers come to its rescue.

Distances on the south Atlantic are not great, the total water jump from Africa to South America being less than 1,600 miles.

The Germans, however, have gained considerable experience in north Atlantic flying from the catapult service they have operated off the Bremen and the Europa, the German passenger liners. Planes carrying mail are catapulted from these ships as far from shore as 1,000 miles, thus cutting the crossing time by as much as 24 hours.

Velo-Skiing Is Newest Sport

Higher Speed Credited to Device

Davos, Switzerland.

THE newest sport in this land of snow and steep slopes is velo-skiing. The apparatus is the velo-ski, and the word explains the nature of the machine, for it is a combination of "ski" and "velo," the familiar French expression for bicycle.

The velo-ski has been in use for three years in Davos and St. Moritz, and there are two clubs of velo-skiers. As in a bicycle, the velo-ski is steered by the handlebars which control the front ski. Brakes at the rear end of each ski are controled by wires from the handlebars. The brake consists of a sort of spade which turns down and digs into the track.

The chief advantage of the velo-ski is that it may be used successfully by inexperienced skiers, its advocates assert. It is said to be swifter, too, than a pair of skis, even when operated by an unaccustomed person, and can, thanks to its brakes, be used on steeper slopes. It requires no expensive track such as does a bobsled.

A disadvantage is that it cannot go up hill, having no means of propulsion except the pull of gravity. When the velo-ski is to be used there must be a funicular or other means of hauling it to the top of the hill. It is not very heavy, however, being built partly of aluminum. And, finally, it admittedly does not offer the magnificent sport that skis do, with their call on man's strength, suppleness, and daring.

It Is a Sober Bunch of Cowboys That Attends Holly's Party, but, Despite the Joyousness of the Occasion, There Is an Air of Tenseness

Britt's eyes popped. They expanded to help in a smile that satisfied even Holly's insatiate vanity.

THE STORY TO DATE

Holly Ripple, who has inherited the beauty of her Spanish mother, returns from boarding school to her father's ranch in New Mexico just before his death. Anticipating an era of cattle rustling and outlawry, Colonel Ripple placed Holly under the care of his trusted foreman, Britt, and ordered him to surround her with the hardest outfit of cowboys he can gather together. In an encounter with horse thieves Holly is saved from the insults of the leader by one of his own men, Renn Frayne, who shoots his master and another man to save her. Holly persuades Frayne, self-admitted outlaw, to ride for her. Holly has carried on the traditional hospitality of the rancho. Malcolm Lascelles, a gambler and adventurer with whom Holly had regrettably carried in a schoolgirl flirtation in New Orleans, installs himself at the rancho; also Lee Taylor, presuming on a previous acquaintance. Friends and enemies alike are invited to a yearly fiesta in honor of Holly, who is giving a dinner to her outfit before the event. To sober up the cowboys Britt and Frayne give them a ducking in icy waters. Brazos Keene, the youngest and wildest of Holly's cowboys, brings Lascelles and Taylor and dumps them in the cold stream. Lascelles pulls a gun on Brazos, who is saved by Frayne.

INSTALMENT VII.

"HORSES comin'!" shouted Brazos.

A group of horsemen had drawn close without being heard by the tense spectators or participants of that drama.

"Russ Slaughter!" added Bluegrass trenchantly.

Britt swept his gaze away from Frayne and Lascelles. Ten or more riders were heading down under the cottonwoods with a swarthy leader in front. Several more horsemen hung back with a string of pack mules. Slaughter, at the head of his followers, walked his horse leisurely down on the bar far enough to take in the situation. Then, as Frayne stepped out from the wagon, Slaughter halted so sharply that his companions' horses collided with him. Like so many range riders, Slaughter had the visage of a beast of prey.

It would have been impossible to determine his motive, but to be on the safe side Britt gauged him as an enemy. Frayne could be trusted to read this man the same way.

"'Scuse us fer ridin' in on you," drawled Slaughter. "We seen the wagon as we was crossin' above. . . . Howdy, Blue. . . . Wal, there's my ole nigger cowboy, Jackson. . . . An' Trinidad, too, wet as a drowned rat. . . . I take you, sir, to be Britt, foreman of the Ripple outfit."

"Yes, I'm Britt, but you'll excuse me fer the minnit."

"Who are you, rider?" queried Frayne.

"I reckoned everybody had heerd of Russ Slaughter an' would shore know him on sight."

"Never heard of you," returned Frayne curtly. "Would you mind shutting your jaw until I get through with this card sharp?"

"Wal, it's none of my bizness, but I don't like your talk. . . . I reckon you're this cool hand Frayne, huh?'

"If you don't like my talk, lump it," deliberately rejoined Frayne with the nerve of a man who has no fear.

"Yeah?" returned Slaughter insolently. His oscillating red eyes had swiftly grasped the general absence of guns in that group except in Frayne's case.

"Lascelles, you're played out here at Don Carlos rancho," said Frayne. "If your card-sharp tricks weren't enough, your gall in taking advantage of the Ripple hospitality and using it to press your absurd suit upon Miss Holly would be. Send for your pack and get out. That's all."

"An' see heah, Lascelles," added Brazos passionately, "yu seen I hadn't a gun. Yu'd shot me but fer Frayne. . . . Wal, —— —— yore cheap soul, go fer that gun the next time we meet."

"Lascelles, thet's clear enough," interposed Britt forcefully, wanting to lend his authority to this expulsion. "I advise you to leave pronto."

Lascelles flung his hands with a gesture of hopeless rage and impotent defeat. Then he started to stalk off, his back to Frayne, who still held that ominous gun forward.

"Who air you, stranger?" asked the Chisum cowman, fastening hard eyes upon Lascelles.

"My name's Lascelles. I'm from Louisiana."

"Gambler?"

"I play cards for pleasure."

"This fellar Frayne called you a card sharp."

"He's a—a—er . . . that's not true. The cowboys lost and put up a job on me."

"What's thet talk about your imposin' on Miss Ripple?" queried Slaughter with a cracking laugh.

"More balderdash," retorted Lascelles. "I'm a guest here. Everybody in the west knows of the Ripple brag. All welcome! Stay as long as you like! No man ever turned away from that Ripple door! That would be enough. But I knew Holly Ripple in New Orleans. . . . We were sweethearts. Her father took her away. I got here finally to try to win her back. And these jealous——"

"Stop the —— —— liar!" burst out Brazos, flaming of face.

"Wal, by ——, thet's interestin'," drawled Slaughter. "I've heard a sight aboot thet little lady. Sweet on you, Lascelles?"

"Yes, she was."

"Jest what you mean by sweet?" went on Slaughter, his evil mind betrayed in tone and look.

Brazos' harsh appeal to Frayne caused Lascelles to turn, and suddenly he read something in Frayne's menace that the arrival of the Slaughter contingent had disrupted.

"No gentleman ever kisses and tells," he responded.

"Haw! Haw! Haw! . . . But come out with it, Lascelles. . . . Hell, no! Keep yore mouth shut."

Frayne had taken a forward stride, his gun going to a level with his eye. It quivered and froze.

"Another word about Holly Ripple and I'll shoot out your teeth," hissed Frayne.

"Lascelles, you'll need your teeth," interposed Slaughter, as cool as if disaster did not impend. "You can keep all thet fer my private ear. . . . How'd you like to throw in with my outfit? We're foot-loose. Got plenty of money an' big deals on buyin' an' sellin' cattle."

"I'll do it," choked out Lascelles.

"You're in. Come on. Send fer your pack an' camp with us tonight," rejoined Slaughter, motioning his men back and wheeling his horse. He turned in his saddle.

"Britt, I'll see you at the fandango," he said jeeringly.

The foreman was glad indeed that he did not have a gun on him.

"Frayne, we'll meet again," called Slaughter from the slope.

The outlaw's piercing gaze did not leave the retreating Lascelles until he passed out of sight with the horsemen under the trees. He might not have heard Russ Slaughter's taunting last call.

Brazos' first move after being relieved from that restraint was to boot the southerner in the rear. "Taylor, get oot. Go along with them. An' Gawd help yu if yu run into me again!"

The frightened young man, ashen of face and dripping water from his bedraggled garments, hurried up the slope to disappear in the direction of the village.

HOLLY had barred herself in her room for an hour's relaxation and rest after the long preparation for her party. This day was the third aniversary of this event, inaugurated by her father on the occasion of her birthday. She was wondrously happy about innumerable things and unhappy about one.

There came another knock on her door, this time accompanied by Britt's familiar voice: "Holly, don't disturb yoreself. But you ordered me to report."

"Yes, Cappy. . . . O, I hope . . ."

"All's wal. The cowboys air sober, fine, happy like a lot of colts, an' shore prancin' aboot."

"All of them?" called Holly with eagerness.

"Lady, thet applies to every single last one of the ootfit."

"Thank heaven! . . . And you, Cappy?"

"Shore. But you'll have to thank Renn considerable," drawled the foreman.

"Renn?" thrilled Holly.

"I said Renn. Thet's Frayne's first handle, you know," replied Britt with a touch of dry humor.

Holly hesitated a moment, conscious of a suspension of breath and a heat in her cheeks.

"Why must I thank—Renn?'

"Wal, I'll tell you some other time. Adios, señorita. Be shore you're not late."

She heard his clinking steps pass through the living room and out on the path. Holly sat up on her bed, dreamily stirred, aware that the last hour was at hand, and then arose to gaze out of her window. The sun was tipping the high mountain wall in the west.

The loveliest sunset of the year so far, Holly thought, had come upon her birthday.

HOLLY thought of Renn Frayne. One day, riding up to Horn's post, she had gone in, to encounter Frayne, most obviously attentive to Señorita Conchita Velasquez. There were several pretty girls in the village, but Conchita was by far the prettiest, as well as the most seductive and irresistible. All the cowboys, even Brazos, had run after her. It had seemed somehow a stingingly shameful thing to catch Renn Frayne flirting with the girl. Holly had ridden home furious with herself, thinking one moment that she loved Frayne and the next that she hated him.

"Quien sabe? My party tonight may tell me much," soliloquized Holly soberly. "So much that I may never give another."

Whereupon she admitted her majd, Rosetta, and called Ann Doane, who, with her father, was a guest at the rancho. Ann was a buxom girl of seventeen, rosy-cheeked and blue-eyed, a daughter of the frontier. In the pleasant bustle that ensued the introspective and troublesome thoughts went into abeyance.

"Ann, how many of your beaux will be here?" asked Holly mischievously.

"Laws! All of them, Holly," ejaculated Ann with a giggle. "And I'm scared stiff."

"There'll be war over you tonight if I don't miss my hunch," declared the western girl. "Holly, you never looked so—so lovely. These hombres will go mad."

When eventually Holly stood up to view her image in the mirror she gave a little cry of shocked amaze. Following that came another emotion, one she sought to shunt aside before it dominated her completely enough to make her appearance in this gown impossible. She sustained more girlish vanity than fear, more womanly pride than shame. She soothed the still small voice of conscience which had haunted her, for she knew her father would not have sanctioned this Spanish gown. At that moment she loved her little regal head with its rich black hair so beautifully and elaborately dressed. Excitement had given her face a pearly pallor. She hardly recognized those dark, turbulent eyes.

When it lacked but a few minutes to the hour for her to appear in the living room to meet her cowboys Britt again knocked at the door.

"Holly, how air you comin'?" he asked anxiously. "The boys air quiverin' like a bunch of race hawses."

"All right, Cappy, come in," replied Holly gayly, motioning to Roseta to open the door. Britt appeared, spick and span in a new dark suit. "How do you like me, old friend?"

Britt's eyes popped. They expanded to help in a smile that satisfied even Holly's insatiate vanity. His first effort to speak was a failure. Then he exploded: "My Gawd! . . . My lass, not only do you make me young again, but you break my pore old heart."

"Ah, Cappy! Why break?"

"Wal, I reckon with love an' joy. . . . You're changed, Holly. No little girl no more!"

"Thank you. If I please you I shall please them. . . . Are they all there? I'm intensely curious—and I—I don't know what else."

"Holly, you won't know thet ootfit. They been trained to the minit."

"Trained?" asked Holly eagerly.

"Shore. By Frayne, with me helpin'. But I forgot. I wasn't to give thet away. . . . If I don't miss my guess you'll think thet ootfit has been used to dressin' up slick an' dinin' off silver all their lives."

"Darlings!" cried Holly. It would be just like that inimitable Brazos to inspire his comrades to a cool, easy nonchalance which no person or no event could disrupt. "Go back now, Cappy. I want to make an effective entrance. O, I feel like a schoolgirl!"

"Wal, you look like an empress," replied Britt, and went out.

The open door let in the commingled sounds of footsteps, gay laughs, and voices. Holly heard the twang of a fiddle, the mellow chord of a guitar. Supper for the multitude was to be served simultaneously with that given her cowboys, the former in the dining room and patio, the latter in the living room.

"What have I forgotten?" gasped Holly. "O, my notes! . . . Pray for me, girls."

When Holly entered the brightly lighted, brilliantly colored living room to see that group of keen-faced standing men she received from them, or from some inexplicable source, a welling, trenchant emotion that completely vanquished her nervous qualms. Advancing to the head of the table, she stood a moment behind her chair, smiling down the line of intent faces. Frayne stood at her right, while Brazos was on her left. Britt's place was at the foot of the table. Nineteen in all! Holly counted them with eyes that did not see clearly.

"Good evening, gentlemen," she said. "If my father were only here this would be the happiest hour of my life. Nevertheless, I am very happy. . . ."

Frayne stepped to draw back her chair, and as she took her seat he bent over gallantly. "Miss Ripple, may I say no fairer lady in King Arthur's day ever sat to do honor to her knights?"

"Frayne!" Holly's amaze and delight inhibited the confusion which threatened her poise. Though she blushed, she did not otherwise betray herself.

Brazos had heard Frayne and was not to be outdone. "Holly, you shore look grand. You make me want to die 'cause I cain't have you an' stay on livin' jest to see you."

"Flatterers! I'd know you were cowboys if you were strangers and I was blind," replied Holly, stirred to laughter. And she looked down the lines of shining faces. They were all there, somehow inexplicably dear to her—the somber Cherokee, the black, rolling-eyed Jackson, the vaquero Santone, and the half-breed Southards, her knights as well as the cowboys of her own color. Holly felt a nameless strength steal over her. The last of the Ripples had no family. These were all she had—her range riders, wild characters from all the wild ranges, and in that hour she loved them.

THE long table with its white linen and silver, its burden of fruit and food, satisfied Holly's critical eye. When her guests were seated it was the signal for the Mexican maidens, garbed in their colorful gowns, to enter with steaming dishes. Holly had hoped for comfort and happiness for her cowboys, so used to hard fare in all kinds of weather. She was to have her wish. There was an utter lack of embarrassment, and the cool, devil-may-care audacity of cowboys who had been made to feel at home, to be glad, to be themselves in the presence of their mistress. Their garb differed with an infinite variety, yet all was new. Frayne, like Britt, wore a dark suit with white shirt and collar that emphasized the eastern manner that sat becomingly upon him. Holly had not yet looked directly at his face. Brazos, always strikingly handsome, surpassed himself this evening in a new blue blouse with wide collar around which he had gracefully knotted a red scarf. He was the only one minus a coat, in lieu of which he wore a new beaded and fringed buckskin vest. It was open, and the left side bulged noticeably. Holly had an instant suspicion.

"Brazos, what have you in your pocket?" she asked.

"Aw, lady!" Then he looked across the table at Frayne. "What'd I tell yu galoots? It jest cain't be done."

"What can't?" asked Holly.

"Foolin' you."

"Brazos, have you a—a—bottle or a gun inside your vest?"

"Wal, what do yu think, Holly Ripple?" he queried, fastening those eyes of blue fire upon her.

"I hope it's a gun," Holly made haste to reply.

"Don't you know it is?"

"Yes . . . but I forbade that, too."

"Wal, I'm not the only one."

His gaze directed Holly's to Frayne, who drew back both lapels of his coat to disclose the shining black butts of guns, one on each side. "Britt's orders, Miss Ripple."

"O! You are all armed?"

"Yes."

Brazos interposed, leaning to speak low. "Holly, we gotta sleep in our hardware from now on. An' it's a grand idee."

"Whose?"

"Wal, Frayne's fust, 'cause he always plumb refused to be without his guns, an' if he hadn't packed them today you'd be conductin' a funeral 'stead of a grand party."

"Brazos!"

But as the cowboy only smiled in his cool, exasperating way, Holly appealed to Frayne.

"Child, it's nothing for you to bother about," he replied with a smile.

Holly beckoned imperiously for Britt. He came swiftly around the table to bend over her.

"Cappy, the two gentlemen nearest me call me a child," she told him.

"Wal! You don't say?" Britt returned, not feeling sure whether to laugh or be concerned. "In some ways I'll back them up. You air a child. But not tonight. This evenin' you shore air the distractingest woman in the whole wide world."

"Thank you. . . . Britt, I discovered Brazos had a gun inside his vest. Then Frayne showed me the butts of two guns inside his coat. Are all the cowboys armed thus?"

"Indeed they air, Holly."

"But that is expressly against my orders."

"I know, lass. An' I'm sorry."

"Why have you disregarded them?"

Britt stiffened slightly under her unusual severity.

"Won't you trust me to know what's best an' let me explain some other time?"

"Tell me now."

"This mawnin' somethin' come off thet showed how even an old cowman an' ranger like me can be too soft," replied Britt swiftly. "It was Frayne's idee this mawnin' to—wal, to sober up some of the boys thet needed it. The idee was to haul them down to the creek an' duck them. All of us left left our guns behind 'cept Frayne. We had a heap of fun duckin' these sleepy cow hands. Did they wake up pronto! Wish you had been there, Holly. . . . Wal, one of these redhead boys took it plumb serious. Mad at fust an' then devilish. While we was fetchin' Blue—aw, there I go, givin' him away!—this cowboy an' his pard jumped in the wagon an' drove off lickety-cut. An'——"

"That was Brazos Keene and his shadow, Laigs Mason," observed Holly. She had read Brazos' serene countenance.

"I didn't say so. . . . Anyway they fetched back young Taylor an' Lascelles, both the wuss for liquor. Brazos throwed—O, Lord, there I go again! Wal, Brazos throwed Taylor in. But Lascelles turned oot ugly. He wasn't drunk. I reckon thet gambler doesn't go so far. He shore resented the ootrage, an' he made Brazos sore. He made me sore, too, blurtin' oot thet crazy claim of his on you. Wal, to make it short, Brazos soaked him an' piled him into the water. Lascelles came oot, his face like ice an' with his hand inside his coat, where he had a gun. He had seen thet Brazos and Laigs was without guns. We split to get to either side, all except Laigs, who stood his ground by Brazos. . . . Miss Holly, if it was plain to all of us thet Lascelles meant to kill Brazos, how do you suppose Brazos felt? But Frayne stopped Lascelles' draw."

An Open Letter to June Knight

Dear June: If some folks were farmers they would want the rain to bring the crops without the formality of planting seeds, judging by the way they seem to expect good results from the planets, whether they deserve those results or not. The point here is that you are now in the first of two years when you can reap a very pleasant reward for your good work—the seeds you have planted. I hope they have been many and well cultivated, for your potentials are good. With best wishes, WYNN.

Any Doctor will recommend it for its definite benefit in the treatment of many functional Kidney and Bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless." And Dr. C. Z. Rendelle, another widely known Physician and Medical Examiner, of San Francisco, recently said: "Since the Kidneys purify the blood, the poisons collect in these organs and must be promptly flushed from the system, otherwise they re-enter the blood stream and create a toxic condition. I can truthfully recommend the use of Cystex."

A Visit to Houseboat City

View of Houseboat City from the Irving Park boulevard bridge. There are about fifteen boats in the colony. It is a silent place, inhabited by mature men and women. The population includes no children. (Tribune photos.)

Floating Homes of Chicago's Strange River Colony

By JOSEPH U. DUGAN

UP THE north branch of the Chicago river, near the Irving Park boulevard bridge, is Houseboat City. It is a strange community. The boats, most of them, are small wooden cabins. They are built on scows. These are the more pretentious dwellings. Some of the residents live in old, rotting motor boats, mired against the banks.

Houseboat City is a silent place. A visitor, unless the day were cold, would get a first impression that the boats were uninhabited. On a cold day smoke curling up from stovepipe chimneys would indicate life.

The residents of Houseboat City are a taciturn lot. All of them are mature men and women, many past middle age. There are no children playing about the boats. The youngest resident is eighteen years old. The population is small. Let's visit them and find out something about this strange little city within a city.

We go out north and west to Irving Park boulevard. Reaching the bridge across the north branch of the river, we turn up a side street and park our car in front of a boatyard. The river banks are high here and we don't yet see the river cabins.

Following the boatyard fence to the river bank, we come to a footpath. Below us in the water are the rows of houseboats. They are strung along both sides of the river and on both south and north sides of the Irving Park boulevard bridge. It is a cold day. Smoke rises from all of the tin chimneys.

We are on the east bank of the river. Wooden stairways lead down the side of the bank to each of the boats below us. Most of these are oblong cabins. They are about thirty feet long and twelve feet wide. We stand watching for a while, hoping to see some of the inhabitants moving about. None appears.

Walking down one of the narrow stairways, we cross a gangplank to the narrow end porch of one of the cabins. A knock on the door brings no immediate response. We knock again. Finally, after two or three minutes, the door is opened about an inch. An elderly woman is standing behind it.

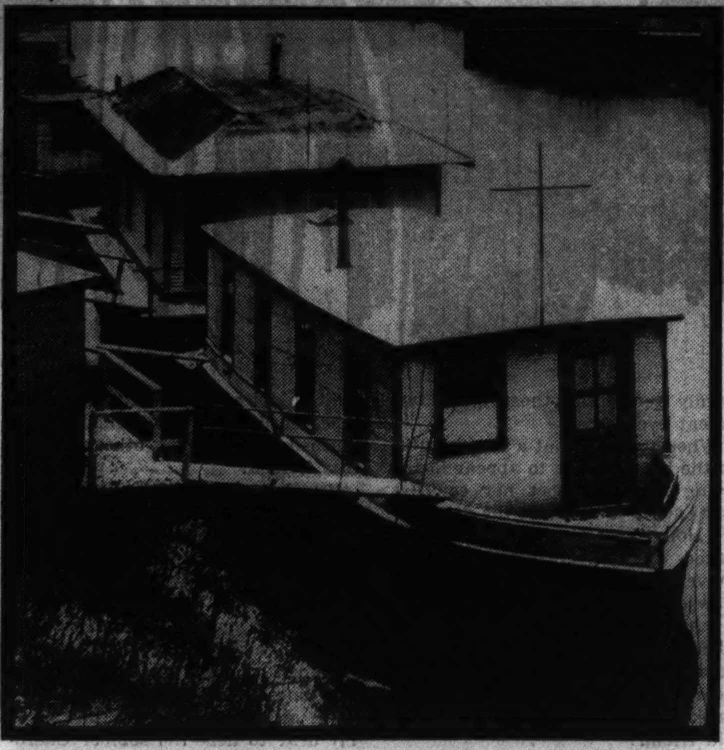
"What do you want?" she asks.

"We would like to know something about your houseboat community. Are you comfortable here?"

"I don't talk to strangers." The door slams shut.

At the next cabin our knock is answered quickly. This time the door is opened wide by another elderly woman. She tells us her home is comfortable. She has no children. She and her husband are on relief at present, but her husband hopes to get work at the boatyard in the spring.

"How do you get your water?"



A close-up view of two of the cabins. The one in the foreground is well kept and is a plain but comfortable home. An elderly couple lives aboard.

"We carry it from the boatyard."

"Do any of the people here have pipes to the city mains?"

"Yes, one or two of them do."

She tells us the people on the houseboats have permission from the city to live on the river.

"Do they pay taxes?"

"I don't know about that."

We thank her for the information and leave her boat. The next one in line is an old motor boat. It is half sunk and one end is fast in the mud of the bank. There is a tin chimney on the roof of the tiny cabin, but no smoke is visible from it. Apparently no one lives here, or, if so, the occupant is not at home. We peer into the window of the cabin.

It's pretty dark in there, but we can see the outline of a bunk and a round coal stove. It looks as if there is hardly room in this boat for one person to turn around in comfortably. We get closer to the window. Yes, someone lives here, all right. There are blankets on the bunk. On a shelf above it are cans of food. Apparently the man or woman who lives here is out for the day.

The next boat in the line is one of the oblong cabins on a scow. It has a neater, cleaner appearance than some of the others. The gangplank is new and well made. The stairway up the side of the bank is wide and strong. We get the impression that here must live one of the aristocrats of Houseboat City.

Our knock is answered by a woman. She is about 45 years old. Her house dress is neat and clean. We tell her we are visiting the houseboat colony for the first time and that we would appreciate any information about the boats and the people she can give us. At first she is reluctant to talk. Then gradually, as she answers our questions, she becomes more talkative.

"How do you like your neighbors?"

"O, about as well as other people like their neighbors, I guess."

"Well, how do the people here on the river get along together? Do you have a strong community spirit?"

"Yes, I'd say we have. There aren't many of us, and we all live on boats. Most of the folks here are on relief right now. We have quite a lot in common."

"Do the men try to fish in the river?"

"No. The water is too dirty and muddy for fish to live in. Anyway, I've never seen anyone fishing around here."

"What do the houseboat people do for entertainment? Do you have community parties or gatherings of any kind?"

"O, we call on each other, and some of us have radios."

"Do any of you ever move your boats to new locations in the river?"

"Hardly ever. O, sometimes in the spring or summer a new boat ties up, but most of these boats have been here for a long time. I don't know of anyone who has an idea of moving. The boats that do move are the smaller ones. Some of the motor boats travel back and forth in the summer, say to the lake and back, but they always come back here."

Meet the Man from Arkansas!

Bazooka Put Bob Burns in Clover

By GUY MURCHIE JR.

BOB BURNS is the man from Arkansas. Big, raw-boned, ruddy-faced, he looks the part, and speaks it with the good old Ozark drawl. Until last fall Bob was still comparatively little known outside of vaudeville circles, but that is true no longer. After a top radio salary for four years of $60 a week, last December he began a two-year contract on the air with Bing Crosby.

Thus comes success at last to a man who got his start by concocting a musical instrument out of stray plumbing equipment and who has struggled along ever since as actor and manager in vaudeville, movies, country fairs, and dance halls.

Bob Burns was born Robert Burns in Van Buren, Ark., in 1890. No star in school, he was to be 35 when he first heard of a Scottish poet with a name like his own. However, young Burns of Arkansas took to music like a hog to corn. As a lad of six he was taking mandolin lessons, and a year or two later joined a string band with his brother, two years older than himself.

While continuing on with school in the winters, Bob took odd jobs in the summers. At fourteen he piloted a ferry across the Arkansas river between Van Buren and Fort Smith and at sixteen worked on a New Orleans tug. The summer before he took the tug job, however, Bob did something that was to affect his whole life. He invented the "bazooka."

Fooling around in the back of a plumbing shop, blowing down pipes to see if he could make a sound like a cornet, he at length found two pieces of pipe that would fit one inside the other like the tubing of a trombone. He could give forth quite a substantial bellow by blowing briskly into the pipes, and he found that he could change the quality and pitch of the sound by sliding the pipes trombone fashion.

With the addition of an old whisky funnel to help megaphone the sound out of the pipe end, Bob had made himself quite a formidable instrument. It had a wail like a sick musk ox, but it thrilled the heart of the Arkansas river lad, and he christened it the "bazooka" and immediately set about practicing.

When he was seventeen Bob went with his brother to join a minstrel show which was on the road, covering towns in Arkansas, Texas, and Oklahoma. He played his bazooka with great success, and his brother played the guitar. When they got to New Orleans the two boys left the show and put on a little vaudeville act they had written themselves. On a platform in a barroom they performed with all their skill, Bob exhibiting his versatility by shifting repeatedly from piano to mandolin to bazooka and back to piano again, frequently supplementing the melodious din with close vocal harmony crooned together with his brother.

The boys didn't save much out of their pay in New Orleans and so decided to go to New York. Bumming their way by entertaining trainmen in cabooses, they presently got to Norfolk, Va. There they got so broke they had to pawn their mother's gold watch in order to eat. Later they obtained jobs as waiters on a boat going to Boston and after several adventures finally arrived in New York.

When his brother shortly returned to Arkansas, Bob was left at the Mills hotel, paying 30 cents a night for his room. His first job in New York, the city of his dreams, was in the movies on 11th avenue. That was in 1911. For a stipend of $3 a day, a staggering rise from his New Orleans salary, Bob took the part of a Swiss guard defending a castle wall. When he went on his first set, dressed in a clean suit with white pants and a cocked hat, he thought his costume looked too new for a Swiss guard. "Shouldn't I muss my clothes up a little?" he asked the director. "I don't look as if I'd ever been in a battle."

"By the time we take the picture," replied the director, "you'll look like you been in a battle all right."

This prophecy was fulfilled shortly, as the battle scene was rehersed eight times, each time several dozen peasants in wooden shoes charging the castle over the bodies of the slain guards.

At the end of four days the picture was done and Bob received his pay of $12. He struggled on with one thing and another, traveling from place to place, always on the alert for an opportunity. In a year he was running a little boarding house in Salt Lake City, at the same time trying to interest some of the local boys in forming a vaudeville troupe. With two young men who had a certain flair for acting and a girl out of a cabaret, Bob went on the road through Utah and Wyoming. But he and his partners found it almost impossible to earn any money. Passing the hat at the end of a show yielded scarcely enough to pay their railroad fare. They were forced to quit.

In 1915 Bob was in the advertising business in Little Rock. In 1916 he sold street car ads and worked for a time for a magazine. During the first week after the United States declared war in 1917 Bob enlisted in the marine corps, being sent to the training camp at Paris Island, South Carolina. There he soon distinguished himself by making the highest score in his battalion on the rifle range. He was kept at Paris Island as rifle coach, but utilized his spare time in organizing a jazz band. His superiors needed him in the training camp because he was such a rare rifle coach, but when his band began to attract crowds they realized that the marines in France needed his music more. So he was sent to France as the leader of the official six-piece marine corps jazz band, playing the bazooka.

He played the bazooka before the king of Spain three times, and on returning to New York got a job in a night club on Broadway at $150 a week. Feeling that success was his at last, Bob took another job in the Beaux Arts night club in Atlantic City, and then bought a concession on the boardwalk. Through a gambling game he invented he cleaned up $8,000 in six weeks in 1921.

In 1922 Bob's luck took a turn for the worse. He bought a big dance hall right beside the boardwalk and lost every nickel he had made the summer before. He was left flat broke just as a baby was about to be born to his wife. There seemed nothing to do but hit the road, so Bob took a race track auto game he had bought once on the boardwalk and ran it in country fairs and carnival shows. By taking every job he could get, whether after-dinner speaking in a country club or running a "hoopla" game in a hamburger joint, Bob gradually got out of debt. For years every winter he went on the vaudeville circuits in New York in blackface parts with a partner named West.

When the talkies replaced the silent movies the bottom dropped out of vaudeville. So Bob Burns, the resourceful man from Arkansas, went to Hollywood to try his hand in the movies. He got a contract with Fox, but spent nearly a year waiting for a part to play. During this time he played golf frequently, using the money he got from the Fox company. Even when he later was given parts in three Will Rogers pictures—"The Connecticut Yankee," "Mr. Skits," and "Young as You Feel"—he had to spend much time waiting between pictures. Chafing at this idleness, even on a salary, Bob one day asked Will Rogers at the lunch table what he did with his waiting time.

"I always keep workin' at something," replied Will, "no matter how little I get for it. If I was you, Bob, I'd sure keep a-goin' at something. Take any offer you can get, but you got to keep workin' if yer goin' to git some place."

On Will's advice Bob began giving free speeches in clubs, and, after a successful audition on Los Angeles' station KFI, he broadcast regularly for nearly a year without pay, at the same time, of course, continuing his work in the films.

At the end of a year Bob was receiving $7.50 per radio performance. Bing Crosby, listening in on Bob, liked him so much that he wanted him to join his program. The sponsor, however, wasn't interested, because Bob was comparatively unknown.

So last spring, determined to do or die, Bob collected what money he could and went to New York. He was after a big name for himself. He went to an agency and asked for an audition for the Rudy Vallee program. He had no trouble in getting an audition, in which he proved his versatility as a comic commentator by offering to gab away on any subject for any length of time at the drop of a hat.

Put on the air with Vallee, he knew he was arriving at last after his thirty-odd years of struggle. Four times he took part in Vallee shows, and shortly afterward Paul Whiteman began using him every third week. Then he was booked in theaters at more than $1,000 a week, and got three movie offers. And last fall, when the name of Bob Burns was really beginning to mean something in America, Bing Crosby's sponsor had to reconsider and let Bing have his way. So today Bob Burns' drawl is becoming familiar to every radio listener—he is the man from "Arkinsaw" who "bazooked" his way to the top.

BEN JONSON, English dramatist, was born in Westminster in 1573 (?) and died Aug. 6, 1637. As a boy he was put to his stepfather's trade of bricklayer. In 1598 he produced his famous comedy, "Every Man in His Humour," in which Shakespeare played one of the parts. He wrote a number of other plays and numerous lyrics and epistles. Among the latter is found the well known poem, set to music, "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes." This is almost a literal translation from the Greek author Philostratus.

DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup,
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise
Doth ask a drink divine;
But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honoring thee
As giving it a hope that there
It could not withered be;
But thou thereon didst only breathe
And sent'st it back to me;
Since when it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of itself, but thee!

Aga Khan's Income 3 Million Year

India Alone Contributes $2,500,000

By LLOYD FANGEL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

London, England.

THE annual income of the Aga Khan, spiritual leader of the Ismaili sect of the Mohammedan faith, is at least $3,000,000 a year.

From the faithful in India alone he receives approximately $2,500,000 annually. Most of this goes to charitable work among his followers. He has besides a tremendous income of his own from investments in real estate, and which he has multiplied by shrewd business deals.

The Koran, or Moslems' Bible, enjoins the followers to pay zakat [poor rate] to the spiritual head at the rate of 2½ per cent on their incomes. The city of Karachi, where the aga was born, sends the aga $10,000 a month regularly, it is said. When he stayed there for twenty-six days, some years ago, he received in that time the sum of $500,000 in the form of gifts, and when he went to India recently he got $55,000 in two hours!

His race horses, according to a recent estimate, are worth about $5,000,000, his vast investments many millions more, and when he was single it was the custom for his personal servant to give him $400 every morning for pocket money! Quite an income for a man who is regarded as holy as a pope to millions.

During that time it might be expected with many men that a bit of philandering might not be out of the question. In the case of the Aga Khan, however, he was most careful to keep his reputation above reproach. No one ever suggested anything out of the way with regard to Miss Blain, a very beautiful and capable young woman who has been his private secretary for more than twelve years. She writes all his correspondence by hand, in her own handwriting, never using a typewriter.

It was also accepted without comment that he should have had a woman caddy for quite some time, who went, at a magnificent salary, to every part of the globe where the aga thought he would like to have some golf.

Only once did the name of the Aga Khan become definitly tied up with indiscretion. It was in 1934 that Germaine d'Anglemont was haled before the Paris Assizes on a charge of murder. She was alleged to have been a spy, this handsome 45 year old blonde woman, and when her quarters were searched by the police it was found that she had kept a very careful listed file index of her various love affairs. This showed that she had been showered with gifts, jewels, furs, cars, horses, houses, and clothes by diplomats, Persian and Indian princes, Chilean and Argentinian millionaires, barristers, and a royal duke.

When confronted with a magnificent 16 carat diamond, and asked if this had been a present from the Aga Khan, among other lavish presents, Mme. d'Anglemont nodded her head in assent. But there has never been any statement or proof that the Aga Khan ever committed one of the greatest of Moslem sins—that of having improper relations with an "infidel." This would have been a most serious thing for him to do, for though in most cases "the aga can do no wrong," there are certain rules of conduct which, if even he broke them, would do much to destroy the faith of his world wide following.

His faithful millions are fanatically angry at the suggestion that the Aga Khan drinks, which his religion forbids. An Indian newspaper once published a picture showing him in a Paris restaurant with a bottle before him on the table.

The followers threatened libel proceedings. The newspaper pointed out that the bottle might have contained mineral water, that wine is put on French restaurant tables, that the aga need not have drunk any of the wine. The followers took no notice of these statements, and actually took up the matter with the government.

It is said that his followers are averse to having the aga's son, Aly Khan, as a possible heir to the position of being their spiritual head, because of the scandals he has been connected with. His mother was the Italian Princess Theresa, second wife of the Aga Khan. She died in 1926.

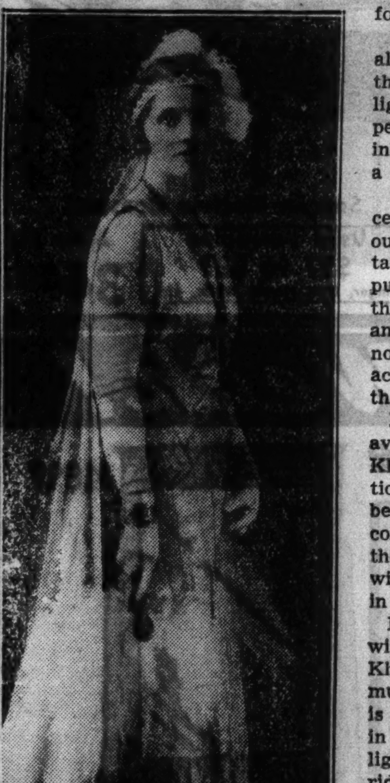
Being young, handsome, and with a huge annual income, Aly Khan has played around socially much more than the Ismailis think is right. That he should race about in fast cars, covered with extra lights and horns, and that he should ride in steeplechase races—these were not evil. But when Aly Khan was named co-respondent in the undefended divorce case brought by Loel Guinness (of the beer millions) against his wife, the daughter of Lord Churston, his father's followers found that he had overstepped the bounds of the rules of their faith.

The affairs of the Aly Khan were so notorious along the French Riviera that one of the local newspapers printed a story saying that the director of the casino at Cannes "hoped Aly Khan would drown himself the next time he bathed, because his love affairs were losing for the town its best English, French, and American clients."

"The latest thing we hear," continued the newspaper, "is that Aly is trying to steal the lady love of the prince of Wales, and this will mean disaster."

(Acme photo.)

Wife of Loel Guinness, the brewing millionaire. Aly Khan was named co-respondent when Guinness sued for divorce.



The Begum Aga Khan in the gown and jewels in which she was presented at the court of St. James's.

This was undoubtedly one of the main reasons why the Aga Khan was refused a kingdom in India in 1934. He had confidentially asked for some sort of temporal power, stating his reasons that he was of royal blood, that he had a greater number of followers than most rulers, and therefore he would like to know that his efforts for Great Britain had been recognized and appreciated. This request was refused, however, by the British government through Lord Willingdon, who was then viceroy of India, on the grounds that there was no kingdom available at that moment to turn over to him.

So the aga returned to England, concentrated his attention on his racing, was made an honorary member of the Jocky club, and led the field with his winnings on the tracks in that year, with the sum of $350,000.

It is small wonder that on the day in June, 1935, when his horse Bahram won the Derby, making the aga's second win (his first was in 1930), a knot of racegoers were discussing the horse's owner. The only one of them who seemed to have the faintest idea about his unique position in the Mohammedan world observed, "The aga's a holy man." To which a companion replied: "Holy man, you say? Well, in racing he's a holy terror!"

One of the astounding statements made by the Aga Khan is that, though he has three times headed the list of winning race horse owners since the war, he does not gamble.

"I do not gamble, for I do not believe in chance. A man must make certain of things by his own efforts, by the sweat of his brow, and leave the rest to God. He gives success."

One cannot help feeling that there is something ironical about his statement—he racing his horses and spending money lavishly, with his millions of followers who regard him as semi-divine sending him part of their every income and possession, what they have had to "make certain of by their own efforts, by the sweat of their brows."

This year marks the Aga Khan's fiftieth as head of the Ismailis, and the celebrations and ceremonies are being carried on with more than oriental splendor. One of the biggest features of the jubilee was the weighing of the aga against gold. Since he weighs about 220 pounds, it is estimated that the amount of gold needed to balance him had a value of approximately $75,000, part of which is for distribution among the poor.

Entertainments and feasts held on a grand scale started soon after the new year, when deputations of Ismaili Mohammedans from Persia, Afghanistan, central Asia, and other parts of the world, wearing their picturesque national costumes, came to pay homage to the Aga Khan, their spiritual head, the splendor of the many colored dresses and headdresses producing a dazzling scene. On one of the early days twelve thousand woman followers, clad in silk pajamas of wonderful hues, gave a huge tea party to their leader. The Aga Khan himself, for the ceremonial occasion, was arrayed in a robe of purple, covered with decorations and insignia, wearing a green turban. He was surrounded by followers wearing the picturesque Khoja headdress, a gold snake around their foreheads, and long coats.

During the jubilee period thousands will be fed from the kitchen of the Aga hall, for according to the Moslem tenets any one who comes inside the gates of a man's property must be given food and drink. When one realizes that during ordinary nonjubilee years it was not unusual to feed ten thousand there in one day, the extent of the aga's hospitality for this year will be tremendous.

Durbars will be held, to which people of all sects from all over the orient will come, with festivities lasting well on into the night, at which time the buildings belonging to the aga will be illuminated. The house in which he was born, at Karachi, will be turned into a most up to date maternity hospital, which will be the most important of the many medical centers and clinics that are being opened this year under the direction of the Aga Khan. Thirty thousand medals have been struck in honor of the jubilee, these for distribution in the aga's schools all over India for excellence in studies.

This has all been done by the golden jubilee committee of the Khoja community. Money is no consideration to the Khojas, for they are extremely wealthy people in India, containing in their ranks most of the cotton princes of Bombay.

The most interesting feature in the jubilee celebrations was the aga's ceremonial bath, scented with the original attar found in the bath of the great Mogul queen Mumtaz, in whose memory was built that wonder of the world, the Taj Mahal. This precious attar was acquired for a fabulous price from a Persian merchant by the rich Khoja followers of the Aga Khan.

On the night of the bath ceremony a grand procession, miles long, set out from the palace to the pearl mosque. The coach, which is plated with gold, was drawn by the Aga Khan's wonderful horses, which won races during the year in different parts of India.

As the thousands prostrated themselves before him, the water from his ceremonial bath was sprinkled over them, as the supreme blessing from their representative of God on earth, the direct descendant of the prophet Mohammed, who founded their faith.

On that evening the Aga Khan received several million dollars in religious tribute.

Behrman Gives Broadway Another Philosophical Comedy

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—We can say for the Broadway theater that it is at least more varied than the weather. This particular week of which I would inform you, for example, began with Ina Claire and Osgood Perkins being propelled by the power of their individual attractions and Sam Behrman's wit through a philosophical comedy called "End of Summer."

It also included a brutish social document, "Come Angel Band," a weird something called "Halloween," detailing the struggles of a reincarnated Salem witch renewing her allegiance to a reincarnated Satan; a grim study of those wild children of the depression who have been flocking in such hobo jungles as Jim Tully knew, called "Searching for the Sun"; a mystery melodrama concerned with Chinese devils, "The Devil of Pei-Ling," and two WPA project dramas, financed by the government, one an historical episode play, "Jefferson Davis," and the other a criticism of our circusy murder trials, "American Holiday."

The average in entertainment was only fair, however, though Mr. Behrman's "End of Summer" rose considerably above that grading. Herein the author continues upon the philosophic way he started in "Rain from Heaven," trying his best to compose social issues and problems of the moment. Behrman is as fair minded as Galsworthy and as insistently curious as Shaw, and the trend of his thinking makes for good, though perhaps a trifle heady, entertainment.

In the play Miss Claire, as Leonie Frothingham, represents, in our present muddled society, the class that in other days was referred to as the idle rich. "Isn't it a pity I have no mind?" she queries, brightly, as one who "has made a career of flirtation." Mr. Perkins is one of her recent conquests, a psychoanalyst, who would marry her for her money though he really prefers her attractive daughter.

"End of Summer" is more particularly concerned with the problem of Will Dexter, a young radical just out of college and keen to rebuild the world. Will is deeply in love with Paula Frothingham, Leonie's daughter, but Paula is so disgustingly rich that he cannot bring himself to accept marriage on her terms—that she should be permitted to help in any work he would like to undertake. He knows he could never live rich and think poor, and he must remain true to his principles, which ethical loyalty threatens to mar both their lives.

There are two hours of literate and interesting discussion in "End of Summer," the attack being made from many angles. Also considerable static drama. At the end of the evening Paula is still in pursuit of happiness and her Will; Leonie has seen her psychoanalyst exposed as a cheating fortune hunter; her husband, from whom she has been separated for some years, married to another woman, and the only interest she can tie to is that of helping one of Will's college friends publish a radical magazine.

Shepperd Strudwick, the youthful crusader in "Both Your Houses" and later in "Let Freedom Ring," is also the troubled radical of "End of Summer," and Doris Dudley came from a hospital to play Paula. After the opening she went back to the hospital and Phyllis Welch took over the rôle. The performances of a perfectly selected Theater Guild cast are all good.

A second serious minded playwright, Dan Totheroh of California, was also present this week with a problem of youth and its current illustrations. His play is called "Searching for the Sun," and it is concerned with a group of wild youth spawned by the depression and roaming the world in search of an answer to their problems. They live in jungles and travel in box cars, as did the hoboes that Jim Tully put into "Beggars of Life" and Maxwell Anderson lifted out and put into the play, "Outside Looking In." They are younger and less hardened than the Tully-Anderson hoboes, but they are just as dirty, just as puzzled and unhappy.

It is difficult for a playwright to make this sort of drama believable. Anderson, in that same "Outside Looking In," came closest. All hobo plays that have followed have seemed synthetic and stagy by comparison. I have little sympathy with them, and can see but little good for the reforms they would inspire stemming from them. No audience is ever moved to thoughts of social service by tales they do not believe. Yet there is no denying the sincerity of the playwrights.

Society Takes a Mad Whirl—and Subsides

Few Days of Hilarity Precede the Studied Dignity of Lenten Weeks.

By Cousin Eve.

WHY does one laugh when news comes from far flung Jamaica telling of stormy seas and icy weather? Why does it amuse that rain falls daily in cold showers on Palm Beach and steam heat is de rigueur at Miami?

Ash Wednesday was preceded by a Shrove Tuesday that taxed one's stamina to the uttermost. The merry-go-round whirled frenziedly in the last moments before the period of sackcloth and ashes.

Consul General René Weiller of France was to speak before "Les Jeunes" of the Alliance Française. This was something not to miss, for the amiable and gallant diplomat is a real literateur. He has a magnificent style and also a light wit. His subject was "The Bonapartes in America," and nobody winked in the large library of the alliance as the plot thickened with Betsy Patterson's marriage to Jerome Bonaparte in Baltimore and the opposition of Napoleon. The life of Joseph Bonaparte was equally exciting, for after a few years in America, he decided to bury all his wealth in a lonely woodland spot, of which his agent and trusted friend shared the secret. Joseph Bonaparte was advised to invest these riches in Philadelphia land at that time, and, said the consul general, if he had, the Bonaparte fortune would have been the peer of any in this country. But after a few years the king of Naples sent over, and had his friend dig up the treasure, which was a mass of jewels, safely hid. Mr. Weiller, during his stay in Philadelphia, made a study of the historic houses and documents concerning these two brothers of Napoleon.

Father Hubbard Gives Dramatic View of Alaska.

Sitting on the dais with the speaker, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick and Miss Fanny McPherson, president of the younger set of the Alliance. Mrs. Charles Dewey was the invisible goddess presiding over the enormous chocolate pot sent in by a caterer, for gouter was to be the purely French combination, chocolat et brioches. However, the caterer's idea of chocolat was not the French idea, so Mrs. Dewey, founder of this young wing of the Alliance, stood by until the beverage became richly dark. I don't know quite who was in the audience, among the pretty young things, but present were Mrs. Ralph James, Robert Hall McCormick, Mme. Weiller, Mrs. Ralph Winston, and François Allabrune, the agreeable young blond vice consul just arrived from Calcutta. A native of Limoges.

A dozen guests of Miss Gertrude McCarthy at luncheon that day, at the Lake Shore Drive, had an unexpected look-in at Alaska. The "glacier priest," Father Bernard Hubbard, was lecturing before the members of the Chapel guild of the Cenacle on his ninth trip to our northernmost land. His pictures were marvelous.

INTERESTED IN SERVICE CLUB'S BENEFIT

Mrs. George B. Cross, an ex-president of the Kenwood Social Service club, is one of the women interested in the benefit the club will give on April 18 at the Palmer house. It will be a supper-dance and Mrs. Frederick Herendeen is chairman of the committee planning the gay party. The club contributes to the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Who would have dreamed that Alaska was so orderly and nice? Father Hubbard is a burly athlete, and the movies showed him doing fantastic deeds of daring among ice pinnacles, crossing crevasses of glaciers, and flying over a country of ice, which, oddly enough, has been warm and mild this winter. The motor roads looked perfect, and the pine forest and lakes and waterfalls made one fancy it—at least as the subject for a pre-Lenten lecture. Rome has just sent for the glacier priest.

Alec Miller's Lecture Needs Historical Background.

Two illustrated lectures in one short winter afternoon! The second was at the Casino, where the English Speaking union presented Alec Miller of Chipping Camden, Gloucestershire, England. I had a hunch this wouldn't be exciting. But the membership of the English Speakers is chic; one meets there people one likes, and so one takes a chance. Fortunately for me I was motoring in Gloucestershire last summer, and saw all the little villages and houses and countrysides which Mr. Miller had photographed. If he had presented his subject from the historical side and not merely through pictures of houses, the lecture might have been more thrilling. The speaker has lived all his life in the Cotswold hills and knows them perhaps too intimately to describe them.

A roaring log fire in the great hall of the Polish consulate in Lake Shore drive had a merry party in honor of the return of Mr. and Mrs. Waclaw Gavronski, who have been in Asheville, N. C., all winter. They are a charming, handsome couple, who, alas, have not yet learned English. Poland bought two years ago the former McClurg house on the Lake Shore drive, one of the loveliest in town. It is nice to have it occupied by people who live so delightfully, with a wealth of flowers, bright lights, log fires, and lavish hospitality. In the dining room a huge central table fairly groaned with elaborate hors d'oeuvres, gorgeous cakes, sandwiches, and sweets, while soft voiced foreign servants thread their way with trays of hot drinks.

Poles to Sing Polish Opera Here on March 15.

Nearly all the consular corps was there: England, France, Italy, Germany, Belgium, Hungary, Mr. and Mrs. Baumann of Denmark, and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Moissant Griffiths, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Miss Gertrude McCarthy, Mrs. Rend Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meeker, and many more. Josef Staniewicz and the other young vice consuls of Poland all speak English and figure in our local society.

A favorite Polish opera, "Hawelka," is to be given at the Civic opera on March 15—with leader and singers from Warsaw. Last year it had a succès fou.

To Mrs L. Hamilton McCormick, most amiable and handsome of women, nice things often happen. Dining the other night at the flower laden table where Col. and Mrs. William Thuis' guests stretched in one gay vista, we were speaking of Edward VIII. and the promise of a lively reign. Victoria's influence impinged upon the reign of Edward VII. and George V., but it seems probable that under Edward VIII. British society will escape the tradition of Victorian rigidity, after seeing mourning banished from Ascot.

Mrs. McCormick has a vivid souvenir of King George. She and her late husband were present at the royal garden party at Buckingham palace, when presto! lords in waiting and equerries made a lane for the king, and the McCormicks found themselves face to face with the monarch. He bowed charmingly, and Hamilton McCormick always full of savoir faire said, "Your Majesty, may I present my wife, Mrs. Hamilton McCormick of Chicago?" King George shook hands cordially, and said that his son Edward had just been having a most interesting visit in Chicago. Whereupon Mrs. McCormick said, "Our young people have had much pleasure from the visit of the prince of Wales."

"I fear they have done far too much for him," said his majesty. "He has certainly been having too good a time. We must get him home again and set him down to hard work."

"I think your majesty will not find that so easy," said Mrs. McCormick. "I have three sons and know all about that."

The king laughed heartily, and they spoke of other things. Leander J. McCormick has for years been a close friend of Edward, who, a year ago at Kitzbuehl, during the winter sports, took most of his meals with the Leander McCormicks.

Thwarted Love Affairs Keep Edward VIII. a Bachelor.

Edward VIII. is the most romantic figure in the world. A blond young bachelor king who has sworn that never would he marry. In a moment of sheer folly several weeks ago, I wrote that someday I would tell the story of Edward's bachelorhood. After all it is a simple enough annal of the heart, but I have had since no peace from others yearning to share the secret.

The story is that Edward went on a house party years ago in England. There he met an exquisite young English girl with eyes like pansies and fell madly in love with her. It was the great love of his life. As his enslavement grew, he determined to marry her and spoke to his father. The young lady belonged to a great family, but was not of royal blood, so the marriage was out of the question, prohibited in fact, by English law.

The young prince of Wales, in a fury of disappointed love, swore he would marry not at all. The young lady married another suitor, had a family, and is known as the Hon. Mrs. Dudley Ward. A deep friendship has continued for years between the young prince and Mrs. Ward, who was the great beauty of his circle. He had many flirtations and romances, but this was the love that never waned. Two years ago Mrs. Ward's daughter Penelope made her bow at court. She is a beautiful girl, lovely as her mother, and the prince of Wales was to be present this debut night at the court. For this reason Penelope was not presented by Mrs. Ward, but by a relative. The Hon. Mrs. Ward did not intend that the world's prince charming should realize that she had a grownup daughter, lovely as she was in the dear days of long ago.

Mrs. Ball of Paris Says Beauty Wanes at 32.

Speaking of beauty reminds me of Mrs. Augustus Eddy's tea last week in her studio, 76 East Walton place. Mrs. Orville Taylor and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf were looking lovely and dispensing at the tea table, edibles which, if eaten, would nullify all the combined efforts of all the beauty experts in town. Mrs. Eddy, handsome, springlike, in leafy green dress and chapeau, introduced her pièce de résistance.

Mrs. Ball of Paris, a tiny person who gave a pep talk on beauty. This was highly amusing and evidently the same given by her in the harems of Tunis and Morocco. I felt highly flattered, because these are the days, for some reason, when it isn't chic to look awfully bright. There were two lines of theory to this beauty address: The first for married women who having caught their man must learn how to keep him. According to Mme. Ball, this should be accomplished by feeding his eye with silhouettes and contours, rather than his stomach, which was the old fashioned American line—we all remember the slogan "Feed the brute."

For those wary spinsters who have not yet caught their man, there was much beauty advice, for it seems that at 32 one begins to fall to pieces and the hour of complete disintegration must be staved off. Forty the speaker found the heyday of life, and the denizens of harems among the most avid beauty culturists—competition is strong in the harems. Among the listeners, many young and pretty women, Mrs. Louis Sudler, Mrs. Peter Conners, Mrs. Wilbur C. Smith, Mrs. Press Hodgkins, Mrs. Bryan Reid.

Josef Israels Describes Rigors of Ethiopia.

On Monday the grand ball room of the Palmer house was filled by the Foreign Council to hear a chap named Josef Israels, home after war corresponding for six months in Ethiopia. He looked fat and fit, I must say.

The excitement over Ethiopia persists. I suppose because it may yet prove a second Sarajevo, and Anthony Eden the young spark who sets off the tinder heap with his flaming ambitions. Mr. Israels made a good picture of the country—towering mountains in the north up to 14,000 feet and dry for six months. Then it is wet in a big way for six months. There is no vegetation, only a sea of red mud. Mules, camels, and wheels are helpless in it.

In the south are deserts, Ogaden and Danakil "the hell bowl of creation." In this is working Gen. Graziani with his "hell on wheels" column. The famous Djibouti railroad was described as leading from the most desolate, dreary, dusty spots on earth, where mercury ranges to 140 degrees, up to a central plateau of marvelously lovely, fertile, rolling country. Traveling by railroad is not popular with voyageurs because the natives sit out in the open at night and use the lighted car windows for target practice, sniping an occasional traveler.

Correspondents Help Finance War.

Haile Selassie has a comfortable palace at Addis Ababa, with a room for sound reels and an excellent French chef. The war correspondents have helped to finance Ethiopia in the war, paying out fifty-eight cents a word and often sending 60,000 words a day. Every country on earth had a correspondent there. A Belgian military staf is conducting the defense, and the emperor has a one man braintrust, an American named Everett Colson. The nicest thing they can say to you in Ethiopia is "Good morning, you are looking much older today."

England, said Mr. Israels, is seeing that Ethiopia gets supplies, and Italy is avoiding the shelling of Addis Ababa and other large centers, to avoid killing other nationals.

His slides were magnificent, and some were amusing. Once on the porch of the movie house he caught three leashed lions waiting for their black masters, who were inside enjoying the show. The Ethiopian boy scouts were nice little pickaninnies, and the negus is terribly proud of his jails. To have elegant prisons nicely furnished is one of his ambitions.

Countess Giulio Bolognesi was there early and Mrs. John Pitcher, Mrs. Huntington Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hinde, Mrs. Philip Miller, Mrs. Quincy Wright, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Monroe. Tomorrow at noon Senator Lewis will speak, the cherished Jimmy Hamsey, for whose talk a rush of reservations.

COLLEGE GIRL TO WED

Miss Mary Eleanor Falk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Falk, is engaged to be married to Ross Bryant Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson of Detroit. Miss Falk is a graduate of Ferry Hall and attended Northwestern university, where she was a member of Chi Omega sorority. Mr. Johnson attended Shattuck Military academy and Northwestern.

Bobby Jones at Georgia Resort for Golf Tourney

The entire month of March and the early part of April are dedicated to the devotees of golf and tennis. Several tournaments are planned.

AUGUSTA, GA. After attending golf matches at Florida resorts, Robert Tyre Jones and a party of friends have arrived to spend the week-end here and to enjoy a series of practice rounds at the famed Augusta National Golf club where the masters' invitation golf tourney will be held April 2-5. This tournament is the only competitive golf in which Bobby Jones now participates. Having made below par scores on several Florida courses, Bobby Jones promises to be one of the leaders in the colorful field of golfers who will take part in the masters' tourney.

Another important tourney will be the fifth annual Augusta women's invitation match, which will be played at the county club. Many of the leading feminine golfers throughout the United States will meet here the week of March 23 to compete for the title won last year by Marion Miley.

The South Atlantic states tennis tournament will be held here for the eighth season at the country club on March 26-29. The leading ranking players have been invited to participate.

Among the smaller tournaments to be held in Augusta is the Bon Air cup match, which will be played over the 18 hole golf course at the country club March 2. Trophies will be given the winner of the match play and a medal will be awarded the possessor of low score in the qualifying round.

More news of Chicago clubs and club women will be found in the other Society section.

By Ruth DeYoung.

AN early spring vacation is in store for a half dozen leading Illinois clubwomen who will travel to Miami the end of April to attend the council meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Preparations for the meeting are being perfected rapidly with a full program of speakers and activities that will have for its theme, "Education for Living."

Through the representatives in Miami clubwomen throughout the country will vote on a resolution approving the principle and general purpose of a bill introduced in congress by Representative Wesley E. Disney of Oklahoma. This bill provides for the establishment of a National Academy of Public Affairs. Such approval was voted by the board of directors of the General Federation in January with a recommendation that the state federations study the purposes of the bill and take informed action at Miami.

One of the highlights of the program will be a coast to coast broadcast in which Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, General Federation president, will be one of the principal speakers. British Revive Adam Fireplaces in Drawing Room

LONDON. Now if any one wants a real bona fide work of art to grace drawing rooms, there is nothing which adds the distinction like an Adam fireplace. And a goodly number of them is coming on the market with demolition of Adelphi terrace. A firm of Fleet street auctioneers is to sell all the marble and wooden chimney pieces and other products of the architectural genius of the famous Scotsmen, the Adam brothers. The pieces are embodied in the houses of Adelphi terrace, John street, Robert street, and Adam street. The auction will be held in April on the premises of the Savage club.

It is predicted that there will be a special scramble for the chimney pieces, Adam or not, which are in the house occupied by Bernard Shaw. Some people would, in the spirit of Shaw himself, like to own the great wrought iron gates which protected that great man from unsolicited visitors. They were built so that it was impossible to climb them, and curved outward at the top to present added difficulty.

Light Gray Pottery Adds Springlike Note to Decore

GRAY is one of the smartest colors for spring not only in women's fashions but in decorative accessories for the home. One large Chicago store is showing some unusually attractive pieces of pottery in a heavenly tint of light gray. There are small urns and vases for flowers, shallow bowls and dishes, candlesticks and ash trays. These are made in Dundee, Ill. They are not at all expensive.

Complaint That Mate Is Cruel Often Is Alibi

By Doris Blake.

SOMETIMES the unreasonableness of the sex known as feminine is more than even this woman can fathom.

The way certain wives of the species unreasonable can build up a case of abuse and tyranny for themselves is remarkable in view of the fact that in the same letter they will reveal a fancy for some man who has nothing to do with the legal relationship.

Proving that when a woman wants an alibi for her own behavior, it is no trouble on earth for her to work up charges against her husband. This is said not on only one instance of the peculiar mental irregularity of the type of woman revealed to me confidentially. There is a surprising number of women who can sit down and write out page after page of cruelties suffered from husbands. Then, with the most complete naïveté, they disclose an affair that is being conducted behind the "jealous" husband's back.

A typical case is unfolded here. Writes one of the victims [?] of a husband's tyranny: "Dear Miss Blake: I am a woman of 33, and I have been married for eight years. My husband used to be all right in every way, but during the last year or so he has taken a turn for the worst kind of conduct toward me. He does not want me to dress well. He is so jealous and afraid that some other fellow will think I am attractive. If we go to a dance, he is unhappy if I seem to be having a good time. He claims that he loves me, but he accuses me of having affairs with other men whom I scarcely know. He makes a terrible fuss in front of people. The next day he is over it.

"About a year ago a young man came to board with my sister-in-law. She is a widow. She is my brother's wife. He saw my husband put on a scene with me one day which he thought unreasonable, and he felt sorry for me. So he asked me to go riding with him, which I did. My husband objected to my seeing this fellow every time I went out with him. I told him the fellow was only teaching me to drive, at which he slapped me down."

If we restrain from giving a hip-hip-hooray for the husband with the gumption to resent the tall "driving" tale it is only because we don't want to see him in jail. All the rubbish about a husband not wanting to see his wife dressed up for fear she'll have a too good time, or be admired by his fellow men is just too much to ask us to bear.

These days, if a woman finds herself married to a boor, goodness knows there are enough avenues of escape for her. She doesn't have to stand being slapped down or knocked around. So, when she does, there's something else influencing her stay and likely it is the good "meal ticket" the husband represents while the woman has her fling at a cheap flirtation.

We beg you women to use your common sense and don't try to cover up a ridiculous flirtation with charges of a husband's cruelty. Yes, we'll grant there are cruel husbands and jealous ones and mean ones. But, unfortunately, their wives are not the kind of women who run out with other men. They are not the kind who use the husband's bad temper as alibi for loose behavior on their own part.

When Chicago Was Young

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Oct. 30, 1886.

DEAR Julia: Will and a dinner guest, Francis A. Hoffmann, are sitting over their coffee and cigars in the dining room. I have enjoyed hearing their table talk, but now they are on economic questions and I find myself in deep water trying to follow, so I have excused myself and come into the library to write to you.

Mr. Hoffmann is a German-American newspaper man, now of Wisconsin, though his earlier life was passed in Chicago and its vicinity, where he has been clergyman, political leader, banker, teacher, lawyer . . . a bewildering array of occupations, in all of which he has been a leader. He and Will have much in common, as both had much to do with the Republican party in its first years. Thus they have had a great time this evening, exchanging stories of Lincoln and Douglas and war times. Now they are discussing farming, for Mr. Hoffmann has become a writer for farm papers . . . the German press . . . under the name of Hans Buschbauer. His broad knowledge and ripe experience, together with his kindly nature, make him a most agreeable companion, and Will was delighted to encounter him at the Grand Pacific hotel today and to bring him home for dinner.

A story of the early days of the Free Soil movement which Will drew from him at table concerned a great meeting of German-Americans here in February, 1854, held to protest against Douglas' acceptance of the amendment to repeal the Missouri compromise. The opposition forces tried to break up the meeting by cutting off the gas by which the hall was lighted. In the sudden darkness which ensued, and which always makes a crowd panicky, the trumpet voice of Mr. Hoffmann was heard: "When I sit in darkness the Lord shall be my light"; "The Lord shall enlighten my darkness," and other verses, of which there are so many in the Bible about darkness.

Meantime some quick witted person had found out where the gas had been turned off and had restored the lights, upon which the ready exclergyman called out: "He hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." Mr. Hoffmann's early training as a Lutheran preacher had enabled him to think of just the right texts for the occasion and had brought order out of what might have been a serious panic. How great an advantage speakers have who know their Bibles, for there's a text for almost any situation that may arise!

It was at this same massmeeting that Mr. Hoffmann spoke in German to his audience, telling them how he had been a Democrat for fourteen years; had had an admiration amounting to adoration for Douglas, but how he now felt he must leave him because he could not feel his stand on the slavery question right. It was an eloquent speech, and Will says every German-American who heard it on that memorable night went away dedicated to the anti-slavery cause. It was, indeed, because of their steadfastness that Lincoln was elected. So the men said tonight. Mr. Hoffmann told us that the German farmers of Cook and Du Page counties converted to Republican doctrins that night have never wavered in their loyalty.

As lieutenant governor, when Richard Yates was governor of Illinois, Mr. Hoffmann was one on whom Lincoln depended during the war. Afterward he founded a bank in Chicago and still later helped the Illinois Central railway to settle German immigrants in downstate Illinois. There are towns there today with such names as Sigel, Augsburg, Strasburg, and Teutopolis which attest his success in bringing these thrifty people to Illinois.

Francis A. Hoffman, a Chicago political leader of the Civil war period.

About ten or eleven years ago he decided to quit his busy career here and go to the country. He bought a large tract of land in the Rock River valley, near Jefferson, Wis., where he has lived quietly ever since. Will says his place, Riverside Farm, is beautiful. He loves horticulture and has some fine specimens of trees and shrubs there. A most useful man to his country! Lovingly,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Francis Arnold Hoffmann [1822-1903] gave devoted service to his adopted country and to the state of Illinois. His grandchildren are Robin E. Hoffman, Richard Yates Hoffman, Charles G. Hoffmann, and Frank Hoffmann of Chicago, Mrs. Clarence M. Service of Springfield, Ill., and Mrs. Minna Nehrling of Florida. As is the case in many names of foreign origin, some of the descendants spell the name in one way, some in another. This accounts for the difference in the spelling of the name "Hoffmann" above.

WILL VISIT IN NEW YORK

Miss Madalon Search is one of the attractive young women who made their formal bows to society this winter. She also was one of the most feted. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J Gist Search of State parkway, and, since she did not choose to continue her studies after finishing at the Girls' Latin school last June, she has been at home for all the debutante festivities. She is planning a trip to New York soon.

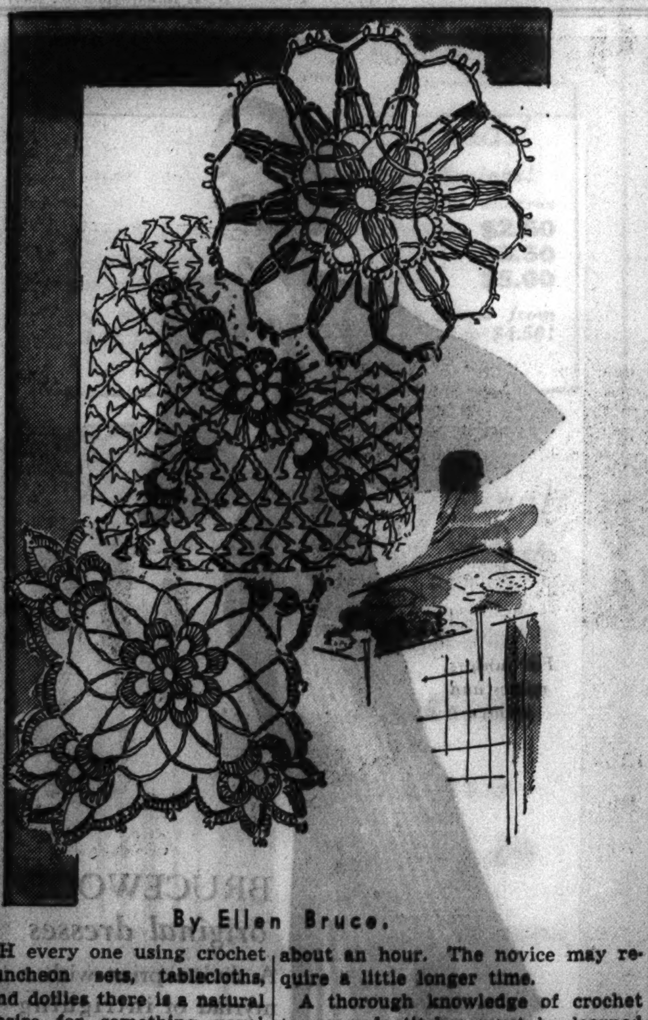
Crochet Medallions Dainty in Tablecloth or Luncheon Set



By Ellen Bruce.

WITH every one using crochet luncheon sets, tablecloths, and doilies there is a natural desire for something novel . . . something which is dainty and in keeping with the furniture upon which it is placed. The medallions illustrated today are crocheted of fine thread, either white or ecru. These may be used for lace tablecloths if such is your particular desire, or for luncheon sets, when the medallions are joined with a spiderweb pattern or a narrow band of filet. The plate mat, for a luncheon set, measuring ten by fifteen inches requires twenty-four medallions with each medallion measuring two and one-half inches square.

The expert crochet worker can make one of these medallions in about an hour. The novice may require a little longer time.

A thorough knowledge of crochet terms and stitches must be learned before starting any of these pieces. Double trebles are used in the medallion at the bottom, picots are popular in the middle one, and single and double crochet is used in the top. A little concentration is necessary until the crochet worker becomes familiar with pattern, and then the rest is easy.

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instruction for crocheting the three medallions illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Amicie Whyte's Wedding Lovely London Event

Bride Wears Velvet Gown of Medieval Charm at Marriage to R. Walter.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON

ONE of the important society weddings of the early season was that of Amicie de Burgh Whyte, granddaughter of Mr. Frederick Vaux and the late Mrs. Vaux of Chicago. Her marriage to Roderick Walter took place at St. Peter's, Eaton Square, with the bishop of Southwick performing the ceremony.

MRS. RODERICK WALTER.

It was an all white wedding, with the exception of the single scarlet amaryllis which each bridesmaid carried and the spot of gold at their waists. The bride's gown of white velvet was of medieval inspiration, the train cut in one with the skirt, long tight sleeves, and a broad pearl-studded girdle. She wore a wimple for a veil, and with it a small pearl crown.

Eight bridesmaids followed her to the altar but, in accordance with the English custom, there were no ushers. The bridesmaids wore all white gowns of the same medieval conception, but of the new French material called poult. In contrast to the bride, their girdles were of gold kid embroidered with pearls. They wore their hair in a charming new style, confined in a net of white silk with a small gold crown.

Miss Joan de Burgh Whyte, the bride's sister, and Miss Inez Walter, the bridegroom's sister, were among the bridesmaids. Others were Cherry Pinchard, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Pinchard, formerly of Cincinnati; Esther Grant, sister of Lady Hamilton Grant; Griselda Gould, Patricia Benn, Viola Calmettes, and Heloise Des Falles.

Persons Prominent in British Society Present.

At the church, among the congregation, were Prince and Princess Wiaemsky, the oldest daughter of Gordon H. Selfridge Sr.; Lord and Lady Decies; the Earl and Countess of Lytton; Viscount and Viscountess of Exmouth, and Mrs. Percy Hollins, formerly of Chicago, whose mother, Mrs. Halberg, still lives in that city.

The wedding reception was at the American Women's club in Grosvenor street, the home of an organization of which Mrs. de Burgh Whyte for many years has been an active and important officer. From there the bride and bridegroom left to spend their honeymoon motoring in Spain.

Young Couple to Reside in Jubilee Place, Chelsea.

Since their engagement the young couple has been studying all the practical problems of a home, and they have chosen and furnished one in Jubilee place, Chelsea. Amicie has been taking cookery and housewifery lessons for several months.

On her father's, as well as on her mother's side, Amicie has many interesting connections. She is the umpteenth Amicie in the Whyte family, the first Amicie having been the first countess of Leicester, in the 14th century. The founder of the family was Sir Nicholas Whyte, who accompanied Strong Bow to Ireland in 1169, and thereafter his descendants for several centuries occupied Leixlip castle near Dublin. The Whytes also claim descent from the earls of Clanrickarde, from whom the earls of Harewood also claim descent.

Mrs. de Burgh Whyte Is Subject of Britain.

Mrs. de Burgh Whyte accepted English nationality on her marriage to Mr. William de Burgh Whyte, who was for four years director of the British war mission to the United States. He was at one time engineer on the Pennsylvania tunnel out of New York. He is a graduate of Columbia university and is one of the 50 [only] holders of the University medal. In London he is associated frequently with that other famous American engineer, Mr. Chester Beatty.

Mr. Roderick Walter is the great-grandson of the man who founded the London Times and his father, Mr. John Walter, is one of the chief proprietors today. Mr. Walter only recently was called to the bar. He went to Eton and from there to Cambridge.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

The unblemished, beautifully textured skin is one of the most important phases of beauty, but such beauty ills as acne fall into the province of the medical profession rather than that of the beauty adviser. Sufferers from acne, whether masculine or feminine, young or mature, are earnestly advised to pin their faith on medical advice.

[TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

THE time has come, as everybody knows that the famous walrus said, for us to clarify our position on one beauty problem for our readers. We would just adore to set ourselves up as one who knows all, sees all, and can tell you what the weather will be a year from now. But modesty and honesty pull us up pretty sharply.

Medical Care Only Solution to the Problem of Acne.

The one beauty problem on which we follow the hands off policy strictly is that of acne. We're not likely to change, either.

Our answer to the question: "What cream will cure acne?" is that we don't know. We even admit to doubting like everything that any cream or preparation will cure acne.

We have only one bit of advice for the man or woman suffering from acne, or for the perturbed parents of the youth who shows the symptoms, and that is that a physician be consulted. He, in turn, might recommend a dermatologist, which will be all to the good. But the sufferer, most emphatically, should not tinker around with freak diets or so-called cures in the form of preparations unless the doctor in charge recommends those preparations specifically.

Beauty Adviser Urges All Sufferers to Consult Doctor.

Acne is a serious skin disorder, as much for its phychological aspects as well as its physical ones, especially for the youngster. It can be cured, and it can be averted. It's a mistake for parents to feel that youngsters will outgrow it. That's taking a chance with the child's complexion and peace of mind, as well.

We recently have received countless inquiries from readers for the names of preparations that will cure it, or to be used in its treatment. We're not giving any. In this we are bowing respectfully to the medical profession. We believe it lies in their province. And we'd feel that we were doing our good deed for the day if we could make every acne sufferer feel as we do.

Incidentally, we had better add that we do not recommend or comment on physicians or dermatologists. One's own family physician is the one to be consulted.

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

Woman's Club Art Show Jury Proves Courage

Retains Three Paintings, One Miniature Out of Group Submitted.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE drastic action taken by the jury for the members' show in the Chicago Woman's club recently might well be followed by juries for other exhibitions. Edmund Giesbert, Clara MacGowan, and Harrison Becker retained three paintings and one miniature out of the group of work submitted for the exhibition. There is a great deal to be said for such clarity of purpose and magnificent elimination. Some of the moral fiber which sustained those three could be wished into the minds and souls of, for example, Art institute juries, where a holding to first principles of art would work wonders.

The Chicago artists and vicinity exhibition is closing today in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. Repeated visits have disclosed that barring the more numerous fine paintings by such artists as Walter Krawiec, Pauline Palmer, Frank F. Dudley, Oskar Gross, Louis Grell, Rudolph F. Ingerle, Arnold E. Tuttle, Zsissly, Ivan L. Lorraine Albright, Frank J. Cavencky, Holger W. Jensen, Nina K. Griffin, and Joseph Allworthy, with various others that at once spring into view as one walks the galleries, there are many pictures there which have no business in a professional show.

Success of Students Discourages Teachers.

The jury was extremely lenient. There is a certain proportion of student work in the exhibition and it brings up the thought that catering to students is not an altogether good or wise thing on the part of the Art institute. For several years the cry has gone up at repeated exhibitions in the museums: "My students' work was accepted, mine rejected." Chicago painters who are teaching in the school of the Art institute and in other Chicago schools have voiced the cry. Scarcely a teacher has not had this experience. It has even befallen such brilliant painters as John Storrs.

The result is that the students, some of them, think themselves better artists than their teachers and rather think themselves, indeed, above the need of any schooling. Gertrude Abercrombie, whose stiff and shallow "There on the Table," was awarded the Joseph N. Eisendrath prize in the current Chicago Artists' show, has never studied art at all. She is a modern and her pictures appear regularly in various exhibitions. We know how good she is, but we wonder how much better she might be if she studied.

Does Art Institute School Belittle Skill?

The number of students in the Art institute school is fewer than it might be and many of the instructors have been cut to one-third their time [page Postmaster Farley], with, naturally, a two-thirds cut in salary. Might it not be true that the official stressing by Director Robert B. Harshe of new note art with the consequent promotion of childish, unskilled, and naive painting has a great deal to do with the attitude of the younger generation? Why should they work to master the fundamentals of drawing and painting when neither good drawing nor painting is counted among the essentials in modern art?

A case in point of how little is needed to win an Art institute prize today may be found in the awarding to Lester O. Schwartz, a student of the school, of a prize for his "Young Chorus Girl." The painting is a résumé of the weaker points in modern French art. It smacks of Matisse a little and was, probably, executed in the class conducted by Francis Chapin. It has the Chapin nonchalance. As an illustration of what is rewarded in contemporary art circles it could scarcely be bettered. That this should be so is the tragedy of the Art institute art school.

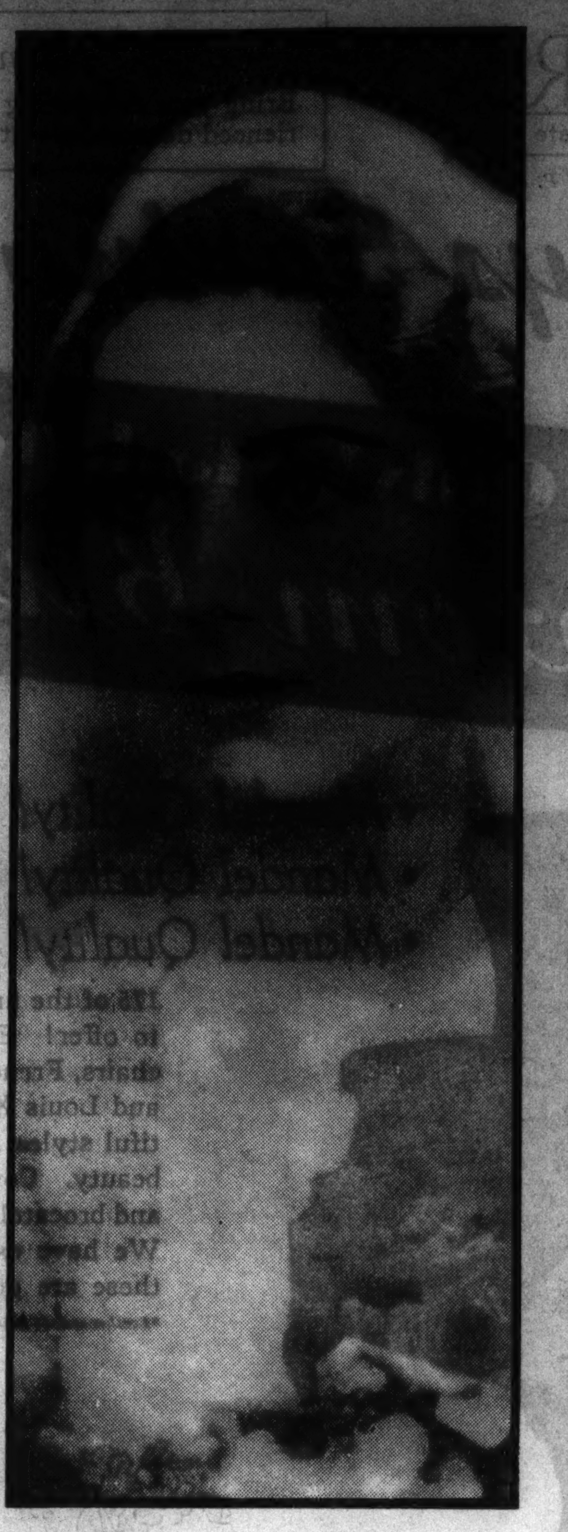
Another splendid exhibit has been placed in the Garfield Park Art galleries by the Chicago Art institute. The first exhibit held here was so unusually fine, including as it did several of the paintings given to the Art institute by the Friends of American Art, that one wonders whether it could not be shown intact in the museum. It seems a pity that these beautiful paintings must return to the storeroom. It certainly seems as though with the many galleries in the Art institute space might be contrived for a changing exhibit of those works of art which are now in the basement.

There are early important portraits by Healy in the Art institute basement. There are portraits of previous museum directors, one of Mr. French by Louis Betts, for example, that is important. These could be shown. A sequence of Chicago art as it affected the growth of the Art institute might prove instructive and most interesting. The time seems to have come when a wide public must be appealed to for the financial success of the museum. Chicago, apparently, is tiring of having the museum run as an object lesson to alien museum directors and curators.

Customs Officers Again Can't Decide What's Art.

The Museum of Modern Art in New York is in quite another category from that of Chicago's Art institute. The Museum of Modern Art is exactly what its name implies. There is no need there for anything but modern art, and surely by now we all know what modern art is. The United States customs is again having difficulties in admitting modern sculpture as art. The sculpture looks less like sculpture than it does like plumbing fixtures and raw material, so, today [the story was told last week], a shipment of modern sculpture is being held for duty. President Goodyear of the museum is arranging to have the exhibit enter the country under bond, for which he must pay a heavy and unrecoverable premium. To describe just one piece: "'Relief in Painted Wood' consists of a three foot square chunk of unfinished plank to which has been nailed another piece of indeterminate shape. On the latter, painted white, there are driven several dozen fence staples, all rusty." The story says Mr. Goodyear had no comment to make on the relief.

It seems impossible that any one anywhere should have a favorable comment to venture on such defamation of sculpture. And much of modern painting is in the same class. A strong stand should be taken against the perverse and degenerate doggerel being palmed off on us today in the name of art.



HONEYMOON IN MEXICO

Mrs. W. Edwin Stanley Jr., the former Edith Behr, was one of the loveliest of the many fashionable brides who have been married in St. Chrysostom's church in Dearborn parkway. The daughter of the Benjamin Leslie Behrs and the son of the W. Edwin Stanleys were married on Jan. 11 and left for Mexico immediately after a reception at the Casino.

Many Chicagoans in Vacation Colony at Sea Island, Ga.

SEA ISLAND, GA. Mr. and Mrs. James Scott Kemper, 76 Locust road, Winnetka, are at Sea Island until after April 1. Rosemary Kemper and her sister, Mildred, are to join their parents at Sea Island for their spring vacation from Smith. The Kempers have taken a cottage on the grounds of the cottage colony. James Kemper Jr., whose engagement to Eleanor Kirkland was announced just after Christmas, is not planning to join his parents in Georgia during the between quarters vacation at the Harvard law school. Plans for the Kirkland-Kemper wedding are still indefinite.

Another Chicagoan, Charles A. Tilt, who is spending the winter at the famed coastal hotel, the Cloister, bagged two of the finest turkeys of the season. The total of gobblers shot this season on the Sea Island hunting preserve by far outnumbers that of last season. Chicago visitors to Sea Island have been showing their skill at skeet shooting of late. Mr. Tilt recently scored several high totals of twenty-four and twenty-five, while Donald S. Boynton, who with Mrs. Boynton is vacationing at Sea Island, totaled several high scores. Other Chicago visitors at the Cloister include William J. Alexander, George Wittbold, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jernegan, and Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Thomson of Oak Park. Charles F. Henning of Glencoe and Arthur S. Cable of Chicago were recent visitors. Peter Cable, a student at Harvard, spent several days with his father.

Tennis enthusiasts had the pleasure of watching a match played between Jess Baker, professional of the Jekyll Island club, and Martin J. Simmons, Sea Island professional.

Lovers of the bridle paths find picturesque trails leading to many places full of historic consequence. The ruins of Fort Frederica, established by Gen. Oglethorpe in 1736 to aid against the attacks of the Indians and Spaniards may be reached by trails under moss-hung oaks and pines.

Mrs. Maxfield Parrish, an authority in America on Afro-American folk songs, recently sponsored a song recital given by group of descendants of plantation slaves. Unspoiled by outside influence, these island singers present the songs of their ancestors much in the manner they were sung in the colonial days.

Art Notes

The Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors is continuing its unusually fine exhibition another week in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue.

The Arts club opened two exhibitions last Tuesday. Work by Elie Lascaux and Francisco Bores may be found there. Both are moderns.

The Ackermann galleries announce a particularly interesting exhibit for March. Drawings and etchings by Kerr Eby, entitled "The Tragedy of the War," will be placed on view March 6 and continue to March 25. The exhibit aroused enormous attention in New York. The etchings and drawings are a protest against war by illustrating the horrors of war.

Sudduth Goff is showing a group of recent portraits in the Chicago Woman's club Tudor gallery the first two weeks in March. The portraits have just been shown with marked success in Evanston.

The Fifteenth International Water Color exhibition will open at the Art institute on March 12 to run to May 10. Cameron Booth, Edmund Giesbert, and Gustaf Dalstrom composed the jury of selection.

Imaginative paintings by Julius Moessel are on view in the Findlay galleries, 424 South Michigan avenue, under the auspices of the Neoterics. The exhibit will continue to March 14. It is unusual and interesting. Mr. Moessel is unique in the line he takes. He is a splendid colorist and a fine craftsman.

Rules of Introductions Given by Etiquet Editor

Miss Bartlett will be glad to answer questions pertaining to etiquet and correct social behavior. For a personal reply, inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your letter.

By Helen Bartlett.

IT has been a year and a half since we devoted this space to the subject of the eitquet of introductions. This is one chapter of the book that is extremely popular because the rules are put to daily use. And, consequently, it is a chapter which it is wise to repeat from time to time. One's introducing technique, depending on its state of perfection, will strengthen or weaken one's claims to a social education. A picture of grace or awkwardness can be painted just by the manner in which introductions are made or the way one responds to them.

The simpler the introduction the easier and the better for all concerned.

On formal occasions the word "present" is preferable. "Miss Martin, may I present Mr. Howard?" On other occasions, less formal and stilted, the word is simply understood rather than spoken and the introduction takes this form: "Miss Martin, this is Mr. Howard." Or, even more simple than that: "Miss Martin, Mr. Howard"—just the two names, but, of course, in the proper sequence.

In regard to the proper sequence of names, the first rule is that a man always is presented to a woman. This means that the woman's name should be mentioned first and then that of the man who is being presented to her. The only exception is when the man is the President of the United States, a royal personage, or a dignitary of the church. In such cases the woman is introduced to the man.

Another rule is that the younger person always is presented to the older if both are of the same sex. There also is a custom that married women take precedence over unmarried women. This rule may be observed if the women in such a case are approximately of the same age. If it so happens that the unmarried woman is much older than the married one, she should be given the precedence. One variation of this rule is that when there is a guest of honor at a tea or reception, every one present is introduced to her—old, young, distinguished, or what not.

A man introduces his wife, and a woman her husband, to a social equal as John or Mary, "my husband" or "my wife." The titles Mr. Brown and Mrs. Hale are used when one is speaking to servants or employés.

Usually men shake hands with each other upon introduction, but there are no rules about it, either for men or for women. Hand shaking is a spontaneous gesture of friendliness which some people, because of more genial disposition, practice more than others who are naturally more reticent and formal. Men aren't supposed to offer to shake hands with a woman unless she proffers her hand first. But if a man should extend his hand to a woman, she must accept it.

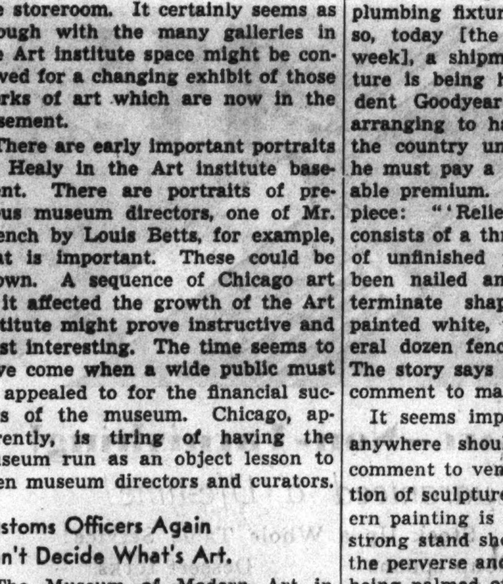
USE POWDER



100% Cleansing Properties
Twice that of tooth paste
Contains No Grit or Pumice
Cannot possibly scratch the softest enamel
Outlasts Tooth Paste 2 to 1

Do as your dentist does—

when he cleans your teeth

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dentists everywhere recommend Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used. Dr. Lyon's cleans off all stains and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

Free from all grit or pumice, Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums and the least possible tooth decay.

Powder leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure. Once you use powder you will never go back to tooth paste. People by the thousands are changing daily.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

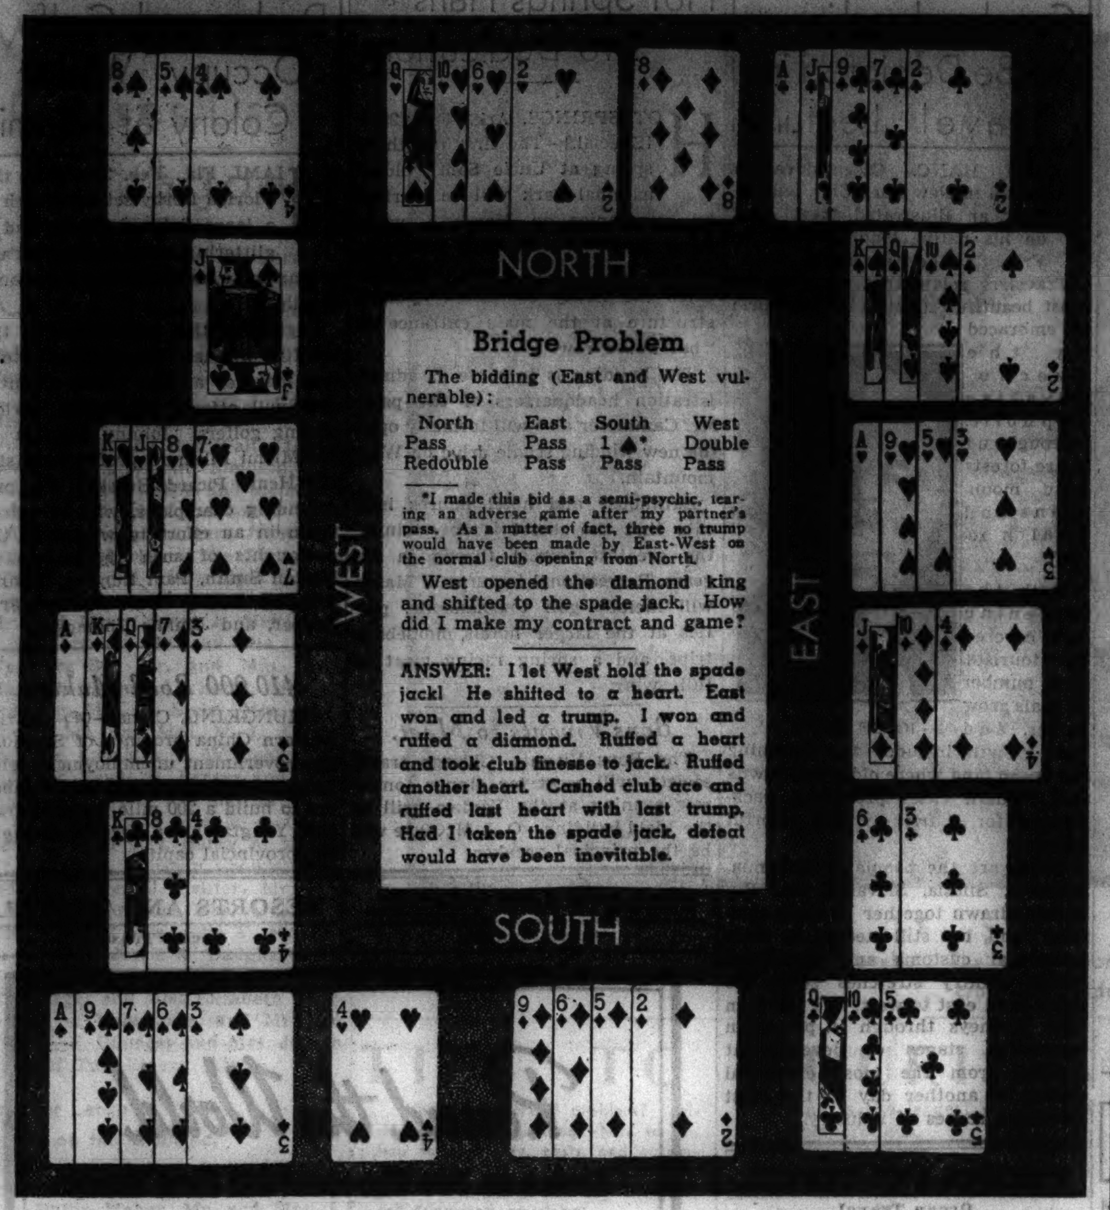
Contract According to Culbertson



Bridge Problem

The bidding (East and West vulnerable):

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠*	Double
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

*I made this bid as a semi-psychic, fearing an adverse game after my partner's pass. As a matter of fact, three no trump would have been made by East-West on the normal club opening from North.

West opened the diamond king and shifted to the spade jack. How did I make my contract and game?

ANSWER: I let West hold the spade jack! He shifted to a heart. East won and led a trump. I won and ruffed a diamond. Ruffed a heart and took club finesse to jack. Ruffed another heart. Cashed club ace and ruffed last heart with last trump. Had I taken the spade jack, defeat would have been inevitable.

Hesitation as a Bluff Deemed Unethical

By ELY CULBERTSON

ETHICS and etiquet, as used in a general social sense, are loose terms, variously defined according to era and locality. In their special bridge connotation their meaning is much more definite, which is fortunate for those players who conscientiously try not to offend.

It is a curious fact that the etiquet of the game is much better understood and observed than are the ethics. Everyone knows, for instance, that it is impolite for the dummy to leave his chair and hover over the declarer's shoulder. Why should there be such widespread misconception as to ethics?

I believe that the erstwhile great American pastime of poker has cast an unfortunate influence. In poker every man is on his own and misinformation to the numerous adversaries is not only fair but quite logical. Bluffing is the life and spirit of the game. Not so in bridge. The mechanics of bridge provide legitimate channels for the transmission of information—but it must be clearly understood that this transmission must take the form of an open broadcast, with every player having the privilege of listening in. Thus any bid or any play that can reach only the partner is per se unfair. Most players understand this as a generality but are unable to appreciate its nicer applications. Let us consider a typical provocative case:

NORTH
A J 10 9
WEST 6 4 — EAST K
SOUTH
Q 8 7 5 3 2

The only suit in question is the trump suit, which is shown. South is playing a game or slam contract. He leads the queen of trumps and West hesitates! He knows he is bluffing—that he cannot cover—and East, his partner, knows it, too. But the declarer cannot know it and is fooled into finessing! Is that fair?

Most certainly it is not. The argument that declarer is trying to take advantage of a hesitation, and that therefore if he is deluded he has only himself to blame, is simply quibbling. Declarer is not in position to take advantage—West is! Declarer's problem is difficult enough without West's bluff. Left to his own devices, South would probably finesse and lose legitimately to the singleton king; West has no right whatsoever to complicate matters without taking the slightest risk himself.

There are innumerable cases where a hesitation is legitimate and unavoidable. Suppose you are West, defending a no-trump contract, and this situation comes up:

NORTH
A J 10 7
WEST K 8 3 2 — EAST
Q

The queen is led, and your problem is whether or not to cover. You must consider alternate possibilities: South may have the queen and only one small card, or the queen and at least two others. In the first case you need not cover—your king cannot be led through often enough to be picked up. And the position of the nine, whether in South's or partner's hand, is a vital consideration. All this takes time—and you are not bluffing, therefore you should think about it. You are not giving yourself away (as many players feel); without thought on your part, obviously the finesse will still be taken. You will neither aid nor hinder the declarer, and this makes your hesitation legitimate.

I hope I have done something to explain why "bluff hesitations" are not ethical. Bridge is too grand a game to be besmirched with petty larceny!

An angry bridge player is certainly no rare sight. I have no doubt that a pebble dropped from a stratosphere balloon at any hour from three in the afternoon up to midnight would strike a bridge player in the very act of raving and wildly gesticulating at his partner. But recently I witnessed a rage that transcended any I had previously seen. Incidentally, I might add that the incensed party had more than a little provocation.

In a rubber game North and South were vulnerable when this rather startling hand was dealt:

NORTH
♠ 6 5 2
♥ 10 7 2
♦ 7 4 3 2
♣ 6 5 3

WEST	EAST
♠ 10 7 4 3	♠ —
♥ 9 6	♥ 5 4 3
♦ A K 10 9 5	♦ Q J 8 6
♣ K 8	♣ Q J 10 9 7 4

SOUTH
♠ A K Q J 9 8
♥ A K Q J 8
♣ A 2

West was the dealer and bid one diamond. North passed, and East attempted to shut out South with four diamonds. Not unnaturally, South refused to be shut out. He made the excellent cue bid of five diamonds—the only conceivable bid on his powerhouse. West passed, and poor North, after unhappily staring at his cards, bid five hearts. East passed, and South carefully considered the situation. It was apparent that if North held four hearts of any denomination, unless either opponent also held four (which would necessitate drawing all of North's along with the opponents'), the trumps could be drawn and the spade suit would offer an excellent chance for North to discard down to a singleton club, with a trump left with which to ruff South's only losing card. True, North might hold too many spades and clubs for this plan to work, but all in all the prospects for a vulnerable grand slam were extremely good. South therefore made the unimpeachable bid of seven hearts.

A glance at the hand reveals that there was absolutely no play for the contract. With five trumps missing, one opponent had to have at least three, and in order to draw these, North's hand also was denuded of trumps. The deuce of clubs could never find a haven.

South's first bellow shook the ceiling.

"What the deuce do you mean by bidding a three-card suit?" he screamed.

"Good grief, what could I bid with that hand?" quavered North. "If I had bid five no trump I would have been forcing a slam!"

"Very clever of you to figure that out!" sneered South. "But were you really so darn dumb that you thought, after my terrific cue bid at the level of five-odd, vulnerable, I would tamely pass to a five-heart response? If five was satisfactory to me, don't you imagine I could have bid a suit over four diamonds? What right had you, who, I assume, hadn't seen my hand, to try so hard to stave off a slam bid that you were willing to lie about your holding? It was a million to one that I was merely finding out what suit to select for a small or grand slam—and you certainly did help me select it!"

"Well, suppose I had bid five no trump over five diamonds—what would you have bid then?"

South looked at him as at some particularly loathsome specimen of deep-sea life before he answered: "O, I might have been content with a laydown small slam in spades."

Each Monday in The Daily Tribune Mr. Culbertson writes a bridge article especially for beginners. Articles for more advanced players on other days.

Today's Questions

Question: What are the requirements for a no-trump overcall of an opponent's suit bid?

Answer: You should have the same values as for an opening bid of one no trump, but with a certain stopper in opponent's bid suit.

Question: Is a jump overcall of an opening bid forcing?

Answer: No—it is merely a strong urge.

March

By Eleanor Jewett.

And now, perhaps, will winter cold
Retreat into its farthest lair,
And blustering winds sweep back the snow
And lay the frozen gardens bare.

Across a sky of sudden blue
Great clouds of blazing white will pass,
And sun will thaw the frosted earth
And make it ready for the grass.

We cannot answer for each day
But this we know to be in store—
The little lambs of spring will play,
The lion will lie down once more.

Queen Mary to Be Hostess for King, Official Report

LONDON

It has been learned from official sources that Queen Mary will undertake the duties of hostess for King Edward when the court mourning ends in September. However, she will not live at Buckingham palace but at Marlborough house. At the moment she is making plans to transfer her personal belongings.

It is understood that the duke and duchess of York will go to York house, St. James's palace, whenever the king decides to remove to Buckingham palace. Meanwhile, constitutional lawyers have under consideration the necessity of asking parliament to pass a bill naming Princess Elizabeth as second in succession to the throne.

This week, the house of commons committee will begin its revision of the civil list which governs the payments allotted to the crown and the royal family. At the beginning of King George's reign, he was allowed $2,350,000, but at the time of the 1931 crisis he voluntarily reduced this by $250,000. It is expected that this will be restored.

There is a large income from the hereditary estates of the crown and it is from this amount that the civil list is taken. In 1933 the income from crown lands was $4,050,000 in excess of the civil list.

British Princess' Herd of Cattle Sold at Auction

LONDON

One of England's finest herds of Guernsey cattle was sold by auction recently. The animals were the property of the late Princess Victoria, sister of the late King George. The total amount received was about $12,000 for 45 head of cattle. The finest cow brought over $500. Many of the great breeders of the country were present bidding, as well as the Wye Agricultural college. The stock all bears the name "Iver": Iver Golden Girl, Iver Golden Lily, etc.

Winter Colony at Palm Beach Promotes Art

THE Society of the Four Arts in Palm Beach, Fla., is off to a flying start. It was founded this last January by a group of Palm Beach winter residents for the benefit of the people of Florida and for their pleasure. Every one in the state is invited to join in the functions and exhibitions of the society. People are urged to come in as professionals, amateurs, students, or critics. The society plans to establish a permanent gallery and an academy of fine arts.

The personnel of the Society of the Four Arts, although it includes the names of socially and financially prominent persons, is restricted for the most part to men and women who have distinguished themselves as painters, sculptors, musicians, writers, architects, decorators, and curators. The first exhibit held by the society was of old masters. The second exhibition, which will run from March 1 to March 15, will cover in a comprehensive fashion the field of modern art. Paintings selected and sponsored by the Museum of Modern Art in New York are being hung. Picasso, Matisse, Braque, Leger, Gris, Klee, Dufy, Utrillo, etc., make up the representative twentieth century group.

Maude Howe Elliott, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, is honorary president of the Four Arts society. Others on the board include Mme. Louise Homer, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dillman, Dr. Edmund LeRoy Dow, Marion Sims Wyeth, Mrs. Lorenzo Woodhouse, Dr. George A. Waterman, Mrs. Frederick Guest, Dr. Daniel J. McCarthy, and Mrs. George A. McKinlock.

Several private individuals are lending paintings. Among them are Mrs. McKinlock, Mrs. Charles Harrington Chadwick, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lewisohn, Walter P. Chrysler Jr., Mrs. Frederick Johnson of New York, and Philip Goodwin.

Trains in Java Operated Only in the Daylight

Native Workers Won't Stay Awake, and Earthquakes Add to Danger.

By Mason Warner.

BATAVIA, Java, N. E. I.—The government owned and operated railroads of Java run no trains after dark. That is because native workers will not stay awake at night and there is danger in operating trains after dark in a country where earthquakes, volcanoes, and heavy rains contribute to track displacements and accidents. "Slower and safer" appears to be the motto of the state. Natives are unreliable, particularly in the maintenance of way department. They will not resist sleep when on night duty.

Java is traversed from east to west by a chain of mountains, among which are 113 volcanoes, with five or six active and the rest quiescent, but the inactivity of many is suspected of being only temporary, and if they break forth with eruptions at any time it will be no surprise.

Beautiful, but Monotonous.

There are two crack trains a day, one going east and the other west. The Java express makes the 516 mile run from Sourabaya to Batavia in a little less than thirteen hours. The scenery along the way is varied enough to keep interest from lagging, for no matter how flat the plain or plateau you may be traveling, always in sight in the distances are towering mountains that cleave the horizon in sawtooth array. From one end of the island to the other, however, the natives present virtually the same views, and, as the native costumes are dirty, dull, drab, and lacking in color, the Javan country scene tends to become monotonous. There are bright effects, of course. There always are in the tropics. But after your hundredth brilliant display of clustered groups of scarlet poinsettias and gorgeous stands of magenta and purple bougainvillea blossoms your enthusiasm for the beautiful wanes.

The Dutch in the East Indies do not wear the white cork helmets or the brown pith topees affected by other Europeans in China and India, but prefer the ordinary soft felt hat as a protection against the tropical sun's grueling rays. The citified natives think they look well in helmets [which they do not] and it follows that only helmets worn by dandified Malays and tourists dot Javan city street scenes. Natives in the country look better and less comic in their wide brimmed conical straw hats and sarongs.

Not Much to See or Do.

There really is not very much for the world traveler to see in Batavia. The city's history dates back for more than 300 years, but today the original settlement is divided into two centers—the old town, now known as Batavia-Centrum, and Weltevreden, where most European residents live.

Weltevreden is a modern city, and here are situated the palace of the governor general of the Netherlands East Indies, the best hotels, many imposing private mansions, government departmental buildings, and the office buildings of great commercial institutions, including the headquarters of the K. P. M. [Royal Navigation company]. The ships of this company make regular calls at all the far-flung ports of the East Indies, whether or not cargo or passenger patronage pays a profit for regular service. They say that is why rates are so high; the profitable ports of call must help to bear the expense of the nonprofit service to out of the way places.

A Gruesome Warning to Revolutionists.

History tells us Peter was a half-caste insurrectionist who attracted so considerable a following that it was necessary to behead him to put an end to his efforts to overthrow the Dutch rulers. He planned to massacre all Europeans, but his plot was exposed by a native girl and he and his chief aids were decapitated [in 1722]. His skull, with an appropriate inscription, is displayed as a warning to all who may be inclined to follow his lines of thought today. It is a gruesome exhibit, but one questions its effectiveness in quelling traitorous designs against the government, and that is the only excuse for its prominent display.

The distance from Batavia to Buitenzorg is thirty-six miles, about an hour and a half by train or motor, and Buitenzorg is well worth a visit, for the great botanical gardens, founded in 1817, are unsurpassed in the collection of tropical specimens of flora and fauna.

The trees in the extensive gardens present an amazing panorama of oriental and far eastern growths. One tree sends out great limbs—or rather shoots—six to eight inches in diameter, clean and bare of smaller branches, for 200 feet. These great branches go from one tree to another, then come down to the ground for another rooting, and start out again for the top of another tree. They make ideal walks for monkeys.

Nature's Trap for Thirsty Bugs.

Another tree grows from an ordinary flower pot to a height of eighteen or twenty feet and sends down shoots that take root in the ground to act as supports for the spreading branches. These tendrils look like tent poles; they have no bark and are as smooth as if turned in a lathe. Then there are plants that grow around and around a tree until it is strangled, and trees that have cups that catch the rain and hold water in cuplike leaves to attract insects, and then close down a trap that captures and kills the thirsty bugs.

There are exhibits of snakes and stuffed monkeys galore in the botanical gardens, and wonderful showings of orchids in the open air and in conservatories. And the huge skeleton of a blue whale taken off the south coast of Java. It measures 88 feet long, and its capacity in the middle makes scoffers at the Jonah and the whale story pause and consider. Belly space no less than eleven feet wide, ten feet long, and nine feet high is provided between the mammoth circlelike ribs. A "rice tafel" could have been managed with ease.

ABSORBING HEALTH AND SUNBEAMS IN THE SOUTHLAND

Not the latest in nudist colonies, but rather a few beauties at ease in a sunbath pavilion at the city solarium in Orlando, Fla.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

A COMPLETE sellout is anticipated for this year's Salzburg festival, said R. F. Mattesich, American manager of the Austrian state tourist department, in Chicago last week. Mr. Mattesich was here on his annual visit to the steamship agencies. He announced that the Salzburg celebration would be held July 25 to Aug. 31, that the Bruckner festival would be held in Linz from July 18 to July 21, and that the Vienna festival was scheduled for June 7 to June 21. He pronounced the Passion plays at Thiersee unique in their medieval character and sincerity of production.

To meet the heavy demand for spring cruises, the Swedish American line has decided to send its Kungsholm on a pre-Easter trip from New York to Nassau and Havana, starting March 28 and ending April 6, and an Easter trip from New York to Port au Prince, Haiti; Kingston, Jamaica, and Havana, starting April 9 and ending April 20. This was announced yesterday by the company's Chicago office.

Among the other Easter time Caribbean cruises scheduled are those of the Canadian Pacific's Empress of Australia, leaving on a ten day trip to Jamaica and Havana April 9; the Cunard-White Star's Britannic, under charter by Raymond-Whitcomb for a trip to Nassau and Bermuda from March 27 to April 5, and the Hamburg-American Line-North German Lloyd's Columbus, which will sail on April 10 for a nine day journey to Port-au-Prince, Kingston, and Havana.

A. P. Vander Burch, Chicago manager of the Holland-America line, said the bookings for the Statendam's West Indies and Bermuda cruises had been so large that the company had called in its Volendam to help relieve the pressure. This spring the Volendam will go on six day cruises to Bermuda, leaving March 21 and March 28, and a nine day trip to Bermuda and Nassau, leaving April 9, with Easter Sunday to be spent in Bermuda.

In last Wednesday's TRIBUNE the rate reductions recently made on many of the trans-Atlantic liners were set forth, but those on the Holland-America ships were omitted. The new minimum cabin class rates for the off season on these liners are: Statendam, $167; Rotterdam, $149, and Volendam and Veendam, each $130.

Air line representatives from all parts of the United States met in Chicago Wednesday, with development of vacation travel a major item of discussion.

United Air Lines announced it is going to stress the vacation appeal, in the expectation of attracting to its midcontinent route persons who are traveling for pleasure in addition to those flying on business missions.

Czecho-slovakia to Be Depicted in Travel Lecture

JOSEF HANC, Czechoslovakian consul in New York City, will deliver an illustrated travel talk on his native land at 11 a. m. Friday at the Fair store.

Travelers relate that some of the most beautiful country in the world is embraced by the Czechoslovakian republic. Throughout it are forests and mountains and health resorts.

JOSEF HANC.

With the widening field covered by tourists, the number of goals grow larger, and this growth includes the charming European land where old world towns and modern cities provide a background for a friendly and colorful people.

These are the people of Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, Slovakia, and Ruthenia, drawn together by their common bond, but still steeped in their individual customs and traditions. Their country stretches some 600 miles from east to west, and the man who journeys through it passes in succession stages of development leading from the most elemental scenes of another day to the most advanced scenes of industry.

Hot Springs Plans Two Dedications

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 29.—[Special.]—The first month of spring at Uncle Sam's oldest national park will be marked by ceremonies on March 5, when Arno B. Cammerer, chief executive of the national park service, dedicates the newly completed Spanish structure at the main entrance of "bathhouse row."

The building is to serve as administration headquarters of the park. Mr. Cammerer also will formally open the new winding scenic drive on West mountain.

Bathhouse and hotel figures indicate that the resort is entertaining the greatest tourist throng in six years. Recreational features in March will include golf tournaments, parties at the larger hotels, horseback trips, and a spring racing meet in full swing.

Bons Vivants to Meet.

The Bons Vivants, Chicago travel society, will meet for dinner tomorrow evening at the Yankee grill in the Field building. O. J. McClure will be the principal speaker.

Derby and Golf Occupy Winter Colony at Miami

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 29.—With the Florida Derby set for March 7, a large field of horses and a glittering social contingent are preparing to make the day a seasonal highlight.

Beginning the following day the twelfth annual international four ball matches at the Miami Country club will attract 32 of the world's leading golfers. Johnny Revolta of the Miami Biltmore professional staf and Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., pro, defending champions, will be paired again in an effort to withstand the onslaughts of such shotmakers as Horton Smith, Paul Runyan, Tommy Armour, Bobby Cruickshank, Harry Cooper, and Jimmie Thompson.

410,000 Road Makers.

CHUNGKING, China.—(AP)—In this western China province of Szechuan the government unemployment relief program includes using 410,000 laborers to build a 200 mile highway from this Yangtze river port to Chengtu, the provincial capital.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations, to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

When will Jasper Park lodge, in Jasper National park, open for the season? What are the accommodations there? M. B.

On June 13. The lodge comprises a series of bungalow and chalet type buildings providing for 650 guests. There is a heated outdoor swimming pool. Jasper park is situated in Alberta and is the largest of Canada's scenic playgrounds.

Did the Italian Line join the other trans-Atlantic steamship companies in abolishing the first class designation in favor of cabin class? F. W.

No. The Italian Line is not a member of the North Atlantic conference. However, effective Feb. 29, it reduced its rates for first class passage. The minimum on the Rex and the Conte di Savoia is now $225, and that on the Vulcania, the Saturnia, and the Roma is $195.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

THE phrase, "tourists' paradise," has been greatly overworked in recent years, but if there's any earthly place entitled to that distinction it is Bermuda—if for no other reason than that when the traveler reaches those islands he is not besieged by sidewalk salesmen of gimcracks and curios, by divers after pennies, or by beggars seeking silver. In this age of commercialism the freedom from such pests is a real relief.

● Bermuda is one spot where the tourist is sought after and then not despised after he gets there. Tourists are the islanders' business, and, logically enough, the Bermudians like their visitors. Their's is a country meant for sightseeing, and directly or indirectly nearly everybody there is concerned with the trade. No wonder they feel friendly.

The first evidence of the air of hospitality comes when the liner docks in Hamilton harbor. All the natives not otherwise engaged are at the pier. They're as interested in new arrivals as are the natives of any small town in America. But they don't try to sell them anything. Their scenic attractions and sports facilities sell themselves. They restrain themselves as long as the visitor stays, and they're down at the dock again to see him off when he sails for home.

● It has been estimated that in the next three months Bermuda will welcome more Americans than ever before. It will welcome them to picturesque hotels, coral beaches, superb golf greens, and white stone roadways. It will take advantage of the fact that troubles in other parts of the world are driving more and more American travelers to such nearby and peaceful places as the West Indies.

The informal little trains, usually a matter of one or two cars, are now carrying four, five, and even more coaches as they bustle down Front street to the Queen Street terminal. The hotels have imported orchestras to give the visitors the same kind of rhythm they get at home. The stretches of pink beach are at their best. Bicycle liveries have their wares all spruced up and fit for hire by the day or by the week.

● The 30,000 islanders are ready for their guests—they refuse to call them tourists. They see to it that those guests have a memorable time.

Bermuda lies 666 miles—less than two days—southeast of New York. For the Chicagoan wishing to beat a retreat from the snow and the slush there is no better place to go.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use Is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask, whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly, is your family doctor.

Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN, and go by what he says. He will tell you, we are sure, that millions of people take it, year in and year out, without ill effect.

He will tell you, too, that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most "pain" remedies were advised against, by doctors, as upsetting to the stomach. And often, as bad for the heart. Which is food for thought; especially if you seek safe relief as well as quick relief.

BAYER ASPIRIN combines these two factors — quick relief and gentle relief in a scientifically proved way. "Quick relief" because scientists rate it among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And safe relief, because the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly.

You can get it at any drug store — at a new and radically reduced price — 15¢ for a box of 12 tablets — simply by asking for it by its full name "BAYER ASPIRIN." Make it a point to always do this — to ask for Genuine Bayer Aspirin and to see that you get it. There is no longer any reason — thanks to Bayer's present low price — to accept an unknown preparation in place of Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

Why Hollywood FEARS the second day

IT'S no secret out in Hollywood that more than one famous star has lost her job because of constipation.

That's why you should follow Hollywood's example and not let a second day pass without coming to nature's aid with a beauty laxative.

Olive Tablets are popular in Los Angeles, and everywhere else, because they are dependable, mild and non-habit-forming. And because they gently help Nature restore normal action in the intestines.

Keep a box handy on the bathroom shelf. Three sizes—15¢, 30¢, 60¢. At all druggists.

Yes, this Revolutionary Pearl Beauty holds 102% More Ink and shows you when to refill

Chester Brooks Kerr, assignment editor of the YALE NEWS, bet that his friend's Parker Vacumatic wouldn't write twice as many words on a single filling as the old-style pen that Kerr himself used.

"But I lost," said Yale-man Kerr to the Yale News photographer, "and now I take back everything I said. For my friend filled his Parker, and I started writing with it.

"When I'd turned out twenty pages of manuscript, I held the pen to the light, expecting to see it about empty. But the ink level was still high in the barrel, so I kept on until I'd written forty pages more. Then I looked again. I looked once more when I'd finished page 100—about 10,400 words. But every time there was still enough ink left for me to continue indefinitely.

"'I give up,' I exclaimed, and called it a day. For I just couldn't make his Parker Vacumatic run dry."

Due to its Visible Ink Supply, 102% GREATER ink capacity, rare and beautiful laminated Pearl style, and its SCRATCH-PROOF Platinum-and-Solid-Gold Point that writes two ways without adjustment:

—the Parker Pen has become a 2 to 1 favorite in leading colleges and universities.

—in America more people prefer it than the next four ranking pens combined!

Feted English Complexions know only this Beauty Care

Only the English, perhaps, take beauty into account in the very offices of government—which is why the fortunate stranger bidden to the gay interlude of Tea on the Terrace at Westminster is often genuinely surprised.

Here dignified Members and Lords of Parliament pause for an hour to welcome some of the world's loveliest visitors. And here, too, is a valuable lesson in English beauty. For the grey old sunny terrace makes a perfect setting for such radiant, fresh young complexions that Government Itself needs pause to admire them! Complexions treated almost always with one of the loveliest, simplest beauty regimes possible . . . that developed by the House of Yardley.

Would you learn it for yourself? A few paragraphs suffice to tell it . . . just as a few moments a day will make it yours.

First, a daily face bath with Yardley's exquisitely gentle English Lavender Soap must never be neglected. It's the best way to keep your skin clear, fresh and glowing.

Then a liberal application of Yardley's snowy English Complexion Cream . . . you'll find it entirely different from any other. (You may also use Yardley's Night Cream, as many Englishwomen do, if your skin is overly dry. And Yardley's Foundation, if you prefer a special powder base.)

Then, the finishing mist of Yardley's English Lavender Powder—a cosmetic treat so fresh and lastingly vital you'll marvel at its beauty power.

A few extra touches, if you wish them—but the main ritual of the English complexion has been accomplished. How wisely, you may quickly realize . . . for Yardley has placed these good things where you may find them at no great cost and very easily. Together with bath things, cosmetics, toiletries and perfumes. In fine stores everywhere. Send for the new booklet CT-2, "Beauty Secrets from Bond Street," to tell you more about them! Address Yardley & Co., Ltd., 620 Fifth Ave. (Rockefeller Center), New York City; 33, Old Bond St., London; and Paris, Toronto, Sydney.

Yardley's English Lavender—the refreshing fragrance that's like no other—in smart containers, priced from 45c to $35. Yardley's English Lavender Powder, in seven glorious shades including delicate English Peach and radiant Gipsy, $1.10. English Lavender Soap, 35c a tablet, large size, and English Complexion Cream, $1.10 ($2.50 for a triple quantity). For skins aged or dried by climate, Yardley's rich, retexturing Night Cream, $1.10, and Yardley's Foundation, in the pale-rose container, at 85c. Yardley's Cream Rouge, 85c, and Indelible Lipstick, $1.10, to finish off!
